TAX ALTERING AIDED MORE THAN ONE IN A FAMILY

For Instance, L. G. Olian's Assessment Was Cut by $100,000 While $20,000 Was Lopped Off That of Abe Magid, His Brother-in-Law.

ANOTHER $20,000 CUT FOR J. KRATZ FOUND

Tax Bills of Wife of Senator Caulfield and of Mrs. J. T. Hayes, Connections by Marriage, Among Those Reduced.

The lightning of tax assessment reduction struck twice in the same place, or in places closely adjacent, in several of the instances of alterations in the Assessor's books, which are to be the subject of a grand jury inquiry and which reduced the sums payable on 80 tax bills by a total exceeding $33,000.

Supposing that some impish mischief-maker wrought the erasures and alterations in the books, the malicious meddler showed an uncanny cunning. For he linked together not only separate assessments under the same person's name, but property held by persons of different names whose families are connected.

For instance, was it not odd that among only 80 tax bills changed, out of the thousands of such bills that are issued, two should have been those of Louis G. Olian and Abe Magid, brothers-in-law? Olian, who is in the waist and dress business, had a reduction of $100,000 in his assessment, by erasure of a numeral, making a cut of $2430 in his tax bill. Magid, in the cloak and suit business at 517 Washington, had a $20,000 assessment cut, which would have saved him $486 in taxes if it had not been discovered. The Magid case is one of those now classed as an "error," there being no indication of a deliberate erasure, so that it might simply have been copied wrong.

Striking Instances.

And there are the Caulfield and Hayes families, connected by the marriage of a son of State Senator and Mrs. William E. Caulfield to a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Hayes. The tax bill of Edith V. (Mrs W. E.) Caulfield was reduced $4000 by an erasure, and the tax bill of Lillie (Mrs. J. T.) Hayes was reduced, by the same amount and in the same way. On another tax bill of James T. and Lillie Hayes, there is a $4000 reduction.

Last year, as shown by the 1922 records, the Caulfield assessment was reduced $4000, just as it was this year. The difference was that last year the property was in the name of William E. Caulfield Jr., the son mentioned, who is the son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Hayes. He is a clerk in the Assessor's office, employed in draughting plats, a work not directly connected with the making out of tax bills.

Less striking, perhaps, but still meriting attention, are the cases of Charles Kratz and John Kratz, brothers, both active in Republican politics in the past, whose assessments were cut $10,000 and $20,000, respectively; David D. Israel, Democratic politician and hotel owner, with two cuts aggregating $131,000; the two assessment reductions of Louis Cohen and Louis Herold and of Helmar and Lena Herold, classed as possible errors in copying; $2000 each; the two reductions of the H. L. Hussmann Refrigerator and Supply Co., totaling $130,000; the three reductions of Edmund R. O'Donnell, $24,000 in all, and that of Mrs. Elizabeth O'Donnell, $10,000; those of Joseph and Minnie Meehan and of Kate and Nellie Meehan, $20,000 and $1900, respectively, and the four reductions of Charles and Anna Kroemeke, $18,000 in all.

Just a Coincidence.

Post-Dispatch reporters sought the views of the persons whose assessments were thus co-incidentally reduced.

Louis G. Olian said he had complained of his assessment, and supposed the reduction was made in response to the complaint. He did not know how to account for the reduction in the assessment of his brother-in-law, Magid. Magid said it was just a coincidence.

State Senator Caulfield said no one ever approached him with any proposal to save him or Mrs. Caulfield money on their tax bills. He said he knew nothing about the two

WHITE SAYS LEADING CITIZENS IN EAST TALK LIKE "MORONS"

New York Wetness Could Be Stopped Over Night if They Willed It, Kansas Editor Says.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—New York cocktails are as dangerous as bombshells, William Allen White of Emporia, Kan., declared today.

The publicist, here to attend meetings of the Rockefeller Foundation and Bok peace award jury, paused to deplore the city's wetness.

"New York could be cleaned up over night if prominent citizens, the leaders who make opinion, would rigorously set their faces against violation in the great houses of the town," he said.

"Here on the Eastern seaboard its the leading citizens who talk like crooks and morons, and some of these bright, blessed days when the West is in its pink splendor—which will look as red as Moscow to Wall Street—when the West, I say, rises up and hoots and jeers at the fourteenth amendment and its protection of property rights, a fat lot of attention we will pay to the New York crowd that has been in rebellion against the eighteenth amendment.

"If we are going to have a Constitution, it cannot be obeyed in spots."

FUGITIVE FROM LEPER COLONY ARRESTED AT HIS HOME HERE

Chinese Admits He Fled From Confinement Camp in Florida Six Months Ago.

Hu Long, 30 years old, a Chinese, living at 804 North Ewing avenue, was arrested at his nome at 9 o'clock last night by order of Chief City Diagnostician Smith, who, after an examination of the man, was led to believe he suffered from leprosy. Smith was taken to city hospital for temporary confinement.

He said that he had been in St Louis for the last six months, having come here after escaping from a lepers' confinement camp in Florida. He said since he has been in St. Louis he has been employed in a Chinese laundry. He admitted being a leper.

Dr. Smith learned of Hu's illness from another physician, who had been asked to treat the man for another malady.

MERCHANT SLAIN BY POLITE ROBBER AS WIFE LOOKS ON

Edmund J. Herold, Brentwood Storekeeper, Fatally Wounded After Wife Gave Cash to Slayer

SHOT WHEN HE CALLED FOR HELP

Request of Woman That She Be Permitted to Keep Part of Money Granted by Holdup Man.

A robber who, a minute before, had made an impression by his apparent politeness, shot Edmund J. Herold, proprietor of a general store in Brentwood, last evening, when Herold called for help. Herold died at 6:30 p. m., 15 minutes after the shooting. The robber escaped.

Herold was in the living room behind the store, at 8500 Manchester road, with his wife and three children, and was tuning in his radio set while waiting for dinner. The bell on the store door rang, indicating that a customer had entered, and Mrs. Herold went into the store.

The customer said he wanted a 5-cent box of matches. Herold followed his wife into the store. Immediately the man displayed a revolver and told Herold to throw up his hands.

Wife Tells of Shooting.

"The man told me to 'throw up my hands, too,'" Mrs. Herold said, in telling her story to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "We both did. Edmund was standing behind the counter, and I was nearer to the cash register, so the man told me to get the money out.

"I opened the cash register, and handed him most of the money, about $20, I think. That was not quite all, and I said 'Let us keep a little, won't you?' He took what I gave him and said, 'That'll be enough.' He seemed very nice about it. There was $3 or $4 left in the register.

"Then he said, 'Come around here,' and my husband went in front of the counter. 'Turn your back,' he said, and Edmund did.

Called for Help.

"The man made a move as if he was going out. Edmund must have thought he was leaving, for he suddenly called, 'Eric!' That is a young man who rooms over the store, Eric Pritz.

"As he called out, the man turned and fired at him, from perhaps eight feet away. My husband fell, and the man looked at him once, then ran out. All my husband said after that was to ask for water."

Mrs. Herold said she did not see or hear any automobile. Her oldest son, Edmund Jr., 15, looked into the store just as the shot was fired, and saw the man leaving.

Mrs. Herold said the man appeared to be 30 to 35 years old, that he was of medium height and wore a tan raincoat, with the collar turned up, and a brown felt hat, flat-shaped. He appeared to have a sandy complexion. He did not appear nervous, and she got the impression that he was experienced in committing robberies.

Robbed Once Before.

The Herold store was held up Nov. 15, 1922, and about $40 was taken. A man was arrested and was identified by Herold, but obtained acquittal through alibi testimony. Herold told his wife that he was threatened with punishment for pressing this case, but it does not appear certain that there was any connection between these threats and last night's robbery and murder.

Herold was 42 years old. His funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon.

At 8:30 p. m., two hours after the robber's flight from the Herold store, a man, whose description resembles that of the Brentwood robber in some particulars, attempted to hold up Ignatius Bickert of 6470 Plymouth avenue, as he crossed Wellington avenue near his home. Bickert disregarded the order to throw up his hands, and walked along, telling the man to "go to hell." The man said, "I don't want to hurt you," in a threatening tone, but Bickert repeated his disdainful remark, and hurried along, and the man did not follow him. Bickert says the man appeared about 25 years old, was of medium height, and had a light overcoat or raincoat, with the collar up, and a gray hat. He displayed a revolver with shining barrel. The police thought it possible that this was the Brentwood robber.

Couple Held After Confession of Strange Disappearance Plot

DOROTHY ANDERSON

QUESTIONED ABOUT DISAPPEARANCE HOAX

Sailstad and Girl Accomplice Confer for Two Hours With District Attorney.

By the Associated Press.

NAPA, Cal., Dec. 8.—Edward J. Sailstad, confessed perpetrator of a disappearance hoax in which he exhumed and burned the body of a friend to make it appear as his own, and his accomplice, Dorothy Anderson, former Chicago cabaret dancer, met for the second time today since their arrest Wednesday night. Both were brought to the office of District Attorney Anglim, who conferred with them for two hours after they had greeted each other affectionately.

The party of officials, which is on the way from Superior, Wis., to return Sailstad and his companion for trial, is expected to arrive tomorrow or Monday. Both have waived extradition.

Miss Anderson, who is being held in the Napa County Infirmary, was said to be more cheerful than on any day since her arest, although the inroads of the tuberculosis from which she is suffering, are becoming more evident. Her appetite is improving, according to the hospital attendants, and she is being kept outdoors as much as possible. They expressed the opinion that constant outdoor life might effect a cure.

AFTER 14 YEARS, MEETS SON HE HAD GIVEN UP FOR DEAD

Robert Stine of Hillsboro, Ill., and Boy Who Ran Away Reunited in Edwardsville.

A father and son met yesterday at Edwardsville after a 14-year separation, during which the father had given up the son for dead.

The father was Robert Stine of Hillsboro, Ill. The son was Albert Stine, who ran away from home after the death of his mother when he was about 10 years old. The son, after residing in various places in Iowa and Missouri, recently came to St. Louis to live and decided to visit an aunt he understood lived in Virden, Ill. He found her and from her learned that he had a small amount coming from the estate of a distant relative. The money had been given to his father to hold under bond for him. The legal matters were in the hands of A. C. Bohn, master in chancery for Madison County, and through him the father was notified of the son's reappearance.

The meeting was arranged for yesterday in Bohn's office at Edwardsville. Stine and the son he had not seen since a child, shed tears on meeting. The son had to return last night to St. Louis, but a further reunion was planned.

DAUDET'S HANDBAG FOUND

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—The police investigating the charge brought by Leon Daudet, Royalist leader, that his son, Philippe, was murdered, discovered today in the home of the anarchist Gruffi, a member of the editorial staff of Le Libertaire, a handbag belonging to young Daudet. They also announced that the youth slept at Gruffi's home the two nights preceding Saturday, Nov. 24, when he was found in a taxi-cab suffering from wounds which resulted fatally. The police attach great importance to their discovery.

CAPT. WATSON GIVEN NEW NAVAL DUTY

Assignment Indicates He Will Not Be Dismissed Because of Destroyer Disaster.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 8.—Captain Edward H. Watson, found guilty by general court martial on charges of unskillful navigation growing out of the loss of seven destroyers and the death of 23 bluejackets at Point Honda on the night of September 8, will not be dismissed from the navy, if indications furnished in navy orders today count for anything.

The navy department today sent orders here that Captain Watson, who commanded the ill-fated destroyer squadron, be assigned to duty as assistant commandant of the fourteenth naval district, with headquarters in Honolulu.

Capt. Watson's attitude at the recent trials here of navy officers concerned in the disaster won him much praise from friends and acquaintances. He quickly assumed all blame, although he said he was not guilty of culpable negligence. He had spent 29 years in the navy without a blemish on his record up to the time of the Point Honda crash.

AMATEUR RADIO ACROSS SEA

First Short Wave Two-Way Contest Between U. S. and England Made.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 8.—Amateur radio established the first short wave two-way communication between England and the United States early this morning when Kenneth B. Warner, secretary of the American Radio League, operating the amateur station 1-MO, here, exchanged messages with the London amateur station 2-KF, operated by J. A. Partridge, an English amateur. Reliable contact was maintained for more than two hours on 100 meters. The English amateur expressed his astonishment by radio that short wave communication could be carried on after the arrival of dawn in England.

NEGRO AND HIS PERSIMMONS

After Taking Supply to White House He Stops Traffic.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Traffic in front of the White House was stopped today by an aged, white-haired negro, who waved down automobiles with a cane.

"I'm the only negro who ever took persimmons to the White House," he shouted after he had brought a long line of cars to a standstill. "You ask those boys who used to ride the ponies. (Referring to the Roosevelt youngsters). The old negro, a Virginian, who has supplied the favorite fruit for the White House for years, had just delivered a consignment for President Coolidge and had decided to take the matter of publicity into his own hands.

JUDGE PUTS HYDE DOWN BUT NOT OUT IN DEMPSEY BOUT

Landwehr Enjoins Police From Obeying Order of Governor to Prevent Exhibition by Champion.

SETS HEARING AFTER BOXER'S APPEARANCE

Possibility That Executive May Ask Higher Court to Make Injunction Decree Ineffective.

A week ago Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight boxing champion, promised to box nine minutes at the Coliseum Tuesday night without remuneration and unwittingly caused a bout between the executive and judicial branches of the State of Missouri over his right to do it.

The result of the preliminary is that Dempsey will appear. So will eleven other boxers of lesser reputation.

Gov. Hyde yesterday ordered President Brockman of the Police Board, to prevent the exhibition, on the ground that it violated the State law against public sparring matches and prize fights. The executive branch of the Government had spoken and the exhibition apparently was doomed.

Judge to the Rescue.

Then the judicial branch was asked for a ruling upon this nine-minute appearance of the champion. The Angelica Physical Culture Club, under whose auspices Dempsey was to appear, appealed to the Circuit Court for an injunction restraining the police and kindred agencies from interfering. Circuit Judge Landwehr granted a temporary restraining order, tieing the hands of the Governor and the police, and the exhibition revived.

The order is returnable in Judge Landwehr's court Thursday morning, which means that the issue will be presented to the judicial branch for a ruling two days after Dempsey has appeared.

Judge Landwehr knows the law, but admits that he does not know boxing. There are some things about this nine-minute exhibition which puzzles him.

Dempsey's Case Not Different.

The judge said to the Post-Dispatch last night:

"It is common knowledge that boxing matches have been held in St. Louis every two weeks for some time. The Governor, with one exception, has not interfered with them. Then the world's champion comes to St. Louis to appear. Apparently, he is not like other boxers. He must be stopped from exhibiting.

"To the law, Jack Dempsey is merely Jack Dempsey. He is allowed the same privileges and subject to the same disabilities as any other person. If others may appear on boxing programs without interference, why is the rule changed when Dempsey is made a part of a program conducted in exactly the same manner as previous programs which went unnoticed?

"The law either permits boxing and sparring exhibitions or it prevents them. It does not legalize some and frown upon others when they are all conducted in exactly the same manner and under exactly the same direction.

Order in Effect Until Thursday.

"I do not see the difference between the appearance of Dempsey in a sparring exhibition at the Coliseum and the appearance of Benny Leonard in a sparring exhibition at a local theater. If one is not permissible, neither is the other. However, I believe that it is a comparatively common practice for boxers to make stage tours and box a short time with a partner.

"I do not know boxing. I attended one match five years ago, and I never have witnessed one since that time. Frankly, I am not interested in them personally. But there is a question of law involved which must be determined by a hearing. The condition of my court docket makes Thursday the earliest possible date upon which I can give the matter a hearing.

"If the boxers are guilty of violating a State law, it will be determined at the hearing that they have no right to the injunction. The restraining order will not protect them from criminal prosecution. But the petition filed in court, I believe, entitles the club sponsoring this event to a restraining order."

Higher Court Might Aid Hyde.

Dispatches from Jefferson City last night indicated that the executive branch of the State government had not yet exhausted its efforts to prevent the exhibition. Gov. Hyde said he had not decid-

"FRAME-UP," ASSERTS ILLINOIS PROSECUTOR, TAKEN IN DRY RAID

JUDGE SENTENCES TWO MISSOURIANS; SAYS HE IS SORRY

Arvil and Oliver Jones of Sedalia Killed Railroad Detective in Wisconsin.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., Dec. 8.—Sentences of 18 and 15 years at hard labor in the State penitentiary at Waupun were passed by Judge C. A. Fowler today on Arvil and Oliver Jones, brothers, of Sedalia, Mo., found guilty by a jury in Circuit Court of having killed Elno Jacobs, Soo Line special agent, in a gun fight in a railroad car in this city early in October.

Their attorney moved for a new trial. This was denied by the Court and notice of appeal was filed.

Judge Fowler, after pronouncing sentence, stepped over and shook hands with the prisoners, saying that no one was more sorry than he that they were going to prison.

"We are all very sorry," said the Judge, "but murder cannot be excused because the persons committing the murder are not naturally vicious. You cannot take it upon yourselves to shoot down an officer because he acted in a foolhardy manner. I hope that you feel that you have had a fair trial. Your attorney feels that you have, for he said so."

District Attorney James Murray also shook hands with the brothers, advising them so to conduct themselves at the penitentiary as to obtain a reduction of time for good behavior and also telling them that if at any time they start proceedings for a pardon he would give them any assistance possible.

In opening his argument for a new trial Attorney O'Brien said that the defendants were ignorant country boys and not gunmen.

He said that they had been permitted to ride through to Fond Du Lac, in the box car, and that then the detective, thinking to make a name for himself by arresting two armed men, attempted to arrest them when the train arrived in the city.

WOMAN BANK ROBBER GETS $1300 IN OHIO HOLDUP

Arrives After Telephoning She Was Coming Around "To Do a Little Business."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 8.—A few minutes after announcing over the phone that she "was coming around to do a little business," a mysterious bobbed-hair woman bandit, about 36, made her second visit to the Ohio Savings and Loan Co., Fostoria, today and escaped with more than $1300, after holding up two girl clerks at the point of a revolver.

The robbery was the sequel to one frustrated two weeks ago and a series of mysterious phone calls by the woman "wishing to transact a little business." The latest call came about 8:15 o'clock this morning, when the woman asked if "Mr. Smith (secretary) was in?" When informed he was not, she asked if the bank was "open for business." It was.

So, in the parting phone conversation, the woman said: "I'm coming around to do a little business."

Stepping into the bank and locking the door behind her, the stranger drew a revolver and commanded the two girl clerks to put their hands up and "make it snappy." Afterordering the girls to face the wall she seized several bundles of bills, $1300 in all, from the front end of the vault.

Warning the girls not to make an outcry for 40 minutes, as there was a male accomplice on the outside on guard against any alarm, she passed out from behind the cage.

Two weeks ago the strange woman called on Carl Smith, secretary of the institution, at night, on the pretext of making a loan. After the door to the bank was closed behind her and Smith she drew a gun and ordered him to give her $500. By a cautious sweep of his hand he attracted Harry Shaw, passing at the time. The woman on that occasion made a hasty withdrawal when Shaw came toward the bank.

Man, 80, Divorces Wife, 14.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Dec. 8.—B. R. Sprayberry, 80 years old, divorced his 14-year-old wife, Susie, here today. Sprayberry testified that his wife abused him and was annoying. According to the petition, they were married March 3, and separated March 25 of this year. The wife signed a waiver of the divorce petition.

State's Attorney of Crawford County, Ill., Accused by Negro Bootlegger of Taking $150 Protection Money, Alleges Liquor Interests Inspire Charge.

SCHOOL GIRL AMONG 10 OTHERS ARRESTED

Little Surprise Expressed at County Seat Over Arrests, Which Result From Investigation That Cost Citizens' League $2000.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DANVILLE, Ill., Dec. 8.—Charles E. Jones, State's Attorney of Crawford County, Ill., arrested at Robinson, Ill., today on charges on conspiracy to violate the liquor laws of the United States, declared here that the charges against him were a "frame-up" with liquor interests as the real factor behind his arrest.

Jones, who gave $5000 bond for his appearance at the March term of Federal Court, was arrested with 10 other persons when United States marshals and prohibition agents, who have been gathering evidence, "moved in" on Crawford County. The Government officials hold an affidavit made by Henry Fant, a negro, confessed bootlegger, stating that he has paid Jones $150 in the last month for protection.

Little Surprise Over Arrest.

Jones declared that Fant was "a cat's paw" for persons who bore him grudges for his activities against prohibition law violators. At Robinson, county seat of Crawford County, it was said, however, that his arrest occasioned little surprise.

Most of the persons arrested were taken on liquor selling charges. Evidence against them was said to have been obtained by Government officers and members of the Citizens' Law Enforcement League of Crawford County.

The league, after spending about $2000 in investigations, laid its findings before the United States District Attorney here last September and asked for co-operation, saying it thought it best not to try to work through local authorities.

Whole Family in Custody.

The Federal officials arrived unannounced Friday in Robinson, a town of about 5000 population, looked over the field and yesterday began the arrests, having bench warrants issued at East St. Louis and here for most of the persons wanted. Only one raid was made, that being on the home of Marion Tharp, a general contractor, where several jugs of liquor are said to have been found.

Tharp, his wife and two daughters, one a school girl, were arrested on bench warrants issued last Wednesday by Federal Judge English at East St. Louis. The wife and daughters are alleged to have sold liquor to customers when Tharp was away.

More Raids Expected.

The prohibition enforcement officers took the Tharp family and several other men arrested in the "clean-up" from Robinson tonight to East St. Louis, where the persons under arrest will be arraigned.

It is understood here that many other bench warrants for suspected bootleggers in this district are to be served and that it is likely the officers will stop at Newtown, county seat of Jasper County, for raids there.

Besides the affidavit of Fant against State's Attorney Jones, four others relating to his alleged participation in liquor law violations are said to be held by Government officers. Fant's sworn statement asserted that Jones bought liquor for his personal use, as well as took bribe money.

Says Jones Agreed to Cut Price.

Fant, who is a washer of automobiles, said in his affidavit that he went to Jones two months ago after he had been told he "could obtain protection." He declares Jones told him his freedom from molestation would cost $10 a week. After two $50 payments early in November, Fant says, Jones agreed to take $25 a week until his "business," which had fallen off, could "improve."

Jones, who waived examination

REICHSTAG VOTES FULL POWER TO CABINET

Parliamentary Body, 313 to 18, Grants Authority to Marx Ministry to Govern Without Legislative Sanction for Indefinite Period.

SOCIALISTS BACK COALITION PARTIES

Nationalists and Communists Oppose Measure—Bill Gives Ministry Ample Power to Adjust Ruhr and Rhineland Problems.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 8.—Chancellor Marx's authorization law, granting his Cabinet plenary powers to run the Government's affairs without parliamentary sanction for an indefinite period, was adopted by a heavy majority in the Reichstag today. The vote was 313 to 18.

The bill had the undivided support of the four middle parties which constitute the present coalition and the full approval of the United Socialists, whose ballots more than nullified the opposition of the Nationalists and Communists.

While the law primarily is intended to enable the Government to pronounce emergency Legislation of an economic and social nature, it is sufficiently elastic to permit an adjustment of the problem confronting the Government in the Rhineland and Ruhr while the Reichstag is enjoying a holiday recess which in all probability will extend well into the new year.

The new Government's victory today was made possible by the undivided support accorded it by the Socialists.

It is heralded as presaging an era of parliamentary and political calm which Chancellor Marx and his Cabinet members propose to devote to the job of salvaging Germany's finances and alleviating the social distress with respect to the food situation and unemployment.

German Railroads Bankrupted by Slowing Up of Money Presses.

Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Dec. 8.—The slowing up of the paper money presses has bankrupted the German railroads which have been going on paper marks and a big deficit. Stinnes' dream that private industry possess the railroads is likely to become a reality.

Unable to meet their obligations for rails, materials, coal and so forth, the Ministry of Railroads met with its creditors, who are Germany's biggest industrials—chiefly Stinnes, Klockner, Voegler and Silberberg. It was decided to form "railway business organization" in which the creditors should hold a three-fifths interest and the Government a two-fifths, although direction of the railroads should be left in the hands of the Ministry.

The first annulments allowed 192 expelled persons, of whom 87 are German officials, to return to the occupied area, and sentences are suspended in the cases of 35 industrialists, 22 officials and six workmen.

TORY CHIEF SAYS BALDWIN MAY CARRY ON WITH "THE BENEVOLENT SUPPORT OF ONE OF THE OTHER PARTIES"

Most Significant Comment Since the Election Thought to Refer to the Liberals—Leaders Silent on Plans.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON,
London Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The leaders of all the political parties are in consultation within their own camps, though not yet with their opponents, discussing how to bring order out of the present chaos, so that some Government can be formed that can carry on. In this time of nervous excitement countless rumors are circulated.

I believe the truth is that no steps have been determined on by King George, Premier Baldwin or by the Labor or Liberal chiefs.

Mr. Baldwin, who must decide whether to resign immediately or retain office for the month before Parliament meets, conferred last night and today with the Tory leaders and received a significant visit from Lord Stanfordham this morning. Mr. Baldwin, who left later for the week-end in the country, will meet his Cabinet on Tuesday, when the choice will be made of the immediate resignation of the Government or their temporary retention of office, perhaps under a new Premier, Lord Derby or Austen Chamberlain.

Baldwin May Keep Leadership.

Lord Younger, the Tory party's election organizer, said in an interview, after seeing the Premier today: "The Prime Minister, I think, has no intention to resign the leadership of the party. We may carry on with the benevolent support of one of the other parties."

This is the most significant comment since the election, but the "other party" could be only the Liberals and whether their leaders will consent benevolently to keep the Tories in office is most doubtful.

However, Walter Runciman, a prominent Liberal, indorsed this view, declaring the Tories might be allowed to remain under a "colorless Prime Minister" if no controversial business is introduced in the House and a budget is passed containing no new taxation." It is thought possible that Herbert Asquith will oppose an alliance with the Tories in order to prevent a coalition in which, it is feared, Lloyd George would soon become prominent.

Lloyd George Silent.

While Lloyd George himself was elected, nearly all his supporters in his old national Liberal party were beaten. This weakens his position, in the view of his old enemies, the Asquithian Liberals. Lloyd George remains silent as to his intentions.

Should the Liberals deny a vote of confidence to a Tory ministry under Mr. Baldwin or another, the King, it is generally held, would have no option under British constitutional practice but to ask Ramsay MacDonald, the leader of the next strongest party, to become Premier. MacDonald cannot form a government that the House would support and, normally, a leader in such a position refuses office. But, while any definite statements are dangerous, it is considered certain that MacDonald would accept, move into Downing street, form a Labor Cabinet and then submit to defeat in the House in order to create the precedent of a Labor government and to encourage the rank and file of his party.

The Labor leaders, when they meet on Monday, will probably agree to this, if the King gives them the chance, but will vote against a coalition.

Some Labor enthusiasts believe that Labor, lacking 119 members to secure a majority, might bargain for the support of the Liberals; but this is not possible unless the Liberals, although they have only 159 seats in the House, are given a share, probably the lion's share, in the Cabinet. Such measures would disrupt the Labor party and drive the extremists into revolt, hence they will not be attempted.

Foreign Relations Problem.

It is natural in the existing chaos, when the problem how to get any Government functioning is so serious, that the significance of the election on foreign relations should be entirely ignored. It is ignored, in spite of the plea of the Times this morning, that the British stalemate should not lead to neglect of British interests abroad. Lord Curzon now is unable to take any important action in the Foreign Office, being ignorant whether it would be upheld by whoever may be his new masters. It may be assumed safely that nothing whatever will be done in regard to either Germany or France until the confusion at home is settled.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express has denounced Baldwin for settling the American debt. However, no party made this a campaign issue. Repudiation of England's obligations to the United States, on the ground that France and Italy have repudiated their debts to Britain, and that America is not trying to collect from other debtor nations, has not yet been proposed. Undoubtedly it would be proposed by a Labor Government.

But there is no indication that either the Tories or the Liberals in any conceivable combination would try to go back on Baldwin's settlement, which was approved at the time it was agreed upon by the Cabinet, and which it is held pledges the honor of the country.

Thirteen constituencies have not yet been heard from. The apparent results in these, however, indicate that the composition of the new Parliament will be 259 Tories, 189 Laborites, 159 Liberals and six Independents. The figures vary slightly, according to whether certain doubtful members are classified as Independent or assigned to parties, but the Government minority of 95 in the new House of Commons will not change by more than one or two seats. Among the missing seats is that of London University, which does not count its vote until next week. Here H. G. Wells is running as a Labor candidate, but his chances of beating his Tory opponent are negligible."

Beaverbrook's Attitude.

The attitude of Lord Beaverbrook in this crisis is considered by all parties immensely significant. The Canadian's wire pulling destroyed the last two liberal Governments, Asquith's and Lloyd George's—and he is now regarded as the brains of the Rothermere-Beoverbrook alliance, which controls newspapers read by 15,000,000 persons daily. Both the Journalistic peers, although not exactly bolting the Tory party, helped the opposition indirectly by attacks on Baldwin.

It is significant, therefore, when the Daily Express, Beaverbrook's chief organ, declares that Baldwin will resign and recommend MacDonald as his successor, and that "in view of the fact another election in the immediate future would be highly distasteful to the country, the Conservative and Liberal parties must decide to acquiesce in a Labor Government administering the country, on the understanding that Labor should not attempt any contentious legislation."

The same article goes on to suggest that Labor would not be able to have another election, because after two elections within the year the party is absolutely without funds.

The source of this forecast entitles it to respect. But it is believed Labor would refuse to agree not to fight for its program, save that no capital levy might be made pending investigation by experts that would doubtless be prolonged indefinitely.

The machinery of the Labor party, whose program, approved by Congresses representing all workers, cannot be changed without elaborate efforts that generally take at least a year, does not permit the Labor leaders to make such a bargain even if they desire to.

New Coalition in View.

It may be that Beaverbrook is trying to exploit the bogey of imminent Labor rule in order to promote his own pet scheme, which is a new coalition between the Tories and Liberals. In this Lloyd George, Birkenhead, Austen Chamberlain and Winston Churchill would take the principal offices.

Better than any phrases about the complete chaos in men's minds in England will be the bald record of opinions expressed in tomorrow's newspapers, which have great political influence.

J. L. Garvin, a leading Tory editor, declares in the Observer that the Beaverbrook-Rothermere press trust has destroyed the Tory government. He warns the Tories not to fall into the "Lloyd George gooby trap" and carry on the government by sufferance of the Liberals until they are made ridiculous and contemptible and a new election is precipitated in a few months.

He ends a long and violent article by demanding that if Ramsay MacDonald declines to form a Labor government, and if the King should ask the Liberals to take it, they should refuse any part in a coalition.

"Stop-Gap Ministry."

"Any government can only be a stop-gap ministry," he declares, "or a cabinet of caretakers to prepare for another dissolution. Reunited Liberalism should be compelled to face serious responsibility for the situation which its electioneering methods, supported by the maneuvers of the press trust, have created."

The Tory Sunday Times, on the other hand denounces the Tory and Liberal "extremists" who oppose coalition. It says "the one chance of keeping fairly even keel in domestic as well as foreign affairs lies in the formation of a coalition government."

The only alternative, it declares, is another and then another election, probably with equally indecisive results.

Asquith May Be Called.

Beaverbrook's Express prints the report, not confirmed from other sources, that Baldwin has decided to resign on Monday. It goes on, that the King will ask Ramsay MacDonald to form a Government, and that Labor will probably accept. Should Labor decline, however, it predicts that Asquith will be asked to become Premier, and that he will get the support of the Conservatives on the condition that "you must simply remain a ministry of caretakers." If both MacDonald and Asquith fail to form Governments, says the Express, the King will have to turn again to the Tories and ask Sir Robert Horne, Austen Chamberlain or Balfour, "the only three possible names," to undertake it.

This Beaverbrook pronouncement that the Tory-Liberal coalition, with Lloyd George, Birkenhead, Austen Chamberlain and Winston Churchill, is to be deferred until the country has become thoroughly disgusted with some stop-gap Government. There is a creditable report that Lloyd George has told his supporters he will take no part in the present situation, but abide his hour.

Rothermere's Sunday organ, the Weekly Dispatch, takes an utterly different line, declaring it is probable the Conservatives will continue in power with the agreement of the Liberals, and face Parliament next month with a new Premier and new Ministers.

The Dispatch says the Liberals are unwilling to form a coalition, but "would possibly allow the Tories to continue for some time as the best way out of a bad job on condition that controversial issues be abandoned. Their desire to upset the Tories is offset by their reluctance to put MacDonald in the position of being summoned to form a Labor Government."

after reading the affidavit, said he advanced Fant money to pay off a "loan shark's" mortgage on his wife's little home and that he later went on Fant's note at a Robinson bank when the negro's wife became ill. He said the note was past due and that he had been making unsuccessful efforts to have Fant pay it. The deed to the home was turned over to him to protect him, he said.

It was said here that Jones was not the only Crawford County official slated for arrest in the "clean-up," but no other county officer was named on the more than 30 bench warrants the Government agents hold. Several persons prominent in business affairs of Robinson and neighboring towns are expected to be named in warrants now in preparation. Other leading citizens, including many clergymen, are members of the law enforcement league. Jones has been State's Attorney of Crawford County for several years.

STATESMEN AND EDUCATORS AGAIN URGE AMNESTY

Repeat to Coolidge Appeal They Made to Harding for Release of All "Political Prisoners."

URGE THAT FREEDOM BE UNCONDITIONAL

Point Out They Are Held Years After Other Countries Have Freed Similar Offenders.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—An appeal for the immediate and unconditional release of the 32 remaining "political prisoners" has just been sent to President Coolidge by the same distinguished group of educators, churchmen, writers, State Governors and others who addressed a similar petition to President Harding, when 52 men were still confined under emergency wartime laws.

The petitioners include Gov. Davis of Kansas, Gov. Hunt of Arizona and Gov. Sweet of Colorado.

The presidents of nine leading colleges again assert their belief in freedom of speech and demand the release of political prisoners. They are: H. N. McCracken, of Vassar College; Mary E. Woolley, of Mount Holyoke College; W. A. Neilson, of Smith College; Henry Churchill King, of Oberlin College; Marion E. Park, of Bryn Mawr College; the Rev. Russell H. Conwell, of Temple University; Bernard I. Bell, of St. Stephens College, N. Y., and the Rt. Rev. T. J. Shahan, of the Catholic University of America.

Other Notable Signatures.

Others signing are Dean Hopplinisba P. Breckinridge and Robert Morse Lovett, of the University of Chicago; Dr. John Dewey, of Columbia University; Dr. Henry Nuemann, leader of the Brooklyn Society for Ethical Culture, and Vice Chancellor B. F. Finney, of the University of the South.

The appeal includes also the name of William Allen White, whose editorial on free speech won last year's Pulitzer prize for the best editorial of the year. Dr. Russell H. Conwell, of Philadelphia, Baptist clergyman and president of Temple University, who signs, was this year's recipient of the Edwark Bok prize, awarded to the citizen of Philadelphia who had rendered the most distinguished service to his community during the year.

Dr. Richard C. Cabot, professor of Social Ethics of Harvard University, medical authority and major in the United States Medical Reserve, who served in France as Lieutenant-Colonel, continues to urge amnesty.

Other names on the petition are Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue, New York; Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick of the Union Theological Seminary; Glenn Frank, editor of the Century Magazine, and George Creel, chairman of the Committee on Public Information during the world war.

Distinguished women joining the appeal include Miss Julia C. Lathrop of Illinois, former Chief of the Childrens' Bureau, United States Department of Labor; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman of Washington, who was the only woman member of President Wilson's Federal Relations Commission; Miss Katherine Ludington of Connecticut, a leader in the suffrage movement, and Miss Mary H. Ingham of Pennsylvania, known for her work for women and children and as one of the founders of the Progressive party.

The Petition.

The petition, after reminding the President that 32 men are still in jail for violation of the free speech section of the inoperative espionage act, says:

"According to the highest legal authorities, including Senator George Wharton Pepper, the presiding judges, and the prosecutors at the trials, these cases do not differ in any fundamental way from those of the men who have been offered some form of release. We, therefore, urge that you grant full and unconditional amnesty to the political prisoners who have been detained in the United States years after similar prisoners have been released in every other country engaged in the world war.

"We make this demand because we are convinced that the right of freedom of speech, as expressed in the first amendment of the United States constitution, is a fundamental tenet of a Democratic Government."

Calls Convictions Unjustified.

Dean Roscoe Pound, of the Harvard Law School, has made the following statement regarding the cases of the political prisoners:

"I have seen enough to convince me that the statements made to the press by the Department of Justice are at least, thoroughly misleading. I have seen enough to convince me that in time to come we shall be heartily ashamed of these prosecutions.

"I do not hesitate to say that, in my judgment, in the cases which I have been able to look into critically there ought not to have been a conviction and would not have been a conviction if it had not been for the collateral circumstance that the persons accused were members of an organization against which there was great (and perhaps not unnatural) prejudice."

G. O. P. LEADERS PICK CLEVELAND FOR CONVENTION

Request of Coolidge Leaders That Ohio City Be Named Considered a Blow at Johnson.

CHICAGO OUT OF RACE FOR MEETING

Fred Upham, Who Had Expected to Present City's Claims, Bows to Will of President's Friends.

Post-Dispatch Bureau
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.— The Coolidge administration showed its first marked reaction to the movement to make Hiram Johnson, the Republican nominee for the presidency by eliminating Chicago from consideration as the place for holding the convention. Cleveland has been chosen and at the instance of the Administration.

The truth was allowed to creep out in a frank telegram sent by Fred W. Upham, treasurer of the National Commitee, to business men in Chicago advising them not to come here to present Chicago's claims.

"Greatly to my surprise," said Upham, "I have been advised by the responsible leaders of the Administration that it is their belief that the convention should go to Cleveland. While I am deeply disappointed, especially in view of the fact that I had secured the assurance of a sufficient number of the committee to insure the selection of Chicago as the convention city, as a staunch party man and friend of the Administration I shall yield to this request, withdraw the invitation of Chicago and ask that the selection of Cleveland be made unanimous."

This means that New York and St. Louis will be the chief contenders for the Democratic National Convention.

It has been evident for some time that the Coolidge supporters have been disinclined to allow the convention to go to Chicago where it was feared the atmosphere might be unpleasant.

The entrance of Hiram Johnson into the presidential race has increased this fear. Chicago is looked upon as the heart and center of the Johnson movement and in addition to this is expected to be permeated at convention time with evidence of agricultural discontent.

The selection of Cleveland is also a bid for the support of the State of Ohio. President Coolidge professes to be carrying out the policies of his predecessor and it is that the location of the convention at Cleveland may have much to do with ironing out the factional differences that have broken forth following the death of President Harding.

ST. LOUIS HAS 102,151 MOTOR VEHICLES; 472,209 IN STATE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 8.—A total of 472,209 privately owned automobiles and motor trucks have been registered in the state for 1 0months up to Dec. 1, O. G. Steininger, Commissioner of the Motor Vehicle Department, has reported to Secretary of State Becker. This is a gain of 79,240, or 22.9 per cent, over the total for 1922 of 393,269.

Total collections on motor vehicle licenses for the 10 months of this year are $3,985,000, as compared to $3,497,000 for 1922. The license period expires Feb. 1, 1924, and Steininger estimated the receipts would reach approximately $4,000,000 by that time. The report for St. Louis shows registration of 102,151 owners of automobiles this year, as compared to 80,586 for 1922. Other registrations this year for St. Louis are 16,739 trucks, 1281 motor cycles, 13,697 chauffeurs, 1959 operators, 817 trailers.

The Kansas City office reported 64,100 owners up to Dec. 1, as compared to 51,688 for 1922; 9000 trucks, 452 motorcycles. In St. Louis County, the registrations total 20,488 up to Dec. 1, against 16,262 for 1922. Other cities report 19,111 automobiles and 2140 trucks in St. Joseph; 12,750 automobiles and 1200 trucks in Springfield; 11,650 automobiles and 1000 trucks in Joplin.

Crown Prince Wins a Law Suit.

ed on his course, but would take some action to prevent the fight program from being carried out.

He conferred at length with Attorney-General Barrett. It was pointed out by lawyers in Jefferson City that attorneys for Brockman or the City Counselor of St. Louis could apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition to prevent Judge Landwehr from enforcing the injunction against the police. In such cases, pending a decision on whether such a writ shall be issued, the Supreme Court generally instructs the lower court to delay action until the Supreme Court has time to pass upon the application. Where such instructions are issued, it was said, the orders of the lower court are inoperative.

Club Has Spent $14,500.

The petition filed in the Circuit Court by the Angelica Physical Culture Club sets forth that it is operating under a charter granted by the City Boxing Commission under the provisions of a city ordinance. It denies that the bouts are to be open to the public, but declares that the entertainment will be limited to members of the club, said to number 11,873. It is further stated that the receipts from the entertainment will be used for the charitable purposes of the club. The charitable purposes are not outlined in the petition.

It is alleged that the club expended $14,500 in arranging its program, notifying members and other accounts. This amount will be lost, it is alleged, unless the police are prevented from stopping the program.

State Laws That Apply.

The State law against sparring matches reads as follows:

Any persons who shall engage in any public sparring or boxing exhibition, or who shall aid, abet or assist in any such exhibition, or who shall furnish any room or other place for such exhibition, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

The statute directed against prizefighting, which has been held to be any fight for a prize or reward, is as follows:

Any person who shall send, cause to be sent, published or otherwise made known, the challenge to fight what is commonly called a prize fight, or who shall accept any such challenge, or who shall engage in any such fight, or go into training preparatory to such fight, or act as trainer for any person contemplating a participation in such fight, any person who shall act as aider or abetter, backer, umpire, second, surgeon or assistant at such fight or in preparation for such fight, shall, upon conviction thereof, be deemed guilty of a felony and be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than 10 years.

The City Boxing Commission, under a city ordinance, legalizes boxing before regularly organized clubs and permits the clubs to enroll members until 7 o'clock on the evening of the exhibition.

Dempsey Due Tomorrow.

Recently the city commission came into conflict with the old Police Board Boxing Commission, now disbanded. An injunction suit was brought by the commissioner appointed by the Police Board, to declare void the appointment and acts of the city commission.

In commenting upon the suit, Circuit Judge Grimm said:

"If the clubs conduct public matches in violation of the criminal statues of the State, it places the city in the position of saying that while it does not care to prosecute violators under the criminal statutes, it will permit them to operate upon payment of a license fee.

"This is, in effect, licensing a crime. No court will countenance the commission of a crime, and the city, through this ordinance, cannot license the commission of such a crime."

Jack Dempsey, who started all the legal furore with his promise of a gratuitous nine-minute exhibition, will arrive here tomorrow morning from Chicago, where he has been visiting for a week.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, D. G. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

STEEDMAN RETURNS FROM AFRICAN HUNT

St. Louisan, Arriving With Wife in New York, Refuses to Tell of Exploits.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Edwin H. Steedman, well-known St. Louisan, who for the last three months has been in British East Africa hunting big game, arrived here today on the French liner Paris from Havre, with Mrs. Steedman, who accompanied him on his hunt.

Despite urging of ship news reporters who met the huntsman down the bay, he steadfastly refused to relate his exploits in Africa or tell the amount or nature of the big game which fell to his rifle.

"Both Mrs. Steedman and myself dislike publicity," he said, "and for that reason I refrain from telling you boys of my hunt."

"What was the biggest animal you brought down?" he was asked by one of the reporters.

"We brought down an elephant," he replied.

"What do you mean 'we,'" was shot at him by an inquirer, "Mrs. Steedman?"

He laughed and said, "Now, you are asking too many questions, and I asked to be excused from the details of the hunt. Really, the publicity is decidedly distasteful. I did no more than many other huntsmen who have shot in Africa before me."

Despite his reticence, it was learned he shipped no live specimens to the St. Louis Zoo, because the journey from the interior of Africa was too long to assure their safe arrival in this country.

Steedman said it was his intention to leave at once for St. Louis.

Steedman, who lives at 5398 Waterman avenue, and is president of Curtis & Co. Manufacturing Co., had hoped to bring back some live lion cubs for the St. Louis Zoo.

Like Election Night Returns.

The atmosphere at headquarters took on the tingle of an election night as the returns began to come on. This tingle grew more electric and was a shock before many had been read. Those returns sounded like reports of the Republican vote from scattered precincts in Texas.

The Eleventh District had arrested one police character and they ran like this: one from Twelfth—four from the Ninth—five from the Eighth—seven from the Fifth—one from the Fourth.

Then the roll call dipped in real gloom as the Mounted District reported they were unable to locate a single criminal and the Tenth said they couldn't find one either, and the Seventh and Second and First were zeros. Officers of the Central District and the detective squad, together reported 15 arrests.

Average in Ordinary Times.

The total—45—is an average good night's hunting for ordinary times, police records show. But Chief O'Brien may not regard it was the right response after his alarming message of yesterday morning.

Policemen, as well as politicians, must explain returns of this sort. Desk sergeants said last night that the criminals simply weren't around to be arrested. Chief O'Brien probably will want to know what about the 125 criminals he helped to arrest Friday night in the first drive of the campaign. They were released yesterday under the 20-hour rule, and why couldn't they be arrested again?

Two bits of news cheered the watchers at headquarters last night. Three boys had paused long enough at Sixth and Elm street to be "picked off" by game-hungry city detectives. They explained that they were carrying the empty revolvers found in their pockets just for fun, but were arrested and will be held for the Juvenile Court. The score for Central District jumped three.

Patrolman Discovers Burglary.

The second heartening incident was that a patrolman had walked up an alley near the Joseph Smith Furniture Co., 614 Franklin avenue, and had discovered a burglary. The burglars were not there so he was unable to help the score, but he did look at the jimmied safe. Also he disproved the cynical theory that policemen never walk in alleys after dark.

Chief O'Brien in his ultimatum to the force made plain that things were not as they should be. Holdups and murders of gangsters in quick succession during the last month have shown policemen their duty, he held. They must arrest all known criminals on sight, stop and search all suspicious looking wayfarers after night and be on the lookout for gangsters on their way to target practice. If they fail to show improvement, well—it's results or resignations.

CHIEF'S MANDATE SETS POLICEMEN "ON THEIR TOES"

Demand for Results Resignatino Is Cause of 45 Arrests of Known Criminals.

THREE YOUTHS HAVE EMPTY REVOLVERS

District Reports Forwarded to Headquarters Have Gloomy Effect on Clean-up Campaign.

The Police Department, stirred to the tips of its square-toed shoes by a results-or-resignations order from Chief O'Brien, hunted criminals desperately yesterday.

Police reporters called the district stations from headquarters at 10 o'clock last night in awe-filled expectancy. Which was it to be? Results or resignations?

At this point, it becomes necessary, in all fairness, to remember that the guardians of the city were not the first to fail. There was once a fabled mountain which labored and brought forth a mouse. However—the truth must be told.

About 900 policemen had arrested 45 known criminals. The other gun-toters taken were three youths of 17 years, whose revolvers were empty.

There are approximately 1,400 policemen on the force but as the work in three shifts only about two-thirds were on duty during the hunt.

Officers of the Central District and the detective squad together reported 15 arrests.

Average in Ordinary Times.

The total—45—is an average good night's hunting for ordinary times, police records show. But Chief O'Brien may not regard it was the right response after his alarming message of yesterday morning.

Policemen, as well as politicians, must explain returns of this sort. Desk sergeants said last night that the criminals simply weren't around to be arrested. Chief O'Brien probably will want to know what about the 125 criminals he helped to arrest Friday night in the first drive of the campaign. They were released yesterday under the 20-hour rule, and why couldn't they be arrested again?

Two bits of news cheered the watchers at headquarters last night. Three boys had paused long enough at Sixth and Elm streets to be "picked off" by game-hungry city detectives. They explained that they were carrying the empty revolvers found in their pockets just for fun, but were arrested and will be held for the Juvenile Court. The score for Central District jumped three.

Patrolman Discovers Burglary.

The second heartening incident was that a patrolman had walked up an alley near the Joseph Smith Furniture Co., 614 Franklin avenue, and had discovered a burglary. The burglars were not there so he was unable to help the score, but he did look at the jimmied safe. Also he disproved the cynical theory that policemen never walk in alleys after dark.

Chief O'Brien in his ultimatum to the force made plain that things were not as they should be. Holdups and murders of gangsters in quick succession during the last month have shown policemen their duty, he held. They must arrest all known criminals on sight, stop and search all suspicious looking wayfarers after night and be on the lookout for gangsters on their way to target practice. If they fail to show improvement, well—it's resignations or resignations.

The Chief's Clean-Up Order

Chief of Police O'Brien's order to the force demanding better service in capturing criminals follows:

Commanding Officers:

There has got to be an immediate and decided improvement in police work throughout the city. We are not getting results, which means that alert, intelligent and industrious police methods and co-operation are lacking. I am putting the issue up squarely to you and if the results demanded are not forthcoming at once you will have to pay the penalty.

Apparently your officers are paying absolutely no attention to suspicious characters, gunmen and the like. Motor cars filled with payroll robbers and gangsters, all heavily armed, ride the streets without fear or molestation. With all this going on it is pitiful to scan the reports of arrests for carrying concealed weapons. It would appear there was no police activity against weapon carrying whatever.

Your command must be given peremptory orders that this laxity must end. The shaking up must be drastic and far-reaching. The law violators must be put where they belong—in holdovers, workhouse, jail and penitentiary—and it is up to you to see that they are.

This drive against guntoters is not to be limited to two or three days. It is to be continuous. No suspicious appearing individual or machine is to be overlooked.

I don't know how to bring this matter more forcibly to your attention. If results are not IMMEDIATE AND EFFECTIVE the officers who fail to deliver the goods, no matter what their rank or influence, will have to give way to others who can.

Respectfully,
MARTIN O'BRIEN,
Chief of Police.

COMMERCIAL TREATY WITH GERMANY SIGNED

It Guarantees Most Favored Nation Treatment of Each by the Others.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The new treaty of friendship, commerce and consular rights between the United States and Germany was signed today by Secretary of State Hughes and Ambassador Wiedfeldt. At an early date the treaty will be transmitted to the Senate.

This treaty guarantees most favored nation treatment for the commerce of the United States on the one hand and Germany on the other. It is a lengthy document and does not differ essentially from the draft originally submitted to the German Government by Secretary of State Hughes.

The treaty is regarded as important because it contains those provisions which the United States will insist on having in commercial treaties with all nations which are under negotiations or may hereafter be negotiated. These have to do primarily with guarantees of most favored nation treatment, the United States exacting a pledge that no third nation will be given any preference in matters covered by such treaties.

It was announced at the State Department that the Netherlands Government also had signified its readiness to negotiate a new most favored nation commercial treaty with the United States. A proposal recently was submitted to the Dutch Foreign Office by the American Minister and promptly accepted. Treaties with several other nations are being negotiated.

REORGANIZATION PROPOSED IN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION ROW

S. R. Guard, Former Director of Information, Would Make Ex-Governor Lowden President.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—A plan for reorganization of the American Farm Bureau Federation, drafted and read by a former executive who afterward said he believed Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, would be an ideal president of a reorganized federation, was introduced at the meeting of the executive board of the federation today. It was offered in connection with criticism of an act in the administration of O. E. Bradfute, of Ohio, the present president.

Samuel R. Guard, a former director of information of the federation, submitted the plan for reorganization, which involved severance from "entangling alliances such as Muscle Shoals." It also proposed making the federation the head of a national co-operative marketing movement.

Guard said that Lowden was eligible for the office of president of the federation as he had not announced his candidacy for president on the Republican ticket. Guard was sent for when certain members of the federation sought to overrule the action of Bradfute in accepting Guard's resignation in October as director of information. Guard brought with him the plan for reorganization, and told the board that his views, therein embodied, were the real reason why his resignation had been forced." Critics of Bradfute said the latter had exceeded his authority in accepting Mr. Guard's resignation. Final action was not taken on the reorganization plan.

SESSUE HAYAKAWA'S WIFE VISITS HERE EN ROUTE EAST

She Was Accompanied by Frances Guihan, Socharlo Writer, and Former East. St. Louisan.

Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa, wife of the Japanese film star, and Miss Frances Guihan, former East St. Louis girl and now a scenario writer, both of Hollywood, were St. Louis visitors for several hours yesterday, en route to New York, where they will sail this week for London.

Mrs. Hayakawa is on her way to rejoin her husband, who is now doing a dramatic sketch in London, following his engagement last summer in a French picturization, styled "Le Battaile," in which she also appeared. Mrs. Hayakawa, who was educated at Sacred Heart Convent, Evanston, Ill., was a visitor at the St. Louis World's Fair. Her husband was a student at Chicago University for a year, shortly after which they met and were married at Hollywood. That was nine years ago.

Miss Guihan is the daughter of the late Mrs. Dennis Guinan of East St. Louis, and is the niece of Mrs. Mary Sullivan, 5301 Page boulevard, and a cousin of Robert E. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the Robert E. McDonald-Katzman Co., shoe manufacturers, of 5272 Washington boulevard. Miss Guihan's desire to visit St Louis relatives whom she had last seen 16 years ago, caused the stopover in St. Louis. She wrote the first scenario in which Hayakawa was starred, and has since written several others in which he was featured. She also has written scenario for Ruth Roland, and her latest is a story captioned, "Innocence," starring Anna Q. Nillson, which has not yet been released. They were guests at Hotel Statler, and left for the East last night.

U. S. FISHING CRAFT BARRED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—By a Canadian Government order just issued, American fishing vessels, after Dec. 31, will be unable to enter Canadian harbors except in emergency.

Though commerce department officials, through whom notices of the step are being circulated, have no direct knowledge of the reasons, it is understood the Canadian Government desires to retaliate against United States traffic restrictions which are found objectionable to Canadians.

"During recent years American fishing vessels have had practically unlimited rights of entry to Canadian ports from the fishing grounds in the North Atlantic. Under the new regulations they can enter "only for shelter, for repairing damages, purchasing wood and obtaining water, and for no other purpose whatsoever." The list of these emergency conditions to which right of entry is restricted, grows out of a strict application of the fishing treaty of 1918 between Great Britain and the United States.

TWO HOLDUPS ATTRIBUTED TO PAIR OF YOUNG ROBBERS

Took $50 From Laundry Driver, but Second Attempt at Robbery Was Fizzle.

Charles Lavin of 3120A Elliot avenue, driver for the Becht Laundry Co., 3301 Bell avenue, was held up and robbed of $50 yesterday by two young men armed with revolvers as he was stepping back into the company's truck after making a delivery in the rear of 5370 Pershing avenue. After obtaining the money, which was Lavin's collection for the day, they stepped into a Ford coupe and drove west.

At 5 p. m. yesterday, a few minutes after Lavin was held up, a coupe believed to have contained the same two men, drove up behind a Famous and Barr Dry Goods Co. truck as the driver was making a delivery at 1218 Aubert avenue. As the driver, Dan Gleason, 21, of 6737 Raymond avenue, came out of the house, he was commanded by the occupants of the coupe to "Stick 'em up and come over here." Instead of complying, Gleason ran back into the house and the bandits drove off.

Two masked and armed men entered the rear door of the Liberty Oil Co., 1435 South Vandeventer, and told James Hill, night watchman hired by the company, to "stick 'em up." They went through all the tills and drawers in the office and found nothing, but took $21 from Hill. Hill, who had left the rear door open, carried no revolver. He is 50 years old, and lives at 1204 South Vandeventer.

Rolin Drearley of 3856 Labadie avenue, driver of a Famous & Barr delivery truck, reported to police that two men held him up in front of 2605 North Prairie avenue at 9 o'clock last night and robbed him of $50 collections and a woman's waist valued at $3.95.

PLAN TO STOP BUCKETSHOPS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Denying of banking facilities to bucket shops to restrict their operations was suggested tonight by Secretary Seymour L. Cromwell, president of the New York Stock Exchange, at the annual dinner of the Bankers' Forum, New York Chapter, American Institute of Banking.

"Banking facilities are necessary, even to the bucketing crowd he said. "Failure to obtain adequate banking facilities would do much toward restricting their operations." Cromwell also urged modification of the present method of new financing, declaring that "the search for profits leads to much financing that should never be done on the exchange."

$12,500 AN HOUR NEEDED TO REACH FUND DRIVE GOAL

Community Campaign Workers Must Raise $445,633 by 7 O'Clock Tomorrow Night.

LAST YEAR'S TOTAL OF $1,051,001 PLEDGED

Solicitors Given Right to Canvass in Any District in Their "Stretch Drive" for $1,495,837.

Faced with the task of obtaining subscriptions at the rate of $12,500 an hour for the next 36 hours if the $1,495,837 goal of the Community Fund campaign is to be reached on scheduled time, fund solicitors at 7 a. m. today will begin the "stretch drive" by which they hope to secure the $445,633 still needed to carry the campaign to a successful conclusion.

The $12,500-an-hour rate is double the rate maintained last week in getting the $1,051,001.68 total pledged up to noon yesterday. Unless this latter rate is exceeded, the campaign will be $201,000 short, the Executive Committee figures, when workers gather at Hotel Chase at 7 p. m. tomorrow for the last scheduled report.

The 4000 men and women pledge solicitors will be entirely "on their own" today, unhampered by any restrictions, following decisions reached at several conferences Friday and yesterday. Permission has been given them to solicit in any part of the city, rather than within the definite territories allotted them at the beginning of the campaign. The former carefully planned system has been declared null and void and where they think "the money and the heart" is, there the workers will go.

Last Year's Total Raised.

The $1,057,001 now pledged is approximately the amount raised last year for maintaining the 40 charities and philanthrophies participating in the 1923 Community Fund. The present campaign must provide funds for 11 additional charities in 1924, nowever, and solicitors today will emphasize the need for this money to be forthcoming.

To that end the workers were yesterday instructed to revisit persons from whom pledges had been obtained and urge them to make further contributions, especially those whose 1924 pledges do not show substantial increases over those made by them last year.

"The success or failure of this greatest humanitarian project in the city's history stands squarely upon the shoulders of those financially able to uphold it," Thomas C. Hennings, chairman of the Executive Committee, said in a final appeal to the public for support. He pointed out that 150,000 men, women and children of all creeds and races would be the beneficiaries of the fund.

Persons able to give in any amount should not wait for solicitors to call upon them, he said. Contributions can be made directly at the Community Fund office, 922 Central Bank Building or at campaign headquarters on the seventeenth floor of Hotel Statler. The telephone number for both places is Olive 5230.

Edwin Gould Pledges $10,000.

A $10,000 pledge was secured yesterday from Edwin Gould, chairman of the board of the Cotton Belt Railroad, by Charlton Messick, a district chairman for the campaign. Among other large contributions announced yesterday was one of $10,000 from the Catlin estate and one of $6000 from the International Shoe Co. Employes of the Famous-Barr Co., contributed $5895.

Other Contributions.

Other pledges of $500 or more reported yesterday were:

$4000—Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Johnson.

$3600—Liggett & Myerz Tobacco Co..

$3020—Mrs. and Mrs. Harry B. Wallace.

$3000—Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Faust; Anheuser Busch, Inc.; McElroy Sloan Shoe Co.

Edmunds, Mr and Mrs. Charles Bates, United Shoe Machinery Co., O. Peters.

JULIUS C. BIRGE, MANUFACTURER, 84, DIES AT HOME

Month's Illness With Kidney Trouble Fatal to Vice President of the Amos Shovel & Tool Co.

HAD LIVED HERE FOR 56 YEARS

Known as 'Grand Old Man' of Pilgrim Church, He Was One of Organizers of St. Louis Club.

Julius C. Birge, 84 years old, vice president of the Ames Shovel and Tool Co., died at 7:50 last evening at his home, 5076 Westminster place, after a month's illness with kidney trouble.

He had lived in St. Louis since 1867, when he established a hand implement manufacturing business, which became the St. Louis Shovel Co. In 1902, he assisted in organizing the Ames concern.

Last Tuesday was the fiftieth anniversary of his marriage to Miss Mary Patrick. The Birge home, which Mr. and Mrs. Birge occupied until recent years, and where their children were reared, was at 2949 North Euclid avenue, a large house in a park-like estate, now occupied by the Christian Orphans' home.

Wrote Book on the West.

He was a native of Wisconsin, being the first white child born in Walworth County. As a young man, he spent several years in the Far West, and he wrote a book upon his experiences, a half century afterward which he entitled "The Awakening of the Desert." The book, written in a graphic style, contains stirring accounts of encounters with Indians in the wagon journey through regions then unsettled.

Birge was one of the oldest surviving members of Pilgrim Congregational Church, with which he united in 1873, and he was active in church work. In October, 1922, a reception was given at the church in his honor, the announcements referring to him as "Pilgrim's Grand Old Man."

He was one of the organizers of the St. Louis Club, and was a former president of the American Hardware Manufacturers' Association.

Had First "Party Line."

Birge had the first privately owned telephone in the United States, according to his sons. "The line ran from our home to the shovel factory," Arthur Birge said. "This later developed into the first 'party' line, which included the home of General Sherman. A concert was given at our home one evening with the other people on the line listening in. Since the advent of the radio this fact has been frequently recalled as the first 'broadcasting' of music."

Mrs. Birge, four sons and one daughter survive him. Ernest N. Birge is manager of the Ames company, and Arthur B. Birge was general manager of the St. Louis Aeronautic Corporation, which conducted the recent International Air Races here. Walter W. Birge lives in Greenwich, Conn.; the daughter, Mrs. Courtland Carrier, lives in Charleston, W. Va.; and a son, J. Stanley Birge, lives at the family home. There are 17 grandchildren. All the members of the family have been here for several days.

The funeral will be tomorrow at Pilgrim Church, Union boulevard and Kensington avenue. The hour has not been determined.

DEATH ENDS LONG BUSINESS CAREER

ATTORNEY-GENERAL ACTS TO DISBAR THREE LAWYERS

Proceedings Filed in Supreme Court Against Members of Bloomfield Firm.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 8.—Proceedings to disbar Joseph W. Farris, George Munger and Eugene Munger, attorneys of Bloomfield, Stoddard County, from practice of law in the State, were filed in the Supreme Court today by Attorney General Barrett. He charges the defendants with altering records in the appeal of a criminal case, with intent to deceive and defraud the Supreme Court. The attorneys are members of the law firm of Farris, Munger and Munger, well known in their section of the State.

The disbarment petition states the three attorneys represented Matt Boyles, who was convicted Oct. 5, 1922, on a statutory charge, and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. An appeal was taken, but, after it was filed in the Supreme Court, the Attorney-General's office discovered that the affidavit of appeal, which the defendant is required by law to make during the same term of court in which he is convicted, did not appear in the records.

On this ground, the Attorney-General filed a motion for dismissal of the appeal. However, on Nov. 8 last, the petition states, the three attorneys filed in the Supreme Court a certified copy of a purported affidavit for appeal, apparently sworn to by Boyles before James D. Wilson, Stoddard County Circuit Clerk, on Oct. 13, 1922. Barrett asserts investigation revealed in reality that Boyles was taken before the Circuit Clerk on Nov. 7 last, where the affidavit is alleged to have been executed and the Clerk induced to certify it as having been executed and filed in his office on Oct. 13, 1922. Evidence considered to be proof of this alleged fraud was filed in Division No. 2 of the Supreme Court by the Attorney-General and the court ordered dismissal of the appeal.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BLOOMFIELD, Mo., Dec. 8.—J. W. Faris and George Munger, two of the three Bloomfield attorneys against whom disbarment proceedings have been instituted by Attorney-General Barrett, have both served two terms as Prosecuting Attorney of Stoddard County. Faris was a member of the Missouri State Senate for one term and was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Circuit Judge in 1922. Munger has also been Prosecuting Attorney of Carter County. Eugene Munger, the other attorney in the disbarment proceedings, is a son of George Munger, and has been associated with his father and Faris since admitted to the bar last June.

FORMER ST. LOUIS WOMAN CHARGED WITH AUTO THEFT

Katherine Uribe and Her Husband Also Under Indictment Here for Transporting Stolen Cars.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 8.—Katherine Uribe, instrumental several months ago in the capture and prosecution of "Little Phil" Alguin, slayer of Police Sergeant Fitzgerald, yesterday was arrested by police on a warrant from San Diego charging her with the larceny of an automobile.

After the woman's arrest, Federal officers said she was wanted in St. Louis on a Federal charge of having violated the national motor vehicle theft act.

According to the Federal investigators, the woman and her husband, Herbert, were indicted by a Federal grand jury in St. Louis in connection with the theft of several automobiles in New York and their shipment to St. Louis.

Mrs. Uribe, 27 years old, former show girl and daughter of Mrs. C. S. Lanham, 4059 Delmar boulevard, and her husband, a Mexican, were arrested here Jan. 7 last, and three automobiles stolen in New York, were found in their possession. They said they were driving the cars to Mexico City where Uribe was in the automobile business. They were indicted for interstate transportation of stolen automobiles and bonds of $2500 each were declared forfeited Nov. 5 when they failed to appear for trial.

MEN JUST OUT OF JAIL RUNGE PALLBEARERS

Six Police Characters Taken in Roundup Freed in Time for Funeral.

Gangland did not turn out in all its finery for the funeral of Elmer J. "Astor" Runge, the 21-year-old gangster slain Wednesday afternoon, as the body was laid away yesterday in the Runge family plot a few feet from the conjunction of Salome and Penitent Ways in Calvary Cemetery.

In most respects it resembled the ordinary funeral, except that the curious and morbid turned out in greater strength than usual. When the bell at the cemetery gate tolled, a cortege of more than 50 automobiles was admitted. Following the undertaker's car were two automobiles containing the six pallbearers, released from the Central District holdover so that they might perform a last duty for their slain comrade. These boys, Eugene Tebeau, Frank "Snake" Martin, Eddie Leonard, Ben Shields, Jack Weisman and Bartley Martin, all freshly shorn and shaved and bedecked in radiantly hued silk shirts, had already donned their white gloves for their official duty.

These six had not been apprehended by the police on any especial suspicion. They were merely among the numerous gangsters and police characters picked up Friday night in the general roundup ordered by Chief O'Brien.

Along a flower strewn aisle they carried the coffin and deposited it within a flower-lined grave. A burial ritual was read by the undertaker and the funeral was over.

The leaders of the Egan gang were conspicuous by their inconspicuity. If Dinty Colbeck, Chippy Robinson, Ray Renard and the Dougherty boys were there, they kept well out of sight. And as for Isadore "Izzy" Londe, once a pal of Runge, he was not seen, and although a Dodge coupe, resembling his in general aspects, appeared shortly before the cortege, no one got out and the curtains were kept drawn.

Neither did the police attend. Shortly after the Doering funeral, Chief of Detectives Hoagland received an anonymous letter, informing him in no uncertain terms what gangland thought about police supervision of funerals. Perhaps this letter touched some hidden cord of the Chief's soul, for no detectives appeared.

Two trucks bore the flowers, contributed by members of the Egan gang and other affiliated gangsters, politicians and friends of the family. The most prominent form of floral offering seemed to take the shape of a huge cross, surmounted by the white dove of peace.

Runge was shot to death Wednesday afternoon in an alley between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, and running parallel to Pine and Chestnut streets. He had parked his coupe in the neighborhood, when he saw a dilapidated Ford touring car coming toward him. Evidently Runge knew the occupants, for he fled into the alley the Ford following. There were two revolver shots, and when the police arrived Runge was lying dead in the alley.

SKULL OF PLEISTOCENE MAN

Find in Ecuador Believed to Show Americas Were Inhabited 100,000 Years Ago.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—A skull which he believes to be of the Pleistocene period and consequently shows that man lived on western hemisphere 100,000 to 150,000 years ago, was brought back recently from Ecuador by H. E. Anthony, assistant curator of the American Museum of Natural History, it was announced today.

Some scientists hold that man first inhabited the new world 20,000 years ago. The skull was discovered in fossilized lava with the bones of prehistoric animals. If his theory is borne out when the skull is thoroughly examined, Anthony said, the discovery will have been the most important in 50 years.

TESTIMONIAL DINNER FOR GEO. S. JOHNS

Committee of 100 Is Arranging It in Honor of His Return From European Tour.

A dinner in honor of George S. Johns, editor of the editorial page of the Post-Dispatch, is to be given at Hotel Chase Wednesday night, Dec. 19, as a testimonial to his services in journalism and as a private citizen. Mr. and Mrs. Johns arrived in New York yesterday, after a two months' European journey.

Arrangements for the dinner are in the hands of a committee of 100, in which are included Louis P. Aloe, Sigmund Baer, Charles W. Bates, the Rev. Dr. W. C. Bitting, Roy F. Britton, B. F. Bush, D. R. Calhoun, L. Ray Carter, W. Frank Carter, W. Palmer Clarkson, Frank P. Crunden, J. Lionberger Davis, S. W. Fordyce, Frank P. Glass, Archbishop J. J. Glennon, Benjamin Gratz, J. H. Gundlach, Chancellor Herbert S. Hadley, the Rev. Dr. Leon Harrison, Congressman Harry B. Hawes, Mayor Henry W. Kiel, F. H. Kreismann, A. B. Lambert, F. W. Lehmann, Joseph J. McAuliffe, the Rev. Dr. J. W. MacIvor, Morton J. May, Carl F. G. Meyer, Charles Nagel, Walter J. G. Neun, Albert T. Perkins, H. S. Priest, Joseph Pulitzer, E. Lansing Ray, Frank W. Taylor Jr., Daniel G. Taylor, Albert T. Terry, F. W. A. Vesper, Aaron Waldheim, F. O. Watts, Rolla Wells, M. L. Wilkinson, Casper S. Yost and Fred G. Zeibig.

On his European tour Johns has interviewed statesmen of several European countries regarding representation of those countries in the International Air Races of next year. The place for holding the races has not been determined. Johns had an active part in bringing the races to St. Louis this year, and in bringing about the arrangements by which they were made the most successful events of this character ever held.

INDIANA G. O. P. CHAIRMAN DEFENDS M'CRAY CASE ACTION

Says He Will Resign Unless Leaders Support His Endeavors to Have Governor Resign.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 8. — Declaring that he had "done my best in separating the disgrace from the Republican party" Clyde A. Walb, Republican State Chairman, tonight sent telegrams to United States Senator James E. Watson, Postmaster General Harry S. New, Joseph B. Keating, Republican National Committeeman for Indiana and the Republican members in Congress from Indiana, to give approval to his endeavors to force the resignation of Warrent T. McCray, as Governor of the State, because of the executive's indictment by the Marion County grand jury.

Walb declared further that if the leaders did not approve his actions in the McCray matter he would retire as State Chairman.

The Governor other than a brief comment on chairman Walb's statement in which he said, "I see no reason for any misunderstanding of my position as outlined in detail by my attorney, James W. Noel, in his letter to Secretary F. E. Schortemeier of the State Committee," had no statement to make tonight.

Walb characterized Noel's letter as "entirely unsatisfactory."

A complete account of the tangle in the affairs of Gov. McCray will be found in the True Life Story section of today's Post-Dispatch.

McCray's Son-in-Law Resigns As Marion County Prosecutor.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 8.—William P. Evans, son-in-law of Gov. Warren T. McCray, announced today that he has resigned as Prosecuting Attorney of Marion County. Gov. McCray announced the appointment of William H. Remy, Evans' chief deputy, as prosecutor for the remainder of the term which expires Jan. 1, 1925.

In a brief statement Evans declared that he was resigning because I feel that I do not care to be and that I should not be held responsible for the continued prosecution of cases in the Criminal Court where indictments are pending against Gov. McCray."

FATE OF TAX CUT IN HANDS OF 13 OF 'OLD GUARD'

Republican Senators, Now Committed to Bonus, Have Power to Enact the Mellon Plan.

CAN DELAY FINAL VERDICT UNTIL VETO

Survey Reveals There Are 29 Who Will Sustain the President In Fight for Lower Taxation.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Thirteen Old Guard members of the Republican party hold the fate of tax reductions in their hands. If they will stand by President Coolidge and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon the country can have lower taxes. If they repudiate their own administration and sell out to the bonus raiders, tax revision is doomed.

These 13—all committed to vote for the bonus now—are Senators Lodge, Brandegee, Colt, Curtiss, Ness, Hale, Jones, of Washington; McLean, Watson, Oddie, Shortridge, Spencer and Willis.

The President and Secretary Mellon have squarely presented the issue to these Old Guard leaders. They will have to choose between tax reduction and the bonus. The final decision can be postponed until the expected presidential veto if the bonus is put up to the Senate to be sustained or overridden. But they will have to make the inevitable choice then.

Can Kill Mellon Proposal.

The fateful 13 will kill the Mellon plan if they vote against the President. They will make tax reductions possible if they vote to uphold the President. The responsibility happens to fall on their shoulders for they rule the Republican party and have the power to decide the issue as no others in Congress have.

At present, according to a careful survey, there are 29 Senators who will vote to give the country tax reductions by sustaining the President's anticipated bonus veto. They are: Democrats, Bayard, Bruce, Dial, Edwards, Glass, King, Owen, Shields, Swanson and Underwood; Republicans—Ball, Borah, Cameron, Dale, Edge, Ernst, Fernald, Greene, Keyes, McKinley, Moses, Pepper, Phipps, Reed of Pennsylvania, Smoot, Sterling, Wadsworth, Warren and Weller.

The foregoing are either openly against bonus or voted to sustain President Harding's veto last time.

Can Eliminate Weak-Kneed.

Senator Edge of New Jersey has issued recent statements suggesting that he may have switched. He is up for re-election next November. It is not finally certain that he has reversed himself in order to seek votes from the bonus advocates, but American Legion officials are boasting that they have "got" him. If that is so, five votes will have to be found to rescue tax reductions from the bonus grab. Accordingly the 13 Old Guarders must supply the missing five. They can easily do so, even without much risking of their political necks. They can square themselves on their pledges to the Legion by voting for the bonus in the first place. They can vote to uphold the President and the administration when the issue is presented. The weak-kneed can be eliminated if only five of the 13 will support their own party standards.

The responsibility rests so directly with the Republican bosses that it promises to be the chief influence upon the next campaign. Neither the Democrats nor the insurgents have control, nor are they under any obligation to support an administration which is hostile to them.

U. S. CONDUCTING INQUIRY INTO GASOLINE PRICES

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The Department of Justice is taking an active interest in the gasoline war and in the situation in the oil industry generally.

Although officials heretofore have indicated that they saw no reason for any move by the Federal Government, it was disclosed today that considerable work had been done quietly in the direction of a comprehensive inquiry into prices and the influences which determine them.

The exact scope of the investigation has not been revealed.

The investigation largely is the result of the Western gasoline price controversy, but an attempt is being made to gather all facts bearing on the general situation. A force or more of Federal agents are at work throughout the country, probing down everything that promises evidence of wrongdoing.

Friends, Moved by Disabled Man's Pluck, Build Him a Home

Today, His Comrades on the Job Will Put Finishing Touches on "Whitey's" House—Give Spare Time for Weeks.

The spirit of brotherly love is not dead among mankind, says "Whitey" Hill, crippled construction foreman, whose fight for life in the last five years is a matter of surgical history. "Whitey" knows whereby he speaks, for he has received as glowing a tribute for his efforts to rehabilitate himself as ever was paid any man by his fellows.

Twelve men, whom "Whitey" has known less than two months, have spent their spare hours during that short acquaintanceship in building "Whitey" a home for his wife and 12-year-old daughter, Aniceta, at 5524 Labadie avenue. The men are the "boys" on the Endicott-Johnson "job," at Twelfth and Poplar streets, where "Whitey" is master of tools and supplies. Learning that "Whitey" had a lot and the necessary materials, they pitched in Saturday afternoons and Sundays, and even nights, and "Whitey's" home will receive the finishing touches today.

Fights Through Years of Pain.

The inspiration which caused these men to do a shining deed for a stranger was the stranger's story, which starts back in February, 1919. Edward "Whitey" Hill was construction foreman on a "job" at Seventeenth street and Lucas avenue. Of powerful physique and tireless energy, "Whitey" was a man among men, holding the respect of employers and fellow workmen. Then one day a rope broke, and a heavy iron wheel and a sack of cement crashed down on "Whitey," mashing in his skull, breaking a shoulder and paralyzing his left side. At the city hospital "Whitey" was declared a hopeless case, but his courageous wife, Lillian, refused to accept the verdict. She had heard of the surgical ability of Dr. Ernest Sachs, and arranged for the transfer of her husband to Barnes Hospital.

Four hours after Hill was injured, his fight for life began. The shattered skull top was removed and the fissures replaced by muscles taken from Hill's thighs. In three weeks, he was removed to his home, but it was three years before he could leave his bed. Hill was returned to Barnes Hospital nine times, and five additional operations were performed on his brain by Dr. Sachs. It was necessary to perform the operations with only a local anesthetic. The top of "Whitey's" head contains a deep cleft, but Dr. Sachs has promised that when the time is right he will take a part of two of "Whitey's" ribs and put a new top on "Whitey's" head. A serious complication in the form of convulsions set in while Hill was undergoing these operations, but this was remedied by Dr. Sachs through an operation.

Another Blow.

When "Whitey" was able to move about again, he immediately sought employment. His faithful wife had worked during his incapacity and the union had helped out in an exceptional manner. The "boys" on the various jobs where "Whitey" was known also pitched in.

But, much as "Whitey" appreciated all these efforts in his behalf, he wanted to make his own way. He and his wife had been able to keep their little home at 5533 Labadie avenue, but it had been a hard fight for Mrs. Hill, and "Whitey" felt he must get back in the game. He obtained employment as night watchman on an apartment house project being constructed by the Donaldson Construction Co. "Whitey's" troubles were not over, however. A serious stomach ulcer, accompanied by hemorrhages, set in and "Whitey" took another trip to Barnes Hospital. "Whitey's" tremendous constitutional powers, expert medical attention and a diet removed the ulcer from his stomach without the necessity of an operation, and he went back on the job.

Just before the completion of the apartment house project several months ago, "Whitey" sold his little home, as it was inadequate for his family for the coming winter. He purchased a lot across the street and made preparations for building a three-room bungalow.

Volunteers to the Rescue.

His employers, learning of his ambitions, gave him all the lumber left over from the construction of their project. The Donaldson Co. furnished a concrete mixer and other things necessary for building the cellar of the proposed bungalow. M. A. Keck, a construction foreman and a friend of long standing, called for volunteers from among the five unions embodied in the Building Laborers' Council and "Whitey" Hill's cellar was built.

About this time, the Donaldson project having been completed, "Whitey" became tool and material checker for the Mid-Continent Construction Co. on the Endicott-Johnson "job." Coincidentally his friend Keck was also employed there and "Whitey's" unfinished bungalow soon came to the ears of J. A. Brennan, carpenter foreman.

Brennan called to gether his crew of 12 and told them they were going to build "Whitey" Hill's bungalow. The very next Saturday work started and not one of the volunteers has missed a Saturday afternoon or Sunday since from the "Hill project." Plumbing fixtures and other necessities were donated by various supply houses, and today the "boys" finish the porch and build a shed and fence.

Just a Picnic.

"It's just a picnic," is Brennan's explanation of his and his men's kindness to Hill. "We never saw 'Whitey' until he came on this job less than two months ago. But he is a man who has fought a man's fight and men are only too glad to help a man like that. You should see the boys go after that job. If all mechanics put the enthusiasm into their work that my crew has put into this little bungalow, there never would be any labor trouble. Every man is on the job all the time and 'Whitey's' home will be completed Sunday."

"It's wonderful," says "Whitey." I only hope I will be able to make some return to everybody who has given me a lift when I needed it. I never could accept what is commonly known as charity, but I know this is different. It is fellowship and good will, and it is certainly going to be a happy Christmas for the Hill family. I am making a nice salary here and the boys are certainly going to get a Christmas party."

"Won't we have a party?" he asked Brennan.

"You bet," Brennan answered, "but that is hardly necessary because it has been just a big party building your bungalow."

Hill is 41 years old and although compelled to walk with a cane, still shows evidences of his former physical prowess. He is chairman of Local 284, International Hod Carriers and Building Laborers of America, to which he belongs.

The home which the "boys" finish today contains three rooms and bath. The lot is 50 by 120 feet.

"Come out and see us," "Whitey" invites. "It's the swellest little job you ever saw, and then I want to show you the china closet and some of the other stuff the boys added for good measure."

MANHOOD IN ADVERSITY WINS UNIQUE TRIBUTE

"WHITEY" HILL

SAYS BUMP BY STREET CAR MADE HIS AUTO "SPEED"

Negro Pastor-Hodcarrier Is Fined $10, However, on Charge He Was Going 40 Miles an Hour.

The Rev. William Henry Holland, negro pastor of the Church of Good, 1720 De Kalb street, on Sundays, and hodcarrier during the week, yesterday told Police Judge Homer that he now his 1918 model Studebaker wasn't going 40 miles an hour, as charged, because the car couldn't make more than 25 miles an hour when extended to its limit.

Furthermore, he was not guilty of careless driving in wrecking a Ford parked on Nov. 18 on Broadway, near St. Anthony street, he said. A street car had bumped him from behind as he was driving slowly and tossed his machine against the Ford.

Three women who were riding with Holland testified that he was only going about 15 miles an hour until his speed was suddenly increased by the street car. The driver of another car, however, declared the preacher was making 40 miles an hour when he struck the Ford, without any outside agency assisting. Judge Homer decided a fine of $10 and costs would be about right for the speeding and careless driving charge. An additional $5 was added for the breaking of a fire hydrant which went down when the Ford the pastor hit went over it.

A. J. Meyer, 1808 Chippewa street, a taxicab driver, paid a $40 fine for driving 58 miles an hour on King's highway Wednesday night.

Cotton Conference Delegates.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 8.—Gov. Hyde today appointed Harry Lesser and Alvin Goldman, St. Louis cotton brokers, as delegates from Missouri to a conference to be held at New Orleans on Dec. 13 to 15 on proposed standardization of warehousing laws and laws relating to agriculture in cotton producing states.

3 'DRY' LEADERS HELP MUNGER IN PIEDMONT CASE

Charles M. Hay Denounces Forgery Charge Before 1000 in Theater Where Court Is Held.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PIEDMONT, Mo., Dec. 8.—The preliminary hearing of third degree forgery charges against Orin L. Munger, District Bar Association leader, member of the Missouri Constitution convention and "dry" leader, today drew a crowd of 1000 persons who overflowed a local theater to which the court adjourned.

The crowd came to see and hear what it expected to be a climax in the fight between the so-called law-and-order element and the opposition of bootleggers and gamblers, which has resulted in the arrests of the Mayor, an Alderman, the Night Marshal and the City Attorney, and revolves about a bank defalcation and the alleged looting of an insane soldier's estate.

The crowd was not disappointed. First, a change of venue was granted by Justice of the Peace Young, and Justice of the Peace John Schelk substituted. Upon the opening of the hearing, Prosecuting Attorney William T. Powers moved to disqualify himself on the ground that he was a cousin of the defendant. Immediately thereafter, Attorneys Charles M. Hay of St. Louis, former "dry" candidate for the United States Senate, and Ben H. Marbury of Farmington, and William A. Settle of Greenville, all prominent lawyers identified with prohibition campaigns, presented themselves as appearing voluntarily in Munger's behalf.

Lawyer Hay Assails Daniel.

Hay, a former citizen of Piedmont, addressed the court and denounced Albion O. Daniel, local lawyer and City Attorney, whose arrest on two charges is said to be at the bottom of the charges brought against Munger as well as the three city officials.

"Let there be a continuance in this case," urged Hay, "that this defendant be given a full and complete hearing. I hope the Attorney-General can appear in person to prosecute. Let all the facts be brought out. We don't want this fellow (Daniel) going about the streets whining that he did not get a fair trial. He has charged in an affidavit as honest a man as ever walked the streets of this town. We want Daniel to take the stand and under oath make the same charges, if he dares. The charge is false, infamously and damnably false."

Judge Schiek thereupon ordered the case continued until next Wednesday, and authorized R. I. Cope, of Poplar Bluff, prosecuting attorney of Butler County, to appear for the State.

The cases against Mayor W. E. Hamacher and Alderman Roy Thomas, on charges that as city officials they entered into an illegal contract with the local light company, of which they are president and stockholder, respectively, and that against Night Marshal Carpenter for carrying concealed weapons, his appointment being challenged, were continued to Dec. 22 by agreement.

Fugitive Cashier Returning.

The date set for the adjourned hearing in Munger's case is expected to coincide with the arrival of Sheriff Wilcox, bringing Clacy T. Kinder, fugitive cashier of the Bank of Patterson, who was arrested this week in Fresno, Cal., and is being returned to answer to a charge of defaulting with about $14,000 of the bank's funds.

His apprehension was brought about by the intercepting of a letter in which he wrote, "I am having a great time here; the women are "high-powered," that was addressed to Elmer Black, local druggist.

The letter was sent to Black following his arrest, with Daniel on charges of being accessory after the fact to Kinder's escape. Black was arrested after returning from St. Louis in Kinder's automobile which he said he had purchased from the fleeing cashier. Daniel is charged with advising with Kinder just prior to his disappearance. These cases were brought up for preliminary hearing yesterday before Justice of the Peace Polk of Patterson and continued, indefinitely, to await Kinder's return.

The Stephens Case.

Daniel is popularly charged with bringing about Munger's arrest after Daniel had been arrested on a charge of having tendered a spurious bond for $5600 as surety for Grover C. Stephens, missing administrator of the estate of a Wayne County insane soldier. The bond was put up in Probate Court. Alogt $10,000 was involved, and when Stephens succeeded in getting $157 a month compensation for his ward, the court demanded a higher bond. Daniel's version is that a second bond for $20,000 was substituted in his absence, his seal and power of attorney as the bonding company's agent, being used.

Any rate, the bond was countersigned by Munger, and the warrant for his arrest charges he "feloniously and knowingly" added his signature.

On the night of Oct. 5 there were two explosions, almost simultaneous, which wrecked two of Piedmont's largest store buildings. The bombings were laid to the efforts of the lawless element to intimidate officials.

A Burns detective started an investigation, and was stabbed by a local character he was trying to arrest. The night marshal attempted to aid him and was stabbed.

As a sequel to the bombings, George Grix of St. Louis, who had worked at Black's drug store, was arrested at the local railroad station, suspected of bringing explosives to Piedmont. The "explosives" which he carried in a grip, on analysis proved to be alcohol and gin flavorings. The charge of transporting alcohol was substituted yesterday, at a preliminary hearing. Grix was bound over to the spring term of the circuit court.

CONGRESS PLANS MAY BE TIED UP IN COMMITTEES

Ratio on House Bodies Is 12 Republicans to 9 Democrats, Creating Danger of Combinations.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
A Special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1923.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8. — "Organization" sounds undramatic and perfunctory, but the week spent by Congress in arranging the membership of the various committees of the House and Senate may have a far-reaching effect on the nation's legislative program.

The growth of membership in the National Legislature has placed upon the committees the principal burden in framing legislation. Until a committee is ready to report a bill, it lies dormant on the list of measures of which thousands are proposed but few are enacted. There is always the possibility that a deadlock in a committee can be overcome by a motion on the part of the House or Senate but for the most part the power of a committee is the power of life and death over Legislation.

Owing to the reduced majority of the Republicans and the increase in the number of Democrats, the ratio on the House committee is 12 Republicans to 9 Democrats. On the Ways and Means Committee, which is all-powerful there will be 15 Republicans and 11 Democrats. The possibilities of blocking Legislation by a combination of insurgent Republicans and a solid vote of the Democrats are even greater in the committees than in the House proper.

Organization Delayed.

In view of the fact that the organization process in both Senate and the House has been subjected to an unexpected delay, Congress will not get started on a working program as early as in other sessions. There is, however, no such pressure for haste this time as the present session does not expire on March 4, but goes on beyond that date indefinitely and may run, if the members desire, into the following session in December, 1924, without interruption.

Most members, however, wish to take an active part in the primary campaigns and the presidential contest, using the opportunity to strengthen themselves with their constituents whether they are candidates this time or not, so the tendency of Congress will be to bring about an adjournment not later than August if possible.

In view of the fact that Congress is torn in groups and blocs, the deadlock on legislation is likely to be of such a character as to force an adjournment at an early date though all politicians are in agreement that Congress will not dare adjourn without taking some action on tax revision—which has become the paramount issue.

Demand for Tax Cut.

Whatever doubts members of Congress may have had about the importance with which the country views the necessity of tax reduction have been swept aside by the letters and telegrams which keep pouring in daily. Only such a torrent ever makes an impression and the continued pressure of the country alone will change the course of Congress from one of hesitation to performance.

Between now and Christmas very little can be expected as the committees will be hard at work. There promises to be a lively fight on the rules which formed the basis of the recent truce whereby the insurgents agreed to the election of Speaker Gillett but with the understanding that the revision of the rule must be taken up in 30 days.

As for the Senate, the insurgeration of the treaties will probably become the order of the day, while waiting on the house to take action on bills that must under the Constitution originate there, as for instance appropriations and revenue raising legislation. Congress has finally gotten started but nobody is any better able today than a week ago to forecast whether this session will see a record achievement or political avoidance.

PEACE AWARD REFERENDUM

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Plans for conducting a referendum in January on the decision of the jury for the Bok peace award were announced today by the committee administering the peace idea. The jury, of which Elihu Root is chairman, has been working since October and is expected to reach its decision soon.

reductions in the tax bills of Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, connections of his family by marriage.

Louis Cohen, grocer, said he was to busy to talk about reductions affecting him. A. J. Meyer, vice president of the Husemann Co., said he knew nothing about the matter and could not suggest anyone who would. Joseph Meehan said he complained of his assessment, and had supposed this caused his reduction, also that he handled buiness matters for Lis sisters, Nellie and Kate Meehan. E. A. O'Donnell, who stood to profit by the reductions in the E. R. O'Donnell assessment, said he was accustomed to pay his taxes without asking questions.

Another Reduction for Kratz.

Besides the $20,000 reduction made on John Kratz's apartment property at 4001 Washington boulevard, a $20,000 reduction, made by means of an erasure, has been found in the assessment on an apartment at 4432 Washington, now belonging to Kratz, but assessed in the names of the former owners, H. L. and Josephine Algermissen. The reduction was from $227,800 to $207,800. The transfer was made last May, with the proviso that the new owner, Kratz, should pay this year's taxes.

Kratz was not in the city when a reporter sought to ask him about this matter. He has previously said that the $20,000 reduction on the property appearing in his name was requested by him.

Charles Hertenstein, chairman of the City Efficiency Board, said he was associated with John Kratz in the purchase of the apartment at 4432 Washington. He is associated with John and Charles Kratz and Oliver Kratz, their nephew, in the Kratz Real Estate and Investment Co.

Hertenstein said the original assessment on the property was $298,000, and that as this was manifestly too high, a protest was made to Assessor Buder and Comptroller Nolte. It was discovered that a mistake had been made in adding the amounts representing ground and improvements, and that the correct sum was $227,800. How this came to be reduced to $207,800 Hertenstein said he had no idea, and he did not know that the reduction had been made until he was told of it in the course of the present inquiry.

$103,000 Drop in Year.

D. D. Israel, as has been told, said he did not benefit by the two reductions made in assessments in his name, as he had sold the property involved and would not have paid the taxes this year. He said that since the changes became known he had visited the Assessor's office and looked at the tax books, and that the erasures were apparent and were made in crude fashion, apparently by scraping the paper with a knife so that the figures written in caused blots.

The 1922 records show a $40,000 reduction in one of Israel's assessments, but on a piece of property different from either of those involved in this year's changes.

The 1922 records also show that Louis G. Ollan's property was assessed at only $92,280 in that year, although in 1921 the former owner was assessed $195,500 on the same property, and that Mrs. Elizabeth O'Donnell's assessment was reduced $10,000 last year, as it was this year.

A reduction of $11,000 in the assessment of C. Kuhle appears in the 1922 records. This year Kuhle's reduction was $10,000, and the case was classified as a possible error in copying.

Check Not Complete.

No official chec kof the entire 1922 and 1921 records has been made, and the only examination has been in the cases of those persons who were found to have had reductions this year. Later, when the grand jury takes up the matter, the 1922 and 1921 records may be examined thoroughly. The inquiry will probably not go back of those years, as the statute of limitations would prevent prosecution for acts more than three years past.

It developed yesterday that City Assessor William Buder had been a retail customer of two wholesale firms, the Ollan Waist and Dress Co. and the L. Cohen Grocer Co., whose heads were among those who stood to benefit by assessment reductions.

Buder's Comment on Ollan.

As to this matter, Assessor Buder said:

"I have known Ollan four or five years, since he came to this office (when Buder was chief deputy) to look up his assessment. He told me then, if I ever needed anything in his line, to drop in. I bought a couple of shirtwaists from him some time ago. The last time I met him was on the street last week. Ollan never talked about his taxes to me, and I don't know anything about the tax reduction for him.

"I have known Louis Cohen many years, since I was a clerk in the Election Board office. I often bought groceries from him—maybe a case of peaches or something at a time. I'd give the stuff to some of the boys in the office who were sick, or to the poor. I guess I have the bills at home, but I don't know whether I got wholesale prices. I don't think any of the clerks ever bought stuff from me; I think I just gave it to them. Louis Cohen never mentioned taxes to me.

"I'm more anxious than anybody else to find out about this tax business."

Ollan's Version.

Ollan, asked about Buder's purchases and acquaintance, said his recollection was that he met Buder about three years ago when he made a complaint about his assessment, and added that he might have invited Buder to visit his business establishment.

"Offering to sell men things in my line at wholesale is a courtesy I frequently extend," Ollan explained. "All employes of my firm extend such courtesies to their friends as a matter of advertising. If Buder took advantage of my offer, I don't know it. He may have come over and bought some shirtwaists and dresses. I wouldn't know if he did or not, as I do not wait on customers."

Louis Cohen's son, Nathan Cohen, an officer of the grocery company, said he knew Assessor Buder. Nathan Cohen said he would not tell whether the Assessor ever bought anything there, but declared that neither he nor his father ever talked to Buder about taxes.

Kiel to Wait on Grand Jury.

Buder was appointed by Mayor Kiel in 1921, and the Supreme Court last year ruled that a successor should not be elected then, thus confirming Buder's title to the office until April, 1925.

Mayor Kiel said yesterday he would await the grand jury's action before commenting on the matter.

City detectives, seeking information about a former employe of the Assessor's office, who is said to have operated the scheme of tax reduction by erasure and to have been paid on a percentage basis, caused some interruption yesterday in the work of the Assessor's office. Almost every strange visitor to the office was viewed as a possible sleuth.

The latest compilation of the changes in the assessment books makes this showing: Deliberate erasures and alterations, 50 cases; assessment reduction, $1,083,200; tax loss, $26,445.69; actual assessment total, $2,143,660; assessment total shown on tax books, $1,055,360.

Possible errors 30 cases, assessment reduction, $284,580; tax loss, $6932.79; actual assessment total, $708,150; assessment total shown on tax books, $423,570.

Total reduction in assessments, $1,372,880; total reduction in tax bills, $33,378.48.

Winner no Longer Owns Ilene Apartments.

Cecil A. Winner of 5895 Enright avenue, a real estate dealer, whose name was given in the Comptroller's list of property owners whose assessments appeared to have been reduced by deliberate erasures, yesterday announced that he had sold the property involved, the 36-family Ilene Apartments at 5514 Pershing avenue, last December.

As was stated in the list, Mrs. Selma Goodman now owns the property. Winner was mentioned because the assessment stood in his name. He said he paid $2187 taxes for 1922 on an assessment of $87,480. There was a reduction of $80,000 in the 1923 assessment, against the new owner, from $88,130, which would have meant a saving of $1944 in taxes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Dec. 8.—About a year ago Thomas Cosgrove, 85 years old, a rich cattleman of Ellsworth, Kan., was a visitor here. He accidentaly formed acquaintance with Leo P. McLaughlin, City Attorney, and a quick friendship developed between the two with McLaughlin showing every courtesy to the visitor. Last week Cosgrove died in Kansas City and McLaughlin has learned he has been left $42,000 in Liberty Bonds by Cosgrove. McLaughlin will not retire from his office.

RADIO FANS ARE ASKED TO HELP MAKE TESTS

Explanation of Why Messages From Alaska Have Not Been Received Sought.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Radio amateurs of the world are being asked by the Aerial League of America to aid in tests to find explanations of the mysterious invisible barriers that for months have screened from Alaska, United States and Canadian radio stations the signals sent out from the inbound ships of the Arctic explorers, Amundsen and McMillan.

Since July, 1922, when Amundsen's ship, the Maud, made her dash northward and became frozen in the ice pack in latitude 78 degrees north, longitude 165 east, the Maud's radio has been sending two messages daily, but while they have been received by stations across the North Pole and elsewhere in Europe, they have not been received in Alaska, Canada or the United States. The same results were reported by McMillan's ship, the Bowdoin, frozen in the ice of Refuge Harbor, 10 miles north of Etah, North Greenland, latitude 78.30 north, longitude 73.30 west.

Prizes and diplomas of merit are to be offered monthly by various scientific publications and the Aerial League for best reports of experiments by amateurs. Besides grand prizes, there are to be district awards.

The main purposes of the project is (1) to ascertain the effect on radio of daylight, twilight and darkness, ice, water, verdure, different atmospheric conditions and different geological formations.

(2) To ascertain and define the location and strength of natural disturbances and interferences arising upon receiving stations in various parts of the world under different conditions.

(3) To locate and map out the "dead areas" of the earth and ascertain the causes and effects of these barriers to radio transmission and especially to ascertain the causes of the mysterious "dead spots" of the earth.

(4) To ascertain whether radio signals travel equally rapidly through the atmosphere, the hydrosphere and the lithosphere.

Germans Hear Radio From Amundsen's Ship.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 8.—According to a dispatch to the Neuesta Nachrichten, the Kristern observatory near Breslau, today received wireless signals from Capt. Roald Amundsen's exploration ship Maud drifting in the Arctic. The message stated that the temperature was from 30 to 40 degrees below zero centigrade.

ACCEPT BEQUEST FOR STATE

Three Missouri Officials Approve Gift of 116 Acres in Wonnie Will.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 8.—Gov. Hyde, Attorney-General Barrett and State Treasurer Thompson, sitting as a special board, this afternoon accepted for the State a bequest of 116 acres of land near Hannibal, to be used for agricultural educational purposes. The land was willed to the State by Miss Louise Hatch of Hannibal, a relative of former Congressman W. H. Hatch of Hannibal. Its value is estimated at approximately $35,000.

The three State officials accepted the land under a constitutional provision making them members of a special board to pass on acceptance of any bequests to the State. The land will be turned over to the College of Agriculture, University of Missouri, it was said.

'REBELS' IN HOUSE AGAIN GO OFF THE RESERVATION

Rep. Nelson, Charging Progressives Have Been Slighted, Will Seek Review of Assignments.

OUTLOOK FOR PEACE IN SENATE BRIGHTER

Johnson and Shipstead Given Places on Agriculture and Foreign Relations Groups.

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Republican insurgency has returned to the conflict in Congress, and will manifest itself with the fall of the gavel in House and Senate next Monday.

The rebel movement is full of lusty vigor in the House, but in the Senate is disturbed by the continued absence of Senator La Follette, who is either unwilling or unable to direct the fight from his sick bed and it is rendered neutral in character by the assignment of good committee places to some of the more active rebel stars.

Two Farmer-Labor Senators from Minnesota, Henrik Shipstead and Magnus Johnson, have been well taken care of by the Senate Committee on Committees—Shipstead going on Foreign Relations while Johnson is assigned to a coveted place on the Committee on Agriculture.

The result of this shifting is that the Republicans, Monday, will vote for Senator Cummins of Iowa for President of the Senate, the Democrats will vote for Senator Pittman of Nevada, while the Progressives are constructively behind Senator Norris of Nebraska, but without organization or plan. The outlook favors the Republican intention to organize.

The apparent disintegration of the progressive group in the Senate, leads the Democrats to believe that if the insurgents fail at this time, their usefulness is over so far as serving the purpose of a goad to the Republican majority is concerned.

Nelson Renews Fight.

While insurgency in the Senate has merged from a bright red to pale pink in character, that of the House burst over today with renewed virulence. Following the action of the Republican Committee on Committees yesterday in filling the vacancies on the Ways and Means Committee with regular Republicans, leaving Frear of Wisconsin as the only representative of the insurgent group on the body, Representative Nelson of Wisconsin again left the reservation.

He announced that on Monday he would move in the House a special committee to review the committee assignments. Nelson maintains that there are about 60 progressives in the House and that this proportion should be recognized in the committee assignments. They have desired to have Representative Woodruff of Michigan placed on the Ways and Means Committee, Representative La Guardia of New York on the Judiciary and some other progressives placed on the Committee on Interstate Commerce and on Banking.

Nelson will charge Monday that the committees have been packed and that the reactionaryism is again in the saddle. He will call upon both the progressive Democrats and Republicans to throw off the grave colthes of the past and clad themselves in the new habiliments of progressivism.

In this fight, Dr. Nelson does not expect to win, but proposes to utter a vigorous protest for the purpose of keeping the record straight.

"We started our fight," he said, "over the representation of the Progressives on committees and for a revision of the rules. We refused to hold up the House organization on the question of committee assignments, for fear our position might be misunderstood as being actuated by self-interest and concentrated on the rules change principle.

Says Committees Are Packed.

"But it is evident that Progressive representation on committees is important. Failure to obtain it denies the Progressives the right to participate in the initiation of legislation and while a change in the rules will permit us to make amendments, it will not make up for our non-participation in the consideration of Committee works.

"Accordingly we have no part in the responsibility for the legislation and if the regular Republicans insist upon packing the committees, as it appears they have started to do, we want to make the record so clear they will have to shoulder the responsibility."

While the Senate Committee on committees has apparently decided to give a place on the foreign relations committee to the Farmer-Labor Senator, Shipstead, it has not succeeded in filling the other three majority assignments. The choice has narrowed down to considerations of Lenroot of Wisconsin, Willis, of Ohio, Pepper, of Pennsylvania; Edge, of New Jersey, and Elkins, of West Virginia. The result is the Senate majority slate of committees may not be ready to report Monday.

In the House the Republican committee on committees continued its session and has practically made up all of the committees with the exception of rules, the steering committee, and the selection of a whip.

The Democratic slate will not be completed for about ten days, Democratic leaders said. They are taking their time about the task and the entire committee list, Republican and Democratic, will be reported together.

The two Republican vacancies on the Interstate Commerce Committee will be filled with Wyant, of Pennsylvania, and Burtness, of North Dakota.

Farm-Labor Senators Reported Slated for Important Posts.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—While there was no formal announcement, some Senators said today that Senators Goodington of Idaho, Cuzens of Michigan, Howell of Nebraska and Fess of Ohio, had been selected tentatively to fill the vacancies on the Interstate Commerce Committee, which deals with railroad legislation.

For the four vacancies on the Finance Committee these tentative selections were reported to have been made: Elkins, West Virginia; McCormick, Illinois; Stanfield, Oregon, and Ernest, Kentucky.

There were reports, which were unconfidmed, that the Democrats had decided to place Senators Robinson, Arkansas; Walsh of Montana and Underwood of Alabama in three of the four Democratic vacancies on the Foreign Relations Committee.

"TOO MANY EQUIPPED ONLY FOR WHITE COLLAR WORK"

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Generations of struggle were required to establish the freedom of labor and today the task before mankind is to establish the dignity of labor, James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, today told the National Society for Vocational Education. Too much stress has been laid upon the academic in the educational systems of the country, he said.

"Today we are realizing our mistake," he added, "for we find that we are turning out 90 per cent of our youth, equipped only for the so-called white collar occupations, which can provide jobs for only 10 per cent of them. We cannot continue to keep America in the vanguard of civilization if we permit the American people to become exclusively a 'white collar' people.

"The soundness of our whole economic structure—and our political institutions as well—depends upon the man who works with his hands. The world markets of the future will belong to the nation whose labor is most skillful and efficient.

"Our hope lies in education in the training of the hand of youth as well as its head. Through the operation of the Federal Court for Vocational Training under Federal and State vocational acts we have during the last six years built up a system which we believe points the way to the solution of the problem. Today it is reaching 500,000 potential or actual workers."

DRIVER IN AUTO TRUCK DEATH HELD

Negro Charged With Criminal Carelessness in Striking Altenheim Houseman.

Emerson King, 3029 Lawton avenue, negro truck driver, was held for the grand jury on a charge of criminal carelessness in the death of Emil Aebi, 72 years old, a houseman at the St. Louis Altenheim, 5408 South Broadway, by a Coroner's jury yesterday. Aebi was run down by King's truck at Broadway and Fassen street Nov. 19, and died Thursday at Alexian Brothers Hospital.

An inquest will be held tomorrow in the case of Mrs. Helen Sheehan, 54, of 404½ Dorcas street, who died Friday of injuries suffered Nov. 27, when hit by the auto of Arthur Mann, 2101 Chippewa street, at Broadway and Lynch street. A careless driving charge against Mann was dismissed in Police Court Tuesday, but he was re-arrested pending the inquest.

The death of Aebi and Mrs. Sheehan brought the year's automobile death toll to 142, 15 more than at this time last year.

Accident Verdict Returned in Auto Fatality in East St. Louis.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in East St. Louis in the case of Mrs. Lydia Wightman, 67 years old, of 3117 State street, who died at Deaconess Hospital Thursday night of injuries received Nov. 30 when she was struck, almost in front of her home, by an automobile driven by George W. Davis, a railroad engineer, of 8500 State street.

Testimony was to the effect that Mrs. Wightman stepped from behind a street car directly into the path of Davis' machine. He was going slowly at the time of the accident, according to testimony. Mrs. Wightman suffered several fractured ribs, one of which penetrated a lung.

Two Children Injured When Street Car Hits Stalled Auto.

Two children of Richard Neidhart, 43 years old, an engineer for the Missouri Pacific Railroad, residing at 2750 Limit avenue, were seriously injured yesterday afternoon, when with their baby brother they were accompanying their father in his automobile to get his pay.

Neidhart was driving east on Manchester avenue when his engine died at Dale avenue, stalling the car, which was struck by an eastbound Manchester street car. The children, Roy, 14, Elaine, 5, and Russell, the 15-months-old baby, were thrown from the car. All were taken to city hospital, where Roy and Elaine are in a serious condition, with a possible fractured skull. Neidhart and the baby were taken home.

$4000 VERDICT FOR WOMAN AGAINST HER BROTHER

Lillian Horstman of East St. Louis Says His Carelessness Caused Automobile Accident.

A jury in East St. Louis City Court yesterday awarded damages of $4000 to Miss Lillian Horstman, 715 North Sixty-ninth street, against her brother, William, a clerk, for injuries suffered Sept. 21 while a passenger, in his automobile when it collided with an ambulance eight miles from Springfield. She sued for $5000 damages.

Miss Horstman testified it was due to her brother's carelessness that the accident occurred. She testified she suffered an injury to her left eye which has impaired the eyesight and also was permanently disfigured. She stated she and Miss Elsie Lang of East St. Louis were going with her brother, at his request, to the State Fair at Springfield when the accident occurred. An eye specialist testified Miss Horstman's sight in her left eye was impaired 50 per cent and said she would eventually lose the sight of the eye.

No defense witnesses testified, but defense attorneys argued that Miss Horstman was equally negligent with her brother because she did not warn him of impending danger.

2 CHIROPRACTORS ARRESTED IN EAST ST. LOUIS CAMPAIGN

Warrant Also Issued Against "Physician" Said to Be Ineligible to Practice.

Two East St. Louis chiropractors have been arrested and warrants have been issued against a "physician" in a campaign started Friday by the East St. Louis Health Department with the assistance of two inspectors from the Illinois Department of Registration and Education.

Warrants charging D. A. Dyer, 327A Missouri avenue, and E. N. Boettcher, 401 Missouri avenue, with practicing medicine without a license have been issued and both men, who state the are chiropractors, have been released on $2000 bond to await preliminary hearing. A similar warrant has been issued against a man who, according to Commissioner of Health Connors, has been practicing medicine although he isn't eligible.

Questionnaires are being circulated by the state inspectors and health department officials among all persons practicing medicine in East St. Louis. The questionnaires seek to determine the fitness of doctors to practice under Illinois laws. Commissioner Connors stated yesterday he expected the work to be completed this week.

BEHEADS WIFE, HAULS BODY 26 MILES FOR BURIAL

Rich Real Estate Man and Former Professor Decapitated Mother of Two With Butcher Knife.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 8.—E. Ray Tompkins, wealthy real estate dealer and former Milwaukee Normal School professor, this afternoon confessed that he had beheaded his wife, Ora, 42, and threw the head in the furnace of his home.

The confession came after he was forced to dig up the body of the woman in a shallow ravine, 26 miles north of Milwaukee, at 8 a. m. today.

The slaying was the outgrowth of a letter he claimed his wife had written to relatives telling them she had brought a serious charge against him, and that they would send him to the penitentiary and take his property away.

"I had learned my wife had written a letter telling relatives that were going to send me to the State penitentiary along with the girl and that they would divide the property and I would get only a small part of it," he said.

Used Butcher Knife.

"I grabbed her and choked her and chopped her head off with a butcher knife. I threw the head in the furnace. The body I hid. You know the rest."

Tompkins was taken to the scene of the crime after confessing.

The body was found at the end of a 24-hour hunt, after Jac Douges, owner of the property on which it was discovered, had notified the Sheriff's office that a strange automobile had been driven to the spot late on Thursday, the day Mrs. Tompkins disappeared.

A posse headed by Sheriff Phil C. Westphal, with Tompkins, went to the scene, the first trace of the headless corpse was found when one of the party scratched up a quantity of loose dirt with a stick. Tompkins forced to wield the shovel that revealed the body, stood silent for a minute as the form of his wife was pulled from the crude grave, and then broke into tears.

"I am innocent," he sobbed as Sheriff Westphal asked: "What do you think of it now, Tompkins?"

"Don't be hasty boys,' Tompkins went on. "Wait until we have a chance to find the real criminal. I know nothing about it and have nothing more to say until I see my attorney."

Tompkins wept bitterly until he was led back to the automobile which had conveyed him to the scene. Then he became quiet again until the body was carried past him to another car.

He then broke down again and reiterated his declaration of innocence. He refused to look at the body and buried his head in his arms as it was lifted into the waiting machine.

The spot where the body was found is known as the "Lions' Den" one of the most desolate on the North Lake Shore.

Friendly With Former Pupil.

That Tompkins had been friendly with the former pupil at the Normal School stated at a detective agency, operatives of which declared they had staged a "private raid" on his studio the day before Thanksgiving and found him in company with the girl.

Marjorie, 10, daughter of Tompkins and the eldest of his two children, started the investigation when she telephoned her aunt that her mother had disappeared. The child later told authorities that her father had "told her to keep quiet," and that he would take care of her and her brother, Robert, 7, if Mrs. Tompkins failed to return home.

Tompkins came to Milwaukee about 12 years ago from Grand Forks, N. D., where he taught manual training in a State Normal School. He was a native of Bloomington, Ill. Mrs. Tompkins was formerly Miss Ora Clover of Clinton, Ind. Their romance started while both were attending the Bradley Polytechnic Institute at Peoria, Ill.

During his eight years as a member of the faculty of the Milwaukee Normal School, Tompkins was known as "a little queer." To the general student body he was a "good fellow," but to his closer associates he frequently acted so strangely as to cause comment.

Arrangements Had Been Made for Tompkins and Wife to Separate.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 8.—Three years ago, according to the District Attorney, E. Ray Tompkins suffered a nervous breakdown and was taken by his wife to his home in Bloomington, Ill., and later he visited his wife's parents at Clinton, Ind. While there, he showed indications of mental disorder and returning here, was placed under the observation of Dr. F. C. Studley, who declared him a paranoiac, and likely to cause injury to his wife or other persons. Later in November, 1922, Dr. B. B. Rowley, also an alienist, attempted to have Tompkins placed in an institution for observation.

Recently the home life of the Tompkins had been such that Tompkins lived in a room in a garage at the rear of his apartment house. Mrs. Tompkins came into possession of information involving her husband with another woman, and a pre-divorce settlement was to have been arranged the day Mrs. Tompkins disappeared. She was to have received $175 a month and a share in the income derived from the apartment house.

In her distress over the condition of affairs at her home, Mrs. Tompkins addressed a letter to her father in which she detailed her troubles and told of her husband's infidelity, declaring she would place charges against him unless he divided his property with her and consented to a separation.

MAN, 76, FOUND DEAD IN PARK

Louis Rohlfing, 76-year-old crippled inmate of an old folks' home, yesterday afternoon was found dead upon a bench in O'Fallon Park by a parkkeeper. His body was taken to the morgue, where the attendant pointed out strains about Rohlfing's mouth which resembled acid burns.

A Mrs. Smith of 629 Pope avenue, Rohlfing's sister, informed police he had been staying with her for the last three weeks. She could give no reason for his taking his own life. However, the policeman on her beat said that several days ago he had been asked to look out for Rohlfing as he might attempt to drown himself in the lake in O'Fallon Park.

FORMER U. S. DEPUTY PAROLED

Tennessean Had Aided U. S. in Whisky Ring Convictions.

By the Associated Press.

TACOMA, Wash., Dec. 8.—Tyree Taylor, former Deputy United States Marshal at Memphis, Tenn., was granted a parole from the McNeil Island Penitentiary Thanksgiving day, and on the following day departed for Tennessee. It was learned here today. Taylor had served one year of a three-year term imposed after his conviction on a charge of accepting bribes in connection with a big whisky ring operating in the South.

He had been placed at McNeil Island following attempts upon his life both at Atlanta and Leavenworth penitentiaries, where he was first imprisoned. Taylor's safety even in prison was endangered, it was understood, because he had turned witness for the Government in the breaking up of the rum organization, with which it was shown he had been operating. This involved, it was said, a number of prominent Memphis citizens.

GEORGE LOSES 'BELL-BOTTOMS'

Negro Employed at Theater Causes Arrest of Suspect.

"Where are my bell-bottoms?" This plaintive wail emerging from the dressing room at the Missouri Theater, Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue, late Friday night, aroused the watchman, and he, suspecting foul play, called the policeman on the beat, who went in to investigate.

He found George Reily, a negro employe of the theater, of 3968 Finney avenue, who complained to the policeman that some one had entered the dressing room and had stolen his "brand-new suit with bell-bottom pants." He furnished the police with the name of a suspect who has since been arrested.

But Reily's bell-bottoms have not been recovered.

GIRLS GET $4000 FUR COAT IN NEW YORK STORE HOLDUP

Elderly Woman Confederate Covers Proprietor With Revolver During Fifth Avenue Robbery.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Women have joined the ranks of gun-wielding holdup men, it was learned today when the police admitted two fashionably-gowned girls made off with a $4000 fur coat from a Fifth avenue shop two weeks ago, while their confederate, an elderly woman, covered the proprietor with a pistol.

The three entered the shop, on the second floor at a busy corner at dusk, Saturday, Nov. 24. M. A. Kelly showed them a number of coats and the elder woman finally said she would purchase one. She accompanied him to his office to watch him make out the bill of sale, and confronted him with a gun.

"One word out of you, and I'll kill you," she said.

Her companions opened a show case, extracted the best coat in the shop, and made their escape while she covered their retreat.

Illinois Land Assessments Decrease

By the Associated Press.

PORT AUTHORITIES SEE FUTURE FOR ST. LOUIS

City Has Unlimited Possibilities for Valley Business, Say Visitors.

St. Louis has virtually unlimited possibilities as a Mississippi Valley port, members of the American Association of Port Authorities said yesterday afternoon when they departed for the convention of the association, beginning tomorrow in New Orleans, after having spent a day as guests of the city, the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' Exchange, the Mississippi Valley Association and local waterways representatives of the Government.

The guests, including 21 port authorities from Canada, and Eastern and Northern United tates, and the wives of some of them were escorted from Union Station to a breakfast at Hotel Statler. They rode in automobiles through the West End and Forest Park, where they were almost as much impressed by the bear pits as they were by the Municipal Dock, which they saw when they embarked on the Erastus Wells, the city harbor boat, for luncheon and an afternoon of harbor inspection.

Made Current Remove Sandbar.

Paul W. Brown, editor of America at Work, was toastmaster at the luncheon. He recalled to the guests that the granite boulder they had passed at the foot of Market street marked the spot where Pierre Liguest Laclede, a 14-year-old boy, landed in a rock-bound ravine in 1764.

Along in the 'thirties, Brown recounted, a sand bar began forming at about that spot, threatening the destruction of the fort of St. Louis. A young Lieutenant was sent by Gen. Gratiot, then chief of engineers, to remove the danger, and he built some sort of dyke at the opposite side to deflect the current against the sandbar and so eat it away—the first time that principle in channel protection was employed, Brown believed.

The only place along this stretch of the river where a bridge would find natural rock for either approach and also clear across the bed was at Rock Island, and so the first bridge was constructed there. But its design was such that the current was dangerously accelerated, and when the "Effie Afton" was "saddle-bagged" against one of the piers and burned a suit was brought against the railroad to remove the bridge as an obstruction to navigation.

Four Famous Names.

In that suit were employed notes of a survey made by the same young Lieutenant who had vanquished the sandbar at St. Louis. Another young Lieutenant of Engineers about that time brought the captured Indian chieftain Black Hawk, upstream in a gunboat to one of the river fortresses.

About the same time, a steamboat arrived at St. Louis one night too late to discharge its passengers and was burned. Among those left with nothing but clothing, and not much of that, were a woman and her three sons. One of the boys, 11 years old, immediately got work selling apples on the street until he could find more regular employment in a grocery.

The boy was James B. Eads, who built Eads' bridge. The young Lieutenant who brought Black Hawk up the river was Jefferson Davis. The other young officer was Robert E. Lee, and the lawyer who defended the railroad in the suit to remove the Rock Island bridge was Abraham Lincoln.

Case of Boat vs. Train.

In 1842 the amount of freight carried by the river steamboats, then in their heyday, was 467,824 tons, more than the Government line carried in any year previous to 1922, Brown remarked. "I cannot see anything but inconsistency in the idea of rivalry between the railways and the waterways," he continued. "You would not seriously speak of rivalry between a three-ton truck and a 12-ton truck. Each has a function; let each perform its function.

"Ask a river man what drove the old river steamers off the traffic map, and he will speak darkly of malignant railroad competition. Ask a railroad man the same question, and he will complacently remark that evolution evolves and the fittest survives.

"One fact in the case was that the average life of the river steamboat, determined by careful research, was four and one-half to six years, so that in time the steamboat proprietor was evolved out of existence. Another was that the railroad, through no particular virtue of its own, was spiked to the landscape and the steamboat wasn't. So sometimes, when something called elsewhere, the steamboat showed a clean pair of heels and the railroad man could go to the shipper waiting with his wares and say, 'Maybe we can't handle your goods as cheaply as those fellers, but we're here every day of the 365.'

"There was no organized line service. Further, a steamboat was a gold mine. Hence steamboat owners grew so extravagant that when the lean days came the steamboats went, whereas the railroads always had been forced to be economical.

"Again, the water freight rates varied from 25 cents a hundred pounds in the spring, when all conditions were favorable, to $2.50 a hundred in the fall, so the railroad man again could go to the shipper and say, 'Maybe we can't handle your goods as cheaply as those fellers do at the lowest, but you always know exactly what you'll have to pay us.'"

FILIPINO BOY COMES TO CLAIM OIL RICHES

Onetime Caribou Herder, Reputed Heir to Oklahoma Land, Arrives in Seattle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 8.—From a herder and driver of caribou, the water buffalo of the Philippine Islands, to the prospective owner of wealth, is the experience of Gregorio Carmichael, 13 years old, reputed heir to oil estates in Oklahoma.

Descendant of a former American soldier who fought with the American army in the war with Spain, he disembarked in Seattle at 8 o'clock this morning from the liner President Madison and with his mother, grandmother, his native guardian, his American guardian, lawyers and native witnesses, departed two hours later for Newkirk, Okla., where it is expected he will be awarded one-fourth of an estate which has piled up several million dollars and is steadily growing.

Knows Little English.

Through the process of customs inspection at Smith Cove here today, he stood wondering. The only comments Gregorio made were to his mother, his grandmother and native friends. This conversation was in Tagalog, for of English he knows no more than half a dozen imperfectly spoken words.

From a little village in the Province of Pampanga, Philippine Islands, came Gregorio with his attorney, J. E. Curran, and S. Mason of Newkirk, Okla., his American guardian.

The story of the young Philippine-American boy from his birth through days of poverty is one of the outcomes of a union many years ago of an American soldier, Bugal Carmichael, who entered the Spanish-American war with troops from Montana, and a young native woman of the Province of Pampanga.

Oil Discovered on Land.

When the elder Carmichael entered the American army in the war against Spain his father was owner of two small and not valuable farms in Oklahoma. His father died after Carmichael was married in the Philippines, and the farm property descended to the son, Bugal, and his sister, Mrs. Sarah Petit of Tonkawa, Ok. About that time Bugal Carmichael, father of Gregorio, was taken ill and in 1911, with his daughter, Dorothy, now 16 years old, left Pampanga for the old home in Oklahoma. He was unable, however, to stand the journey and died in Manila before taking passage for home. His body was sent back to the States and was buried in the family lot. His daughter, Dorothy, lived for a time with an American family in Manila and later, at the request of her aunt, Mrs. Petit, she was sent to Oklahoma and placed in school.

After oil had been struck on the Carmichael property, it became very valuable. The estate was probated and the property passed to Mrs. Petit and Dorothy Carmichael. Then it was reported that a son of Bugal Carmichael lived in the Philippines. He was found after a long search and is now on his wave to claim his share of the estate.

DEATH OF MAN IN STREET FIGHT CALLED AN ACCIDENT

Coroner's Jury Render Compromise Verdict After Hearing Eight Versions of Affair.

With eight different versions of the street fight at Ninth and O'Fallon streets, Thursday night, given by as many witnesses, a Coroner's jury yesterday compromised by deciding that Joseph (Slim) Whitcomb, 25 years old, of 2600 La Salle street, died an accidental death caused by skull fracture when his head hit the curbing. Four other parties to the affray were released as no one wished to prosecute.

Whitcomb's body was thought to be that of Raymond Jones, 23, 812A Cass avenue, until 10 a. m. Thursday when reporters found Jones at his home and informed the police of their error. Jones declared that he and his father, William Jones were attacked without cause by three men apparently intoxicated. Eugene Yoch, 2813A South Seventh street, and William Remphrey, 3112A Caroline street, arrested Thursday, declared that with Whitcomb they were set upon by several men as they left the house at 813A O'Fallon street and finally escaped, leaving Whitcomb behind. A 12-year-old boy, the only witness to the entire affray, confirmed in the major details the story of the Joneses.

The mistaken identification resulted from the fact that the elder Jones looked at the dying man at the City Hospital and said, "Yes," when asked if it was his son. Whitcomb's companions did not know he was hurt until after their arrest.

JUDGE DYER ON CITIZENSHIP

Tells Applicants Character Certificates Should Be Required.

Federal Judge Dyer, in a talk to 93 applicants for naturalization papers in Federal Court today, told them he believed all candidates for citizenship should be obliged to submit a certificate of good character from their native Government before being permitted to enter the United States.

"As citizens you will have equal voice with all others in this country," the Judge went on to remind them, "and it is your duty to obey all laws whether you like them or not."

The World's Choice of Beautiful Pianos

The AMPICO Reproducing Piano

The one instrument that reproduces with absolute accuracy the playing of world-famous pianists.

The difference between the Ampico and the endless variety of electric players which are sold as reproducing instruments, or mediums, can easily be noticed by comparison or documentary evidence, which we will gladly furnish.

Conroy's are exclusive representatives for the Ampico reproducing mechanism which is available in the Knabe-Gaines Bros. and Marshall and Wendell Pianos. The Ampico is priced from $800 to $5000.

The Knabe Piano

The singular fact that even those artists who are affiliated with and play other Pianos are unanimous in voting the Knabe Piano as "the world's best," leaves us in a peculiar position. To further praise the Knabe would be fulsome, to describe its worth, lengthy. Hence we follow in the footsteps of the immortals and offer the Knabe instrument as the nearest approach to Piano perfection.

The Conroy Small Grand

—recognized as "the musical sensation of the century." This delightful little Piano, placed on the market a year or two ago, has so captivated the attention of music lovers that we have never been able to meet the demand. Hence this is the first public announcement of the Conroy "small" Grands. We regret to state that probably it will be impossible to fill all Christmas orders. Your inspection of this superb little instrument is cordially invited. A most pleasing feature is the price, $885.

The Logical Place to Buy

FIVE floors filled with new Pianos of various types, all 1924 styles, with latest improvements. Not the kind offered by dry goods stores or phonograph shops, but the best of three decades of serious study of the music industry.

It is an open secret that Conroy's had the pick of every well-known American-made Piano. Hence the instruments sold by Conroy's are the choice of hundreds of tests and mature deliberation.

As a result, any Piano sold by Conroy's is guaranteed for a lifetime of musical satisfaction and has the further indorsement of the largest manufacturer.

WIDOW OF POLICEMAN WINS INSURANCE SUIT

Deceased Was Accused of Getting $2000 Policy by Fraud—3 Other Decisions.

The St. Louis Court of Appeals yesterday handed down a decision that George Cradick, a former member of the Mounted Police, who died Aug. 31, 1919, was actually examined for $2000 life insurance five months before his death and that his widow, Mrs. Josie Cradick, now of Chicago, is entitled to the money. The John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., in which the policy was written, had declined payment on the ground that the man who procured the insurance in the name of George Cradick was an impostor and the policy was obtained through misrepresentation.

According to the defense, the person examined for the insurance was a healthy man, whereas Cradick was afflicted with tuberculosis. It was alleged he had been treated at Koch Hospital for the disease prior to obtaining the policy, although the application recited that the applicant never had received treatment for an illness in a sanitarium and that there was no consumption or lung trouble in his family.

Commissioner Nipper wrote the decision, which held that the evidence was overwhelming to the effect Cradick was the person examined. Relative to the charge the applicant stated he had not been in a hospital and did not have lung trouble, the decision recited that unless it appeared the matter misrepresented contributed to the death of the insured the objection was not material. There was ample evidence to support a judgment in favor of the widow, it was held.

The case first came up in the Circuit Court, where the plaintiff won. Cradick dropped dead at Grand boulevard and Washington avenue. The defense asserted his death was due to hemorrhage of the lungs.

Another Decision Upholds Cancellation of Policy.

Another insurance decision by the Appellate Court cancels a $5000 policy issued by the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York to the late David H. Wiegmann of O'Fallon, Ill. After Wiegmann's death, on Jan. 25, 1921, the company filed suit to set aside the policy, contending he had made misrepresentation. It was alleged he said he had not undergone any surgical operation since childhood, but it was later learned he had been operated on for a cancerous condition at Alexian Brothers' Hospital more than a year before obtaining the policy, and underwent a second operation for the same trouble shortly before his death. The decision affirmed a decision by the St. Louis Circuit Court, from which Wiegmann's widow, who was named as beneficiary, had appealed.

Ruling for Defendant in Suit Over Brewery Stock.

A decision by Judge Daues, in which Judges Allen and Becker concurred, held that Jacob Studt Jr. need not pay $2500 on a stock subscription in the Mutual Brewing Co., which failed seven years ago. J. Porter Henry, representing creditors of the company, had sued to enforce payment on the ground Studt contracted to buy the stock, but failed to pay up. The contract was executed in 1911, when the brewery was being promoted. Studt replied that after he made the agreement the purposes of the enterprise were enlarged without his consent, and he notified the promoters, many of whom were retail liquor dealers, to remove his name from the subscription pledge. Judge Daues ruled that the change in plans nullified the agreement.

Mother-in-Law Ordered to Pay $2800 in Alienation Suit.

A verdict of the Pike County Circuit Court for $2800 in favor of Mrs. Lois M. Porter of New London, Mo., against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Addie Porter, a widow, of Frankford, Mo., was affirmed. The plaintiff alleged that the affections of her husband, Clede Porter, had been alienated by his mother through interference on her part and that in consequence a separation resulted. The decision, as written by Commissioner Walter Davis, censured the defendant and ordered her to pay the judgment.

SHERIFF SUED FOR $25,000

St. Louis Woman Alleges False Arrest by Little Rock Officers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 8.—Mrs. Martha Casper of St. Louis formerly of Little Rock, has filed suit in the Federal Court here against Sheriff Homer Adkins and two of his deputies for $25,000 damages, alleging false arrest and imprisonment growing out of the investigation of a murder here.

Mrs. Casper, 31 years old and Mrs. Gertrude Gravier, 26, were arrested in St. Louis, Sept. 11 last, shortly after the murder here of Mrs. Myrtle Hamilton, 30, said to have been an acquaintance of theirs, who was shot and killed from ambush while sitting in an automobile with a man. Mrs. Casper proved an alibi and established the fact that she had nothing to do with the crime. She and Mrs. Gravier were released after being brought from St. Louis and questioned here by the Sheriff.

MEXICAN REBELS REPORTED BEATEN IN FIRST BATTLE

Federal Forces Rout Insurrectionists Half Way Between Vera Cruz and Capital, Juarez Hears.

By the Associated Press.

EL PASO, Tex., Dec. 8.—Federal forces yesterday routed insurrectionists in the first battle of the Vera Cruz revolution at Maltrata, a station on the Mexican Railway, half way between Mexico City and Vera Cruz, according to unofficial information received in Juarez tonight.

The revolutionists were reported in Maltrata, a small Mexican village, near Orizaba. The report was not confirmed in official circles at Juarez.

By the Associated Press.

VERA CRUZ, Dec. 8.—Gen. Plutarco Calles' renunciation of his presidential candidacy will not halt the rebellion against the Obregon Government, it was stated at the headquarters of the rebels, who are headed by Gen. Guadalupe Sanchez and Adolfo de la Huerta. The news, however, caused much rejoicing. Chimes were played on the church bells and the warships in the harbor blew their whistles.

At rebel headquarters it was declared that having repudiated the Obregon Government, they intended to keep on fighting until it was ousted. They considered this to be imminent, judging from reports of the extent to which the movement had spread throughout the republic.

Attack Band of Loyalists.

Revolutionary forces left here last night for Jalapa, capital of the State of Vera Cruz, and 55 miles northwest of this city, where it was reported 200 men loyal to Gov. Tejada had rallied other elements about them, including agrarians armed by the State, and had declared their intention of offering resistance to the Sanchez-Huerta movement.

More than 4000 men were sent toward the city from various directions. They are reported to have made contact with the enemy a little after midnight and to have occupied the railroad station and some of the outlying streets.

Gen. Sanchez has been in telegraphic communication with the chief of the loyal forces in Jalapa, endeavoring to arrange for the latter's capitulation, pointing out to him the uselessness of resistance in the face of overwhelming odds.

Claim Many New Adherents.

Wireless dispatches received at the rebel headquarters are said to confirm the optimistic belief of the leaders regarding the final result of the movement to which additional military chiefs are adhering. The principal of these is Gen. Enrique Estrada, who is said to have under him a total of 7500 men, prepared to advance upon Mexico City. Gen. Estrada is commanding the operations in the states of Jalisco, Zacatecas, Michoacan and Aguas Calientes.

News from the central regions is to the effect that Gen. Rodifo Gallego has revolted in the city of Guanajuato, taking with him a regiment. Inquerraro, Gen. Pedro Clemente and Gabay joined. The first named is chief of operations for that zone. In the State of Morelos, Gen. Topete and some forces went over to the rebels. Gen. Rafael Buela is another adherent.

In the region of the Gulf of Mexico and the Tehuantepeo Isthmus there have been some important acquisitions. Col. Gilberto Oropeza, who was in charge of Federal operations in the isthmian region, revolted at Rincon Antonio, his headquarters. He has notified the headquarters that he has 400 men and can dominate the region up to Santa Lucrecia.

Gen. Durazo joined the movement in Campeche, and in Tobasco the Colonel in charge of the forces in the port of Frontera revolted. Gov. Ramirez, however, is supporting the Callistas against the Huertistas, who are fighting him.

Anxiety at Washington Over Reports From Mexico.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Administration officials tonight were awaiting with no little anxiety further developments in the Mexican situation following the defection of Federal troops which have gone over to Adolfo De La Huerta.

The fact that De La Huerta headed the popular movement which overthrew the late President Carranza and made it possible for Obregon to become chief executive of Mexico is not lost sight of by Washington officials. For about a year De La Huerta served as provisional President, and he is widely known and quite popular throughout the republic.

It is the hope of the United States Government that President Obregon will be able to control the situation. The report published today that Gen. Calles has withdrawn from the race for President was construed as meaning that Obregon had started in at the root of the trouble in his effort to put a stop to the disaffection.

Report From U. S. Charge.

The De La Huerta following primarily was moved to adopt extreme measures because of the support which President Obregon was declared to be giving Gen. Calles, and especially in view of the attack made upon De La Huerta's administration of the Treasury Department which could have the effect only of helping Calles.

In a dispatch sent at noon yesterday, George T. Summerlin, American Charge d'Affaires at Mexico City, described the revolutionary movement as "an effective movement as rebellion against Government policy and imposing Calles" as a candidate for President. He added, however, that "known disaffection" was still confined to the state of Vera Cruz, where the revolution had its inception under the leadership of Gen. Guadelupe Sanchez." Summerlin stated that at the time his dispatch was sent troops were entraining at Mexico City for Vera Cruz.

Charge d'Affaires Tellec, of the Mexican embassy, said late today that all recent efforts to communicate with his Government via Vera Cruz had failed because of the censorship imposed by the revolutionists.

Consuls Tell of Revolt.

American Consul Walter F. Boyle, San Luis Potosi, telegraphed the State Department yesterday that Gen. Manrique arrived in that city on the morning of Dec. 7 and immediately deposed the municipal government.

From Guadalajara, Consul Mc-Conico reported yesterday that Gen. Estrada had renounced Obregon and taken possession without opposition of the Federal and State offices on behalf of De La Huerta.

Consul Stewart, in a dispatch sent at 4 p. m. yesterday from Tampico, reported that the garrisons at Panuco, Pueblo, Viejo, Tampico Alto and other smaller towns left Dec. 6 to report to Gen. Pablo Diaz at Potreallano and follow Gen. Sanchez. The civil authorities at Tampico, Stewart states are for De La Huerta, and, therefore the police soon will be disarmed.

PCZAH MISCALCULATES HIMSELF INTO A CELL

Hides Stolen Jewelry Box in Wrong Place—Visits Pawn Shop at Wrong Time.

Pczah Samuels left a box of antique jewelry behind a water cooler in the University loop street car barn at Pennsylvania and Pershing avenue. In doing so he heeded his better judgment, which might seem strange, unless one knows that Pczah had stolen the box with other things from the home of Dr. Adam Flickinger of 2870 Orchard avenue, Webster Groves, an hour before.

He went back several times to look at the box and estimate how much its contents might yield at a pawnshop, but each time a motorman or a conductor would come along to get a drink from the water cooler. That put retrieving the box out of the question, as Pczah was a wary negro.

But Box Is Missing.

Yesterday afternoon, through another miscalculation, Pczah was pawning an unset diamond at a pawnshop at Jefferson and Market streets when Detectives Crone and Blake of the pawnshop squad happened in. One question was enough to put him to flight and five pistol shots were needed to halt him. He confessed three burglaries in Webster Groves and one in Clayton, then remembered to tell the detectives about the jewelry box.

While officers traveled to the car barn, other officers were finding eight small diamonds, a diamond ring, two sapphire rings and a band ring in the waist band of Pczah's trousers.

There was no box behind the water cooler. One antique bracelet was all that remained. But the detectives made inquiry and learned that another negro had the job of cleaning-up at the car station. They went to the home of Huston McKissock, and there they found Dr. Flickinger's jewelry box.

Found It When He Cleaned.

"Yas, suh, I foun' it when I was cleanin'," McKissock explained. "An' I was readin' papers every day to see if anybody would advertise. I is a phones' man, I is."

At the Laclede Avenue Station, Pczah admitted he had taken "a little flyah in crime out in the county" last month. A watch, two necklaces and several pawn tickets were recovered from his home. Besides the Flickinger robbery, Pczah is said to have been the man who robbed the home of Henry Jost of 131 Bemiston avenue, Clayton, Dec. 4.

"Who named you Pczah," a detective asked Samuels.

"Dunno, suh, but I spec' it was mah mothah. She got it from the Bible."

There is no such proper name as Pczah in available works on the Bible, but Mount Pisgah, in the Land of Moab, from which Moses is said to have viewed the promised land, is mentioned. It is possible that the prisoner's spelling failed him.

ELLIOT TIES DONOGHUE AS LEADING JOCKEY

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—A mere apprentice, C. E. Elliot, tied Steve Donoghue at the top of the list of winning jockeys during the racing season in Great Britain this year. Each had 89 wins. An American jockey, George Archibald, was eleventh in the list with 41 victories. He was second in 89 races and third in 27, but his average was as good as that of the two leaders, for while Archibald was unplaced only 208 times Donoghue failed to finish among the first three in 391 races and Elliot was among the also-rans on 367 occasions.

This was Donoghue's tenth season as champion jockey, but it was the performance of Elliot that received the most praise.

Lord Derby heads the list of winning owners. With 18 horses he won 29 races, and prizes totaling $46,852.

Papyrus, which won the Derby and later raced Harry F. Sinclair's three-year-old Zev at Belmont Park, New York, won three races and $13,878 for his owner, Ben Irish, not counting the $20,000 that was the loser's end of the Belmont Park match.

Owner of Epinard Wants Match Race Under Any Condition

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.

"No racing thoroughbred may claim world's championship laurels until he has met and defeated my Epinard," according to Pierre Wertheimer, millionaire owner of the champion French three-year-old. M. Wertheimer arrived today on the Paris and although his trip was made for business purposes, he expects to meet Harry Sinclair, owner of the American champion, Zev, and arrange a match or series of races between the two thoroughbreds.

"I hope Mr. Sinclair will find it possible to accept my challenge to a match race in France early next May," said the French turfman. "If that is unacceptable, I shall offer to ship Epinard to America for a match race to be held late in September or early in October. The match may be either a single race over any distance between six furlongs and one and one-half miles, or a series of races at these and intermediate distances.

"I am willing to start my horse against Zev alone or against a field of your leading thoroughbreds which may include My Own, In Memoriam or any other star thoroughbred. In the event Zev makes the trip to France and is defeated, I will agree to ship Epinard to this country for a return match."

ROUND ROBIN SCHEDULE FOR BIG TEN FOOTBALL TEAMS IS SUGGESTED

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Dec. 8.—A round robin arrangement of football schedules, which in the course of 10 years would bring a meeting between all the schools of the Western Conference, was favored here today by editors and business managers of Big Ten college publications, with the exception of Ohio State. The proposition was broached by Minnesota's representative, R. E. Bartholdi, who pointed to the condition of Wisconsin this year as one of the reasons for the initiation of the proposed arrangement.

The plan would not necessarily mean that the Big Ten schools would have to discard their traditional football rivals, Bartholdi said, but would so shift the other games that at the end of the period each school in the conference would have played at least one game with the other members.

Ohio reserves decision to await the action of their publication's board of directors.

Illinois was selected as the next meeting place of the association meeting, to be held in May. T. B. Sterns of Illinois was elected president, B. R. Gebhart, Purdue, vice president; P. F. Butts of Wisconsin, secretary, and F. R. Bartholdi, treasurer.

HASKELL INDIANS GAIN 35 TO 0 VICTORY OVER TULSA; LEVI IS STAR

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., Dec. 8.—Football warriors from the Haskell Indian Institute at Lawrence, Kan., easily defeated the University of Tulsa here today, 35 to 0. The Indians hopelessly outclassed Tulsa in every department of the game, with John Levi, the plunging fullback, the outstanding star.

The lineup:

Tulsa.	Position.	Haskell.
Patrick	L. E.	Carpenter
Herndon	L. T.	Roebuck
Stafford	L. G.	Killbuck
White	C.	Jennings
Sturbois	R. G.	Norton
Murphy	R. T.	Casey
Lee	R. E.	Kipp
Shunatona	Q. B.	Scott
Hamilton	L. H.	G. Levi
Cline	R. H.	Elkins
Lecrone	F. B.	J. Levi

Score by periods:

Haskell	7	15	13	0	35

Touchdowns: Haskell—Carpenter (2), G. Levi (2), J. Levi (1). Points after score—Carpenter (5). Officials: Referee—Quigley (St. Marys). Umpire—McBride (Kansas). Head linesman—Watkins (Sewanee).

VANDERBILT PLAYS 7-7 TIE GAME WITH OLD PRINCETON STARS

By the Associated Press.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 8.—A crowd of 6000 saw a demonstration of Eastern football here this afternoon when Vanderbilt met a team composed of former Princeton stars in a game played for the benefit of a local charitable institution. The score was: Vanderbilt, 7; Princeton Stars, 7.

The visitors, despite the lack of recent training for teamwork, played a good game.

U. S. S. WYOMING AND U. S. S. WRIGHT TIE, 6-6

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The football championship of the Atlantic fleet is jointly held by the U. S. S. Wright and the U. S. S. Wyoming as a result of the 6 to 6 tie after four periods of bristling play at the Yankee Stadium today. The Wyoming team was the first to score when, largely through the brilliant work of O'Regan, it negotiated six points in the second period.

But, in the third session of play, the Wright eleven tied the score, and neither was able to break the deadlock in the final quarter.

Greb Speeds Up For Tunney Bout

Pittsburg Windmill Confident of Regaining Light Heavyweight Title Monday.

By Fair Play.

(Copyright, 1923.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—In spite of the reports that Harry Greb has been slipping in the past months he certainly gave every indication of pep and general enthusiasm in his workout today at the Garden gym where he is tapering off for Monday night's battle against Gene Tunney.

Greb is confident of regaining the light-heavyweight title from the ex-marine. He says that Tunney has shown he cannot hurt him and that his—Greb's—recent bouts against fast middleweights have increased his speed a lot. He expects to pile up a big margin of points.

Tunney, a real outdoor man, is finishing up his training at the usual place, Red Bank, N. J., and reports that he was never better prepared for a battle. This means that his hands have come back to condition.

Tunney's Hands Brittle.

Tunney is one of those fighters who can hit harder than his hands can stand and after every battle his maulies need rest and treatment. If, however, his battles with Greb are any indication of what may be expected on Monday, he will not damage his knuckles seriously on the middleweight champion who is a pretty swift moving and elusive guy.

Tunney is a big favorite in New York and there is no doubt he has the punching power to lay anyone low if he gets his sock in right.

This Luis Vincenttini, the Chilean lightweight, will meet Johnny Shugrue on Dec. 14 and after him, Pal Moran. If he can dispose of these two tough nuts he will receive $50,000 to tackle Benny Leonard for the title—that is if Benny proves willing.

Roland Todd, the Englishman, middleweight champion of Europe, appears in the semifinal bout at the Garden Monday night against Tommy Loughran. Todd is so highly touted that all the top-liners have been ducking him in a final bout, so the best the European champ could get was a semifinal against a tough trial horse.

$10,000 DAMAGE SUIT AGAINST JACK DEMPSEY

By the Associated Press.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., Dec. 8.—Trial was begun in District Court here today of a suit filed by A. P. Geranois, against Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, and Jack Kearns, his manager, for $10,000 damages alleged to have been suffered by the 12-year old girl ward in the case through being bitten by a dog at the Dempsey training camp near Great Falls, June 6.

Attorneys for Dempsey said the dog did not belong to Dempsey, that the attack upon the girl occurred at a time when there was no boxing exhibition, and a sign warned the public from coming inside the camp fence.

Jack Dempsey Here Tomorrow For Exhibition

Champion to Spar on Mullen's Card at Coliseum Without Pay—To Address Ad Club.

A unique chapter will be written into the tale of St. Louis boxing history Tuesday night when the reigning world champion appears in the ring at the Coliseum in a nine-minute sparring exhibition, WITHOUT FINANCIAL REMUNERATION.

The Angelica Club's card of five bouts is attractive enough to stand on its own feet but with the additional attraction of the Jack Dempsey in a sparring match the program has become one of the most promising ever attempted here.

Dempsey will arrive with his manager, Jack Kearns, and his trainer and secretary, Teddy Hayes, and two sparring partners, tomorrow morning. He will stop at the Jefferson Hotel.

Dempsey has consented to speak before the Advertising Club of St. Louis at luncheon at the Hotel Statler Monday. Fred E. Winsor, secrefary of the Ad Club, closed negotiations with the Dempsey party by long distance phone last night.

Five Referees to Work.

An imposing array of officials will handle Tuesday night's show. Dave Barry, who won the welterweight title from Martin Duffy in St. Louis twenty years ago; Eddie McGoorty and Dave Miller will come here from Chicago to officiate. Harry Sharpe and Walter Helsner, local referees, will serve as judges and one of the two will handle the two preliminary bouts.

Three ten-round and two eight-round bouts make up the regular program.

Ernie Ghuzeman, of Milwaukee, who made a very pleasing impression in Mullen's last show when he forced Eddie Anderson to quit, will oppose Jackie Hausner of New York at 124 pounds.

George Butch and Patsy Flanagan, St. Louisans, will mix at 124 pounds and Babe Herman, who has been trained and groomed by Jack Dempsey, will tackle one of the toughest lightweights in the country in Mike Dundee of Rock Island, Ill.

The preliminaries will see Charlie Nashert opposing Bob Sage in eight rounds at 155 pounds, and Jimmy Gorry against Tiger Cline at 150 pounds.

Dempsey, in his sparring exhibition, will face Alex Trambitas, a welterweight.

WORLD RECORD BY MISS STINE ACCEPTED BY NATIONAL BODY

By the Associated Press.

MAMARONECK, N. Y., Dec. 8.—One new world's record, one new national record, and two new preparatory school records, were officially accepted today at the annual meeting of the National Women's Collegiate and Scholastic Track Athletic Association meeting, held at Oaksmere School, it was announced by Miss Susanne Becker, secretary of the association.

To Elizabeth Stine of Leonia, N. J., high school, is credited the new world's record, a high jump mark of four feet, 10½ inches. The new national record, eight seconds for the 60-yard hurdles, was set by Josephine Schessler of Agnes Scott College, Georgia, and the new girls' preparatory school marks of 34 feet 6¾ inches, for the eight-pound shot put, and of 80 feet for the javelin throw, were made in a recent Oaksmere School meet by Helen Messit of Oaksmere School and Katherine Fields of Briar Cliff, respectively.

Dr. Barry E. Stewart of New Haven was re-elected president. Other officers elected were: Howard Cleveland of Long Beach, Cal., vice president; Miss Susanne Becker, Mamaroneck, N. Y., secretary, and Joseph A. D'Angola, Newark, N. J., treasurer.

Zbyszko Arrives Here Tomorrow

Ancient Pole to Oppose Hussane at Coliseum Thursday Night.

Stanislaus Zbyszko, grand old man of the wrestling game and former heavyweight champion, will arrive in St. Louis today to train for his coming match with Yusiff Hussane the "Terrible Turk." The contest is booked as one of the attractions of a mat card to be held next Thursday night at the Coliseum, under the direction of Tom Packs, a former Chicagoan, who has supplanted John Contos as promoter of wrestling bouts in St. Louis.

Zbyszko is scheduled to work out this afternoon at the National Gymnasium with Dan Koloff, a Bulgarian grappler, who makes his home in St. Louis. Josef Gurkeweicz, a 215-pound Polish wrestler, who is scheduled to oppose Champion Lewis in the main event of Thursday night's card, will also train with Zbyszko. Lewis will reach St. Louis tonight or Monday morning, according to a wire from his manager, Billy Sandow.

Logas Meets Norman.

Promoter Packs announced last night that he has booked Jimmy Logas ,a Greek middleweight star, with Williahm Norman, a Pennsylvania mat artist, for a one-fall preliminary bout. Logas gave a fine account of himself in two recent matches here. He defeated John Stoeff at the Odeon and wrestled George Tragos to a draw in a hectic tussle at the Coliseum.

Packs has not found an opponent for Jimmy Londos, the Greek heavyweight champion, who is on his way from California to appear in the Coliseum show. The match with Londos has been offered to Dick Daviscourt, an American heavyweight, but Daviscoutr has not replied to the promoters' offer. In the event negotiations are not consummated today, Londos will meet John Freiburg in a one-fall match.

The Coliseum program will call for five contests when Londos' opponent is named. In addition to the bouts previously mentioned, Packs has arranged for Renato Gardini, an Italian favorite, to meet Jack Bruno of Denver, in a one-fall match. The Lewis-Gurkeweicz event will be decided by the best two out of three falls.

Phoenix and San Diego Tie.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 8.—Elevens from the Phoenix, Ariz., High School and San Diego High battled here this afternoon to a scoreless tie.

Pikers Schedule Only Four Games With M. V. Teams

Washington to Play Grinnell, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma Next Season.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 8.—Failure of the University of Kansas and the Kansas Aggies to arrange a 1924 football game was an outstanding feature of the schedules arranged here late today at the annual meeting of the Missouri Valley Conference.

Both schools held Oct. 18 open, however, and planned a conference in about ten days to iron out their differences as the result of charges by the Aggies that university players were unnecessarily rough in their game this fall which resulted in a scoreless tie.

Final action on the application of Oklahoma A. and M. for membership in the conference was deferred until the May meeting after a tentative vote of four to five against admittance.

Directors Form Conference.

Athletic directors of the conference organized themselves into a separate association for consideration of schedules and other matters directly concerning inter-conference competition. Ben G. Owen, director at the University of Oklahoma, was elected president of the new association and Dr. F. C. Allen, director at the University of Kansas, was named secretary-treasurer.

The conference itself, which is composed of faculty representatives and considers principally matters of eligibility, re-elected S. W. Byer of Ames, president, and W. G. Manly, of the University of Missouri, secretary-treasurer.

March 8 was set as the date for the annual valley indoor track meet at Kansas City.

Tiger-Kansas Date Undecided.

The conference took no official cognizance of the football standings for the 1923 season, as no championship is awarded. The season ended with Kansas and Nebraska at the head of the standings, each with 1000 per cent. Kansas won three and tied three conference games and Nebraska won three and tied two.

The date of the annual Missouri-Kansas gridiron contest was left undecided. The M. U. Athletic Board will pass later on the proposal of Kansas to play the game on the Saturday before Thanksgiving rather than on Thanksgiving Day.

Football schedules were announced as follows:

UNIVERSITY OF KANSAS: Oct. 4, open; Oct. 11, open; Oct. 25, Nebraska at Lawrence; Nov. 1, Washington at St. Louis; Nov. 8, Drake at Des Moines; Nov. 15, Oklahoma at Lawrence; Nov. 22 or 27, Missouri at Columbia.

Deals Involving Star Players Are Expected; Draft Issue Up Again

Trades for Hornsby and Shocker, Two of St. Louis' Leading Lights, Are in the Making, According to Chicago Reports.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, ILL., Dec. 8.—The biggest convention in the history of baseball opens here Monday to continue for six days, with an attendance of more than 1200, ranging from the lowest bush leagues to the richest major, and the prospects of the biggest player market ever held.

No less than 18 meetings of individual leagues, including the American and National Leagues; a joint session of the two major leagues presided over by Commissioner Landis, and a meeting of all the minor leagues of the nation, and their board of arbitration, will go to make baseball history in the biggest week of conferences the game has ever known.

It will be first time that officials of all of the leagues of the country have assembled in one session.

Besides a flock of pending playing player trades and sales, the most important business of the conference appears to be the Pacific Coast League presidency dispute, which is closely interwoven with the draft problem; settlement of rumored dissatisfaction with Commissioner Landis over the handling of the world's series, disposition of a reported $200,000 fund in the commissioner's hands, and the Seattle club transfer; and the draft issue in the International League, Pacific Coast, American Association and Western League.

Player Deals Expected.

The convention is expected to produce at least a half dozen important player deals, as almost all of the major league club owners have declared that "We will trade any player we have if we can improve our club."

It is expected that a deal involving Rogers Hornsby, star second baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals and 1923 batting champion of the National League will be consummated, while overtures for the services of Eddie Collins, captain of the White Sox, may be made. Urban Shocker, pitching ace of the St. Louis Browns, may be traded during the week, as a result of his dispute with the management that led to his suspension on charges of insubordination.

The convention will open Monday with individual meetings of the American Association, Southern Association, Pacific Coast and Western Leagues, and also a meeting of the minors' board of arbitration, which will attempt to settle the Pacific Coast League presidency wrangle. The National and American Leagues will meet on Tuesday, with a joint session scheduled the following day.

Coast Leaguers Wrangle.

The recent election for president of the Pacific Coast League is the chief business to come before the board of arbitration on Monday. The board will be asked to decide whether William H. McCarthy, former president, or Harry A. Williams, Los Angeles newspaper man, was duly elected president. Williams received the vote of the club owners, while McCarthy was supported by three clubs, but McCarthy takes the stand that the Seattle club, one of the members to vote for Williams, was not entitled to vote, as it was a "syndicate" club, backed in part by William Wrikley Jr., owner of the Chicago Cubs and the Los Angeles club. Wrigley has admitted he indorsed a note to help Wade Killefer, former Los Angeles manager, to purchase the Seattle club. The Williams supporters claim that McCarthy, as president, recognized the Seattle club in everything pertaining to the league. The McCarthy-Williams fight also tangled up with the draft question as McCarthy was the prime mover in keeping the Coast League from subscribing to the major leagues' draft offer.

Landis' Efforts to Gain Control Over Umpires Likely to Cause Controversy

Commissioner Landis' office now has a surplus of upwards of $200,000 and the question of what to do with this amount is likely to bring forth some brisk discussion. According to the contract entered into between the commissioner and the major leagues, the president of the American and National Leagues are custodians for this sum. Part of the criticism leveled at the commissioner dates back to the world's series, when the commissioner went to New York and announced details of the world's series arrangements, except the appointment of umpires without consulting either President Johnson of the American League or Heydler of the National League. The commissioner followed this move by calling for a joint session of the majors on the day the American League constitution provides for its annual meeting.

Opposition is Expected.

President Johnson avoided a clash by moving the date of the American League forward a day, President Heydler agreed to break the National League's custom and meet in Chicago instead of New York. The amendments to be presented to the major league agreement by Commissioner Landis, are expected to develop considerable opposition. One of the chief points which is said to meet with disapproval by the league heads is the proposed amendment giving Landis authority over the umpires. Some members of the Pacific Coast League have been strong in their denunciation of the Commissioner's decisions in the Seattle-Portland issue when Manager William Kenworthy and Owner William Klepper were suspended.

The draft question promised to retain its customary position in the limelight. The American Association, International and Pacific Coast Leagues are scheduled for a joint meeting on Monday to discuss a plan regarding the draft which will be submitted to the majors. It is generally believed that the arrangement, which the Western League accepted last year would be acceptable to the three Class A leagues. According to this plan a club is allowed to retain its own developed players. These not being subject to the draft. If McCarthy loses his Pacific Coast League fight, it is believed that circuit will accept some form of draft.

Many Trades Are Expected.

The American Association at it meeting is expected to complete its business quickly, adopt the schedule for the 1924 season which will probably call for 154 games, and award the pennant to Kansas City. The sale of the Toledo club which it is understood Roger Bresnahan is anxious to dispose of, may hinge on the outcome of the league's action on the draft.

The conference next week gives promise in being the biggest trading and sales market in the history of baseball. Business along this line promises to become brisk as soon as the majors and minors reach some agreement on the draft. It is known that at least 10 big trades involving players in the Pacific Coast League are on the fire.

Two of the biggest deals in baseball are said to be in the making. These involve Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Nationals and Urban Shocker of the St. Louis Americans. Hornsby came to blows with Manager Rickey last season and was suspended. He is anxious to be traded, and the Chicago and New York clubs are said to have made generous offers. Shocker, who was suspended for violation of the rules of his club, has asked Commissioner Landis to declare him a free agent. It is understood that the commissioner will decide that Shocker's case is a club matter, and the player will be told to report to his club.

Reconstruction of the Boston Braves under the management of Dave Bancroft; selection of a new manager to replace Mike Kelly of St. Paul, who purchased an interest in the Minneapolis club; the reappearance of Kid Gleason, ex-manager of the White Sox, with some major league club; efforts of Clarence Rowland to get control of a Class AA club, and the trading plans of Frank Chance, who returns to Chicago in charge of the White Sox, are only a few of the market possibilities affecting player trades.

Bowlers Journal Team of Chicago Wins Five-Man Championship In Middle West Tournament

Winners' Score of 3071 Set New Tourney Record—Thirty-Five St. Louis Quintets Rolled 2700 or Better—Event Ends Today.

Chicago teams captured four of the first five positions in the five-man event of the Middle West tournament, the Bowlers Journal finishing first with a total of 3071, which set a new tournament record. The Horlick five of Racine, Wis. was fifth. The Puritans were the highest St. Louis quintet with a 2986 total which gave them seventh place. Bowling in the five-man event ended last night.

There were no changes in the leaders of the tournament by yesterday's bowling. The Blackers five of Indianapolis turned in a 2993 total and was high for the night.

In the doubles event Dunne and Hager of St. Louis who totaled 1216 were the best pair and in the singles A. Berger of St. Louis led with 623.

The tournament will be concluded with today's schedule which consists of doubles and singles events only. The first squad starts this morning at 9 o'clock and the final shift at 9:15 tonight. Many star bowlers from Indianapolis, Kansas City, Omaha and Milwaukee will compete.

Smith Gets 656 Total.

Jimmy Smith of Milwaukee rolling with the Smith Arcades totaled 656. He is considered the most dangerous competitor for Harry Deen's position at the head of the all-events division. He needs 1294 in the doubles and singles to gain first place and is generally conceded to be a better bowler in these events than in the five-man. He bowls tonight at 5:45 o'clock.

Of the 359 local teams in the tournament 35 bowled scores of 2700 or better.

George Falkenbach of St. Joseph, Mo., the present holder of the tournament record in the singles event will compete.

INDIAN DANCE STEPS MAY HELP RUNNERS

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Dec. 8.—From the intricate and twisting, wriggling dances of the Indian tribes of the West, A. J. Sturzenegger, scout of the University of Michigan football team and special coach of halfbacks and ends, hopes to evolve some new steps to teach his Michigan football proteges and enable them to elude their tacklers next season.

Coach Sturzenegger, on his way to California, stopped off in several Western towns where Indian reservations still remain and carefully charted the manner in which the Indians did their dances. From these terpsichorean efforts, he hopes to find some new steps his halfbacks can use and others which will benefit his end men.

NOTRE DAME LIMITS SCHEDULE TO 8 GAMES

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 8.—The Notre Dame football schedule for 1924 will be held to eight games, it was decided at a meeting of the athletic board yesterday. The team for the past several years has been playing 10 games a season. Members of the board said their action in cutting the schedule was necessitated because of interference of football games with class work of team members.

The board did not decide whether Wisconsin will be given a place on the 1924 schedule, deferring action on the question until next week.

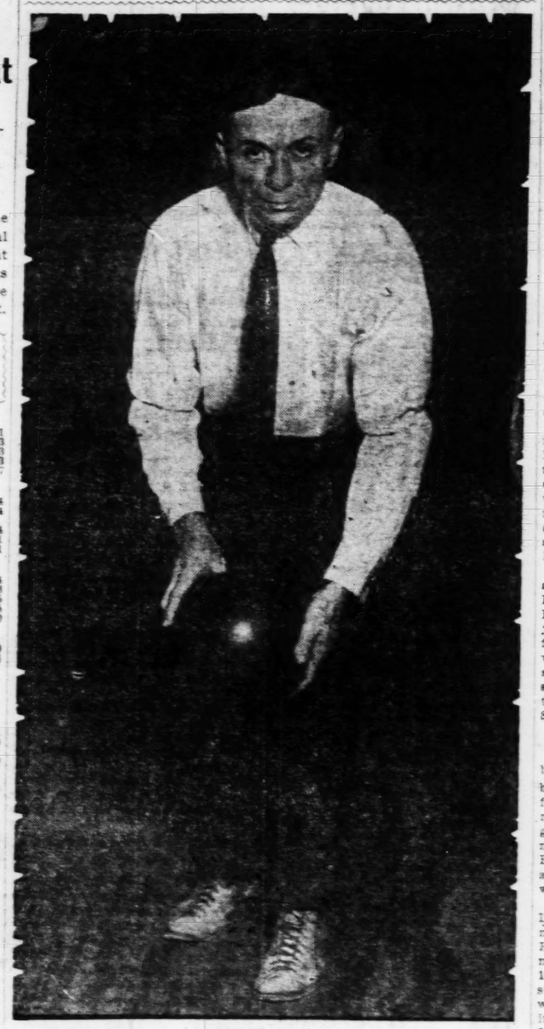
SCHLAIFER-FREEDMAN CONTEST IS CANCELED

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 8.—A proposed 10-round bout between Morrie Schlaifer, Omaha welterweight, and Sailor Freedman of Chicago, which was to have been held here Dec. 17, was called off by William Kavan, boxing inspector of Omaha, today, following a conference with George Koster, State Boxing Commissioner of Lincoln. Kavan was quoted as saying the action was taken because of a poor showing Freedman is reported to have made in New York last night in a fight with Herb Brodie of Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Frankie Genaro, American flyweight champion, has signed to defend his title in a 10-round decision match with Al Pettingill, Southern flyweight, at Philadelphia, Jan. 8, Phil Bernstein, Genaro's manager, announced today.

St. Louis' Only Mid-West Leader



HARRY DEEN.

He established a new tournament record in taking first place in the all-events with a total of 1949 for his nine games. The previous high mark was 1946, set by George Geiser of Chicago at Kansas City last year.

Close Formation Plays Not Good Enough, Past Grid Season Proved

"Backfield on Attack," Walter Camp Writes, "Must Be Opened Out, Played Looser With a Broader Basis From Which the Attack May Radiate."

By Walter Camp.

(Copyright, 1923.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The close of the football season has brought with it several sober reflections as to the sport. Those who have gone wild at mid-season over their own home teams as world beaters have for the most part received some salutary lessons.

Even Yale, Illinois, Michigan, Cornell and California, as well as West Virginia, had some very close calls after they apparently were on the broad highway to success. And Notre Dame, Syracuse and Minnesota came croppers just at the moment when they saw a glorious finish awaiting them.

The final games of the season showed that in this gridiron sport you never can be sure. Cornell's experience with Penn was quite typical of what may happen.

The Case of Cornell.

Here was a team whose attack curried it some four times within what appeared to be easy scoring distance for the "Big Red Team." But the first time they lost the ball, and only a brilliant forward pass repaired the damage and gave them the touchdown which, it turned out later, they needed to win the game.

On the other three occasions the superhuman fighting spirit of the Red and Blue enabled them to hold Cornell, and had it not been for a penalty, that first score might have been Cornell's only one. In that case the later touchdown and goal of Penn would have tied the score.

And yet Penn, outside of her forward passing, had no plays that were really dangerous to Cornell unless, as she did, Cornell gave Penn the ball on her own 25-yard line by a fumble. But just the same, the Ithacans were mightily relieved when the end came with their team one score to the good.

Close Formations Not Good.

Now just a few words about some of the other lessons of the past season. First, the old close formation plays are not good enough. They are passing into the discard. The backfield on attack must be opened out, played looser with a broader basis from which the attack may radiate. The teams which adopted these methods had by far the greater successes. Line men also are swinging into the interference on the far side much more generally.

The forward pass that is not well concealed may prove a boomerang, and far more effort must be spent upon masking it.

Evry team needs a strong kicking game, and without that, no matter had good the running game may find itself in difficulties.

Teams must be taught a game serviceable in wet weather as well as dry, for they are likely to have a soft field on some important day of the season, and must know exactly what to do and what not to do under such circumstances. Overconfidence has tripped many a team that had sailed along on fast fields and then suddenly found that on a wet field their "cut-in" plays and "speed" men were hopeless and helpless.

And so the winter will be full of reflection for coaches and players, if they really mean to get something of value upon which to build for the future. But we shall find, out of the welter of it all, a higher type of play and still more advanced tactics.

NEBRASKA LED ALL VALLEY SCHOOLS IN FOOTBALL ATTENDANCE

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 8.—The University of Nebraska shattered Missouri Valley attendance records during the football season just closed, with a total attendance of 69,495 persons, according to J. K. Selleck, treasurer of the Cornhusker athletic board of control. This does not include thousands of members of the "knot-hole club," local school children, who attended the games at reduced prices.

The Notre Dame game drew the largest crowd—52,230 persons, nearly filling the stadium. The Orangemen of Syracuse attracted 17,499 persons and there were more than 17,500 at the Kansas University game and more than 11,000 at the Kansas Aggie game.

Bethlehem Eleven Wins.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Dec. 8.—In defeating the Newark F. C. here this afternoon in an American Soccer League game, the Bethlehem F. C. opposed a team brilliant and effective on the defense but lacking on their forward line. Because of this brilliant defense, the Bethlehems were successful in annexing only two goals, winning by the score of 2 to 0.

Large Basketball Squads Practicing At High Schools

Veterans Fighting With Newcomers for Positions on First String Quintets.

The training period for the Interscholastic League basket ball championship season, which will open Jan. 5, is now on in full swing, and the coaches in charge of the various teams are holding daily sessions on the school courts. Many players who starred in the games last year, have graduated and will not be among the candidates this year. Several others have fallen behind in their academic work and will be barred from competition.

Yeatman has the largest squad in point of numbers. Seventy-five North End students have reported to Coach Lewis since the initial call for candidates was issued. This will be Lewis' debut as a basketball mentor in St. Louis. He was assistant football coach this year and assisted Stanley Hill materially.

Three letter men from last year are eligible for the Blue this year, Hannegan, Hannibal and Engler. Hannegan is limping from an injury to his knee received in the final football game of the year, but will be in shape. A number of second string men of 1922 are seeking places on the five. Among them are Bell, Muchow, Moslank, Schact, Pabst and Enns.

Soldan Is Working Out.

Soldan, under Harry White, has been working for the past week, but the practice has been confined to the new material. A great many of the new comers have been given the gate and the Union avenue squad now numbers 30. The Brown and Gold will participate in a number of pre-season contests with independent teams.

Shaw, Rawden, Washburn and Lawrence are the returning letter men of the West End quintet, and Roberson, Hager, Reuter and Layman from the second team of 1922 are seeking positions. Reuter suffered an injury last season which prevented him from becoming a regular, but he is now in fine shape. Layman is a lanky youth who looks well on the pivot. He possesses unusual height and reach and will probably be the regular center for White's outfit.

Central is working hard under Coach Callan. The Red and Black is more fortunate than its rivals in the matter of returning veterans. Dave Crystal, Sollie Goldberg, Will Thomas are three regulars who are again on hand. From the scrubs of 1922, Callan has Cameron, Hunt and Browne. Two players of some ability, Gockel and Kutterer, will be available after the mid-year examinations.

Fegan Is a Possibility.

A fair collection of likely looking prospects are among the recruits. Two of these, Zook and Holser, have already made good. "Buck" Fegan, former captain of the St. L. U. High School, is another possibility for the Red and Black after the present semester has been completed.

At McKinley there has been a complete house cleaning. No letter men will be on the 1923 squad. The Crimson will be forced to develop a five from the second string men of last year and the incoming material. Coach Lee Carlson will likely request former Coach Lorenzen to assist him.

Cleveland, under the leadership of R. F. Neuman, a new mentor, is working hard. A squad numbering 150 at the first few practices, has been reduced to fifty. Two letter men are available at this time, Williams and Konzleman. Four members of the 1922 quintet will report the latter part of January. They are Reinhardt," Pate, Musgrove and Smith.

SMITH AVERAGES 216 BEATING LAMBERT IN 5-GAME TENPIN MATCH

Jimmy Smith of Milwaukee defeated Wooster Lambert of St. Louis 1080 to 943 in a five-game tenpin match yesterday afternoon. Smith rolled an average of 216 and had but one open frame, a split, in the five games, while Lambert, who bowled an average of 180, had three errors and five splits.

Smith is here to roll in the Middle West tournament. He was formerly the world's champion bowler, a title he lost to Jimmy Blouin of Chicago. He was defeated by Blouin a second time last year in a match for the title by 22 pins in a 60-game match. Smith has challenged Blouin again and expects to meet the champion soon after the holidays.

The scores:

Lambert	189	192	190	192	179	943
Smith	215	213	196	223	233	1080

YOST HAS BEEN COACH OF 8 UNBEATEN TEAMS

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Dec. 8.—"Hurry Up" Yost, since becoming football coach at the University of Michigan in 1901, has groomed eight teams that have gone through the season undefeated.

Yost started on the right foot in 1901 when his team won all 11 games on the schedule and then duplicated the feat in 1902. The next championship team was in 1904, with a tie with Minnesota in 1902. There was then a jump to 1910 when the Yost eleven was undefeated but tied by Case, Pennsylvania and Ohio State.

The next lapse took them to 1918 when the Wolverines won their five games. They gathered six victories in 1922, tying Vanderbilt. This year they won 10 games, and a tie for the conference championship.

Lively Golf Ball Helps the Dub Improve His Game, Sarazen Writes

Rubber Core Hasn't Made It Any Easier for the Good Player and Changes in Course and Lighter Ball Would Merely Make It Hard for the Average Shooter.

By Gene Sarazen,
(American Professional Champion.)

(Copyright, 1923.)

I was interested in the recent experiment with the gutta-percha and the golf ball now in use, made a short time ago in England. The test seemed to prove that the ball now in use is superior to the old gutty. I am not very familiar with the old ball, but from what I have heard and judging from the various experiments which have been made, I should say there was no comparison.

With the gutty it was a case of slug as hard as you could on every shot. Since the rubber core has come into use the game has changed considerably in many respects and the golf swing is somewhat different from the style the old-timers used. For one thing I should say that iron play in general has improved tremendously since the rubber core was put on the market, and that the game as a whole has speeded up as a result.

The impact of club-head and the gutta-percha produced a kind of jar or kick-back that was uncomfortable. Of course, it was impossible to get the distance that can be obtained with the new rubber sphere and on holes where you can get home with two shots now, it was all one could do to get there in three shots using the old rubber ball.

Easier to Control New Ball.

But where the real gain has been made is in the stroke itself. Every shot now is made from a direct hit rather than a sweep. It was said before the experiment in England the other day, that the younger golfers would find difficulty hitting the gutta-percha with the same stroke they use in hitting the present-day ball.

But Wethered, who was the low scorer in this competition, Tolley and the others proved the direct hit was fully as effective as the old stroke, if not more so.

Much more can be done with the present ball. Not only do you have to hit it properly to score well, but you must stroke the ball in the right manner—in a sort of delicate fashion, to acquire control and to bring off some of the shots required today.

It seems to me one can do a lot more with the present-day ball in the way of shot-making. The present-day ball hasn't made the game any easier for the good player, but it has enabled the poorer golfer to better his game and to get more enjoyment as a result.

There is some talk of reducing the weight of the present ball. I don't believe it will make any material difference in the game or the scores. But if the authorities lighten the ball too much the poorer player will never get around on a windy day.

One thing about this new ball. If you miss a shot you are more likely to get into trouble than you were playing the gutta-percha. For a topped 1 62 will run like lightning and, it seems, always into a trap.

Some Fear Phenomenal Scores.

It is said that it has been necessary to lengthen all courses as a result of the great distances obtained with the rubber core. That is a fallacy. Long courses are not necessarily difficult and it has been proved that a short course can be made as good a test as an exceptionally long one, if it is trapped properly.

The long hitters would score fully as well regardless of the kind of ball used, as Wethered and Tolley demonstrated, and any change made is sure to affect the average golfer more than the star. Many well-meaning persons are so afraid of the games getting beyond control, and of a deluge of phenomenal scores, that they are constantly urging some kind of change either in the ball or the club.

The gutta-perchas so far as I have been able to discern, had but one advantage only—it was a better putting ball. The reason for this was due to the fact one could hit the gutty harder. But I think the present day ball demands a more delicate putting touch in order to negotiate the greens.

DEMPSEY SERVES AS "CONSULTING" JUDGE IN COURT FOR SPEEDERS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, became Judge Dempsey of the Speeders' Court for a short time yesterday.

The champion, here to participate in an athletic exposition for a Christmas Basket Fund, sat on the bench as a "consulting judge," and with Judge Fred Gilster heard the stories of defendants charged with traffic law violations.

Later Dempsey was made a defendant in mock proceedings and sentenced to 30 days imprisonment, but released on probation with a warning that he must not fight again for a year unless he needed the money.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 8.—The annual meeting of the Stewards of the Grand Circuit will be held in Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 7 and 8, when dates for 1924 will be allotted, Win H. Kieser, secretary, announced today. The probabilities are that the season will open at North Randall July 4.

OKLAHOMA CONFERENCE MAKES CHANGE IN RULE ON PROFESSIONALISM

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Dec. 8.—College athletes in Oklahoma who are found guilty of professionalism in the future will not be disqualified from the entire field of collegiate amateur athletics but will be classed as ineligible only in the sports in which they participated as professionals, under an amendment to its rules here today by the Oklahoma Intercollegiate Conference, in annual session.

This radical departure from previous rules which has debarred professionals from all forms of amateur sports, was hailed by collegiate sport followers as the greatest step forward in amateur athletics in years.

Vespers Oppose Municipal Team In Cup Contest

Professional League Eleven Should Win Easily in Third Round Contest.

The comparative merits of local professional and amateur soccer will be again put to trial at High School Field this afternoon when the Vespers, of the St. Louis Soccer League meet the Ben Millers of the Municipal organization in a third-round national challenge cup game.

Unless the Vespers are so careless as to underestimate the ability of their opponents, there should be no question as to the outcome. It is possible, however, that the professional team will be weakened in the backfield by the absence of Goaltender LaBarge, who is injured. Manager McCarthy contemplates switching Fullback Hack to goal and using Scott at full with Fitzgerald. The possibility of such a change in defense increases the slim chance of the amateur team for victory.

Coached for Game.

Former professional league players have assisted the Ben Millers in their course of training and it is said that the public park team has shown appreciable improvement in the fundamentals of passing and teamplay.

The Vespers are probably the fastest team in the professional organization and one of the best in the country. If they conquer the Ben Millers they will probably be drawn against the Semillins of the same league in their fourth round national cup game, several weeks hence.

There will be but one game this afternoon, the starting time being 2:15 p. m. John "King" Flannigan, former star center halfback and club manager, will be the referee.

America's Supremacy in Sprints Jeopardized by Injuries to Two Greatest Runners in Country

Paddock, With Sprained Ankle, Ordered Home for Month's Rest—Murchison Still Under Doctor's Orders as Result of Automobile Accident.

By a strange coincidence, America's two greatest sprinters recently suffered injuries which threatened to remove them from competition for months and as a result, this country's chances of winning the sprint events in next year's Olympic games were jeopardized.

Loren Murchison, former St. Louisan, was painfully hurt in an automobile accident near Philadelphia on Nov. 26 and Charles Paddock, the "world's fastest human" sprained an ankle at basketball practice at New London, Ia., last week. Neither injured man has tested himself since his injury and therefore it is impossible to determine the full consequences.

Advices received yesterday from Philadelphia and Burlington, Ia., indicate that whereas Murchison has almost fully recovered from a severely wrenched back, Paddock still experiences pain in the twisted ankle.

Paddock has canceled a speaking tour of the Middle West and has entrained for his home in Los Angeles where he will rest for at least a month before putting the foot to a test.

Dispatches from Philadelphia and Burlington follow:

Paddock Goes Home.

BURLINGTON, Ia., Dec. 8.—Charles W. Paddock, world champion sprinter, left here this afternoon for his home in Pasadena, Cal., where he will rest and nurse a sprained ankle back into running trim.

Local doctors who treated the speedy Californian stated that he would suffer no permanent ill effects from the injury provided he kept off the affected foot for at least three weeks. The penalty of ignoring this behest they said might be an end to his running days. Paddock did not seem unduly concerned over his injury suffered Wednesday afternoon as he engaged in basketball practice with the high school quintet at New London, Ia., near here.

The Golden State speeder made no statement of his future racing plans beyond saying that he hoped to compete in the next Olympic games. He seemed confident that his injury would not slow up his speed on the track.

"It seems when a fellow suffers an injury, it must always fall on the most important part of the anatomy," Paddock said, and referred to the injury that resulted in the loss of a finger to Bill Tilden, tennis champion.

"However, I do not believe that my injury will effect me permanently and think that a good rest at home will put me in shape to resume track practice again."

An X-ray picture of Paddock's injured ankle taken in a Burlington hospital revealed that no bones were broken. When seen before his departure today for his home on the coast, the sprinter said the injury was still giving some pain.

Murchison May Resume Work.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 8.—Loren Murchison, holder of several track records, including world marks, a long list of National A. A. U. championships and America's leading indoor sprint star, only awaits his physician's approval before he resumes active training to get in shape for participation in indoor track and field competition this winter.

The blond sprinter, injured in an automobile accident here recently, has recovered to such an extent that he now feels capable of engaging in light workouts in preparation for an active indoor campaign. This seems to set at rest any feeling that America has lost its leading hope for first-place victories in the sprint events at the Olympic meet at Paris next year.

The athlete whom Charles Paddock, highest point scorer for the United States in the 1920 games at Antwerp, calls the leading dash man in America today, has made a rapid recovery.

Back Muscles Torn.

It has developed the former St. Louis runner's condition was at first reported to be much worse than it really was. While severely cut and bruised about the body and forced to lay idle for a time, his condition was less serious than most persons supposed.

His actual injuries included a deep gash on the right side of his face and torn muscles of the back. These were bad enough, and without the proper care would have incapacitated Murchison for some time and might have ended his track career.

The report that Murchison was unable to walk with comfort was entirely true.

Hopes to Run Jan. 19.

Yesterday he left for New York to again consult the specialist and should he approve the trial Murchison will return to this city and have a workout here Monday. In view of the plans he has laid for himself it will be necessary for "Murch" to begin training as soon as possible.

He plans to defend all the honors he now holds and this in itself would be enough to keep him busy. In addition he plans to enter a number of other meets where titles are not at stake and get in as many races as possible during the winter. With his physicians' approval he will make his first appearance of the season in the Osceola games which are to be held in one of the armories in New York on Jan. 19. Murchison is scheduled to compete in a 60-yard dash. He is the present holder of the world's record for this distance indoors.

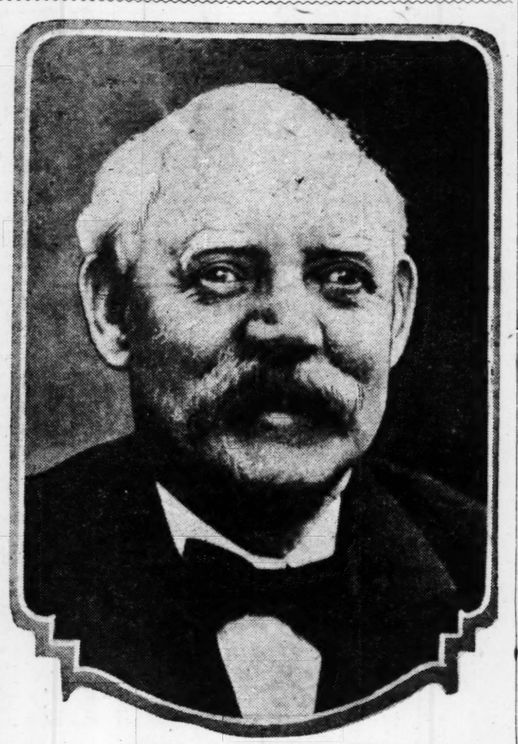
The Athlete's "Dr. Lorenz"



JOHN D. "BONESETTER" REESE

"Bonesetter" Reese the Lorenz of Baseball, Started in Steel Mill

"Repaired" a Man Hurt in Accident and Later the Ohio Legislature Passed a Special Act Giving Him the Right to Practice—He Never Names a Fee for His Services.

Everybody who knows baseball, from the grandstand or the sport pages, has heard much of "Bonesetter" Reese, but few persons know that besides being a great manipulator of muscles and adjuster of ligaments, he is one of the most unusual characters not only in the world of sport, but in the world.

Few persons, for instance, know that the Ohio Legislature, by a special act, gave him the right to practice his profession. Few persons know that he is not a chiropractor or an osteopath or a doctor of medicine. Few persons know that he never names a fee for his services.

"Bonesetter" Reese's name is John D. Reese. He came to America from Wales as a poor immigrant lad and went to work in a steel mill, near Youngstown, O. Today he has more money than he can use.

Among men in the sport world the "Bonesetter" has treated are John McGraw, Honus Wagner, Ed Walsh, Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb, Harry Steinfeldt, Urban Faber, Everett Scott, Battling Nelson, Willie Ritchie, Jack Britton and Stanley Ketchel. He also has adjusted obstreperous ligaments for Theodore Roosevelt, Charles Evans Hughes and Fred Stone. Statesmen, actors, boxers, baseball players, millionaires and paupers have gone into the waiting room at Youngstown to be treated by the Bonesetter.

A Student of Anatomy.

Reese always was fond of the study of anatomy. He got his start as a repairer of men through an accident. A fellow workman at the mills was hurt. Reese took him in hand and fixed him in a jiffy. Soon all the men in the mill were calling him "Bonesetter." There was a great demand for his services. But there were objections from the medical profession and Reese declined to practice "bonesetting" until he could do so legally. The matter was brought before the Ohio Legislature and a special act gave Reese the right to practice. It is the only act of its kind ever passed in Ohio.

Reese never advertised his ability. He has never prescribed medicine of any kind, nor has he ever named a fee for his services. In the early days of his career he met with considerable opposition from the medical profession, but his succession of good works served to heal the breach and today some of his greatest boosters are doctors.

Reese has never posed as a cure-all. Hundreds of cripples have visited him for consultation only to be frankly told that they were beyond his aid, or that the injury was such that he could not benefit them. It was his candor in this respect that assisted materially in establishing him as outstanding in the extensive field of healing.

Treated Bat Nelson.

Battling Nelson first consulted Reese about 14 years ago, following a battle Nelson had with Frankie Whitney at Atlanta.

Nelson arrived in Youngstown with both hands so sore from displaced ligaments he was unable to carry his grip out of the car. An appointment was made for him with Reese.

Reese adjusted the ligaments and then inquired Nelson's name. Upon learning that he was the former king of the lightweights, "Bonesetter" insisted upon an informal chat. Upon departing Nelson inquired the cost of the service. Reese said there was no charge because he was happy to have worked on "one of the gamest men that ever pulled on a glove."

Several years ago "Bonesetter" Reese announced he would never again work on a ball player. His reason for the ultimatum was that the players rarely carried out his advice as to rest, and old conditions returned causing him to be blamed for the ineffectiveness of the "cure."

A Noteworthy Cure.

Probably the most noteworthy cure effected by the local man was that of a prominent Michigan auto manufacturer. This manufacturer while inspecting an addition to his factory slipped and fell from a scaffold. A serious hip injury resulted. He was bedfast for seven months and was told he would have to walk on crutches for the remainder of his life. The auto manufacturer visited all the noted specialists in this country and in London and Paris in an effort to have the use of his right leg restored, but to no avail. Sixteen months after the accident, while still on crutches, he made the acquaintance of a ball player who had been treated by Reese. The ball player extolled the virtues of the "Bonesetter."

The auto manufacturer went to Reese's home in a carriage and hobbled into the office on crutches. In ten minutes he was able to walk without them. So remarkable was the cure the patient fainted.

The crutches were kept by Reese. The patient walked out to the carriage. Before departing he told Reese the cure was worth more than he could afford to pay, but that he would remember him.

Municipal Teams In Amateur Cup Contests, Today

St. Matthews Opposes St. Bridgets, While Union Electrics Play St. Liborius.

The four teams of Fairground No. 4 group, will play the first round games of United States Football Association National Amateur Challenge Competition at Fairground No. 4, this afternoon. The St. Matthews and St. Bridgets will play the first game, while the Union Electrics and St. Liborius meet in the second.

Both contests will be counted as regular league games and 45-minute halves will be played.

This is the first time in the history of the Municipal Soccer League that elevens have been entered in the amateur cup tie of the U. S. F. A.

20,000 SEE FIRPO IN AN EXHIBITION BATTLE

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 8.—Luis Firpo, the Argentine heavyweight fighter, this afternoon made his first public appearance since his return from the United States. He gave a four-round exhibition with his former trainer, Joe Boykin, at an entertainment for charity.

Firpo appeared to be in good shape, and the boxing critics noted a remarkable improvement in his ring tactics since he was here last year. A crowd of about 20,000 cheered enthusiastically.

OKLAHOMA BROKE EVEN FINANCIALLY ON ONLY TWO FOOTBALL GAMES

By the Associated Press.

NORMAN, Ok., Dec. 8.—Rain and floods combined to keep the 1922 football season at the University of Oklahoma well under the average as regards gate receipts, according to figures just compiled. At the start of the season, communications between Norman and Oklahoma City was interrupted by a flood on the North Canadian River. The Washington University team, which opened the season, was obliged to cross the river in boats, but most of the Oklahoma City fans decided not to follow.

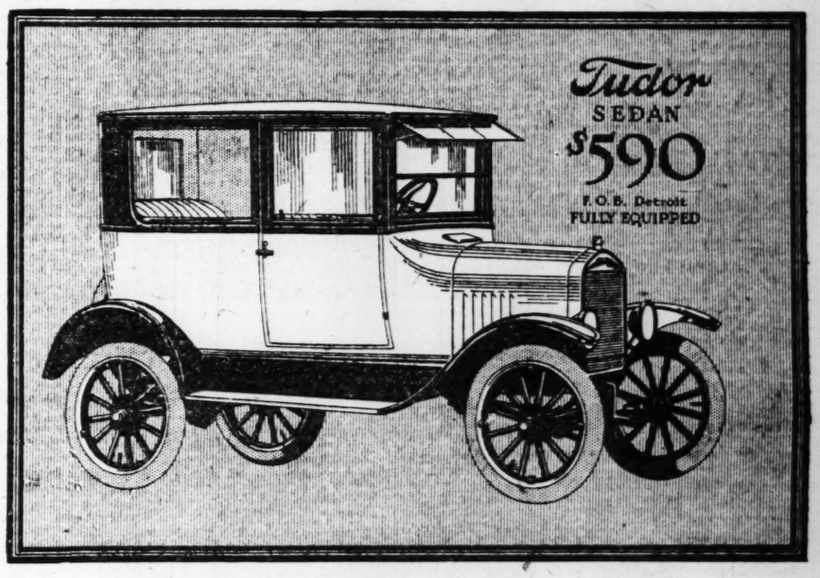
High water again interfered at the time of the Oklahoma Aggies game, Oct. 27, when 4584 persons paid admissions. The heaviest gate was on Nov. 3, when the Kansas Jayhawkers drew a crowd of 5871.

These two games were the only ones on which the athletic department broke even financially, according to John Jacobs of the department. Losses were sustained on the games with Washington and Drake.

Stribling to Box Rosenberg.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8. — Young Stribling, the Georgia schoolboy who almost took the world's light heavyweight title away from Mike McTigue, will make his metropolitan debut Dec. 19 at Newark, N. J., in a 10-round no-decision bout with Dave Rosenberg of Brooklyn. For a time Rosenberg was recognized by the New York State Boxing Commission as world's middleweight champion.



Give One For Christmas

The Tudor Sedan is a gift every member of the family will share. It adds to daily happiness. It will extend the joyous spirit of Christmas to every day of the year.

This new Ford type is of an exceptionally pleasing design. Wide doors opening forward, folding right front seat, and a roomy interior make it a convenient car to use; its high radiator, broad cowl, sun visor, and large windows make it stylish in appearance. Yet it is sold at the lowest price ever asked for a Sedan—only $590 f. o. b. Detroit.

The rich permanent luster of its finish, the quiet good taste of its upholstery, and the ornamental treatment of its full-nickeled hardware, all help to make it a car you are proud to drive.

Only 2 Homers Made Off Luque In 1923 Season

Remarkable Record Established by Cuban Pitcher in Spite of Hitting Craze.

RAY BLADES GOT ONE

George Kelly of Giants Obtained Only Other Circuit Wallop—1148 Batters Faced Luque.

There were 548 home runs made in the National League in 1923, but only two of them were made off the pitching of Adolfo Luque, star hurler of the Cincinnati Reds and we might add, the National League.

The curves and shoots sent through by Adolfo were difficult for the opposing batsmen to hit safely and the hurler is lucky these days who gets by without permitting more than the average number of long drives to be made off his pitching.

Of the 1148 batsmen who faced Luque last season only Blades of the Cardinals and Kelly of the Giants hit the ball hard enough to make the circuit. Blades' drive came on April 28 and Kelly made his June 8. Neither one cost anything, for the Reds won both games. Of the 1148 batsmen only 11 of them connected with the Cuban's delivery for three-base hits and 27 made two-baggers.

17 Homers Off Alexander.

Considering the lively ball and the craze that prevails for long-distance hitting, the work of Luque is remarkable and it is not at all unlikely that he leads the pitchers of both big circuits in this respect. For instance, Grover Cleveland Alexander, in the 27 games he pitched last season suffered 39 doubles, 11 triples and 17 homers to be made off his pitching. Walter Johnson pitched in 42 games and was hit for 44 doubles, 21 triples and nine home runs.

Adolfo Luque has had rather a peculiar record during the 12 seasons he has been in organized baseball. Back in 1913, Adolfo had a trial with the Boston Nationals, but didn't do much. Boston in 1914 and 1915, tried him again, but the Cuban didn't seem to strike his stride and was with Jersey City and Toronto during the greater part of those seasons. With Toronto in 1915, Adolfo began to show what he could do and had a very successful season. With the Louisville club during 1916-17-18, Luque had splendid success and in consequence was signed by the Cincinnati club.

It was a great day for Cuba on Aug. 8, 1918, when two of its native sons played on the same team. On that date Manuel Cueto played second base and Adolfo Luque pitched his first full game in the big show. The pitching of Luque was the feature of the contest. He held the Giants to four singles, which permitted his team to win by a score of 5 to 2. Cueto and Luque made half the hits credited to the Reds, which was 10. In the final games of that season in a double-header, Luque pitched the second game against the St. Louis Cardinals, winning 1 to 0. This game gave the Reds third place, the highest position the team had finished in since 1904. This brilliant work made it easy for Adolfo to continue his big league career, and he is still pitching sensational ball.

Most Effective in 1922.

In 1922, Luque pitched the most effective ball of his career, that is so far as hitting was concerned. That season 1053 batsmen faced him and made 266 hits, a percentage of .243. Luque won only 13 out of the 38 games he hurled, or a percentage of .361. In 1923, 1148 batsmen faced him and made 279 hits, a percentage of 243 made off his pitching, exactly the same as in 1922, but in 1923 he won 27 out of the 35 games that counted. The team finished in second place both seasons.

During 1922 Luque encountered almost every known jinx, but he survived, and in 1923 the breaks came his way and he came through with a splendid record.

Adolfo Luque was born in Cuba in 1891 and came into organized ball in 1913 with such a galaxy of Cuban stars as Armando Marsans, Emilio Palmero, R. Acosta, J. Acosta, Manuel Cueto, J. del Calvo and Rafael Gonzales. About that period there were 16 native-born Cubans in organized ball in the United States and all possessed class, but today Adolfo Luque stands out as the most famous of all Cuban ball players.

Luque, in the seven seasons in the league baseball, has won 85 out of 149 games, for a percentage of .570.

Soccer Players Here in Need Of Coaching, Ratican Says

West Point Instructor and Famous Center Forward Writes Instructive Articles to Improve Game.

By Harry J. Ratican,
Coach of West Point Soccer Team and Expert Center Forward.

This is the first of a series of instructive articles on soccer, designed to improve the game as played in St. Louis.

WITH the object in view of furthering the development of soccer in St. Louis by attempting to remove a few objectionable features from our game and by pointing out the proper method of play, I have written the following series of articles:

Some excellent judges of soccer have recently told me that the game here has ceased to progress. If this be true, it is because of a lack of method in teaching the younger generation of players. Since there are no imported coaches in the city, our younger players are learning the game almost entirely by practice and instinct. The best examples after whom they may fashion and improve their game are players of our professional league, and, as a matter of fact, the standard of play in this organiztion leaves much to be desired.

Bad Football Habits.

Without coaches and without any organized method of practice, our youngsters are falling into bad football habits. The game is unnecessarily rough. A premium has been placed upon sheer speed and aggressiveness and skilful dribbling and scientific combination play, artful heading and other features which make the game both attractive to the spectator and effective in goal scoring, have been almost entirely neglected.

The obvious reason why there is so little attempt to pass the ball with the head is the danger that exists from the wild, reckless charging of unskilled opponents. Clean aggressiveness is to be encourage but the practice of charging the man simply because of an inability to play good football serves to discourage all the better elements of the game. If it becomes dangerous to head the ball there will be less heading. If a clever dribbler has his shins kicked unmercifully by a crude blustering halfback, there will be less dribbling. The boistrous, reckless fellow who has spent no time in practice or study of the game survives and the man who has learned something of technique is chased out of the game. He drops his efforts at scientific play and does a bit of reckless charging himself.

On the other hand, I believe that we have wonderful native talent here in abundance. Our speed and aggressiveness so astonished and pleased the Swedish players, when the St. Louis team went abroad in 1920, that they immediately attempted to copy our style. However, one may be sure that they will not allow their scientific combination play to suffer thereby.

The ideal type of winning soccer, I believe, is a blend of the typical English game and the typical St. Louis game. If local teams can retain all their superlative speed and characteristic open play and at the same moment develop smooth teamplay and skillful individual control of the ball, there is no limit to the possibilities of the game here.

Must Understnad Principles.

Practice, of course, is the greatest aid to the development of team play. However, it is essential that each member of the team have a thorough understanding of the fundamental demands of his position. It is chiefly in this direction that these articles on soccer may do most good. If players know what is expected of them and appreciate what tremendous improvement they can effect in their play by intelligent passing and concerted team movement, the game as a whole will be benefited.

To approach perfection there are certain things a halfback must do and there are certain other things which he must never do. To learn these principles by experience alone is a tedious process. To have them pointed out by a coach may prove a short cut.

(The second article of this series will appear in tomorrow's Post-Dispatch and will deal with the duties of the goal tender.)

Ratican Recognized As One of Greatest Players in America

HARRY JAY RATICAN, St. Louisan, has for the past two years coached the United States Military Academy (West Point) soccer team. He has been for many years recognized as the foremost soccer center forward in America.

Ratican twice toured Scandinavian countries, playing with American teams. His first trip was in 1919 with the Bethlehem Steel team, then national champions.

His wide experience has afforded him ample opportunity to study the merits of the various styles and methods employed by the highest class soccer teams.

In the accompanying series of articles, Ratican will endeavor to point out how the game may best be played.

SCOTT HIGH DEFEATS CEDAR RAPIDS AND CLAIMS GRID TITLE

ILLINOIS MAY PLAY NAVAL ACADEMY TEAM

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—The University of Illinois eleven, if it accepts a game with the Navy next fall, will insist that the Middies play in the new Illinois Stadium in 1925, football officials said here last night. Illinois may engage the Navy in the East on Oct. 11, a week before the Michigan-Illinois game. If the game is arranged, it will be the first time in 20 years that the Illini have made a trip East.

FOUR LETTER MEN ON GRINNELL CAGE SQUAD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GRINNELL, Ia., Dec. 8.—Four letter men, Capt. Benz of Council Bluffs; Winter of Clinton; Gelvin of Marshalltown, and Critchett of Grinnell, will form the nucleus of the 1924 varsity basket ball squad at Grinnell College. Other members of last year's squad who will be back in uniform are: A. Boge, Frehm, Cushman, Edwards, Bunnell, Wilson, Stock, Nicolet and Stotts. Cathcart of Sioux City, Sweet of Minneapolis, Scharnweber of Mitchell, S. D.; Wing of Greenfield, and Seeland of Independence, are some of the outstanding men from last year's freshman squad who will make keen competition for varsity positions.

Chicago Club Is Awarded W.G.A. Open Tourney

Selection of Course for Amateur Left to the Executive Committee.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—A record increase in membership was reported tonight by the Western Golf Association at its annual meeting, present officers, including President Charles O. Pfeil, Memphis, Tenn., were all re-elected and the Calumet Country Club of Chicago was selected for the open championship in 1924.

Selection of a course for the amateur championship was left with the executive committee which announced that the contest will be played on some Chicago links to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the association.

With the acquisition of 78 new member clubs in 1923 the association now has a total membership of 422 clubs in 38 states.

The executive committee will also select a links for the junior championship.

No Discussion on Rules.

For the first time in several years no question of rules or golfing authority came up for discussion.

The phenomenal growth of the association was reflected in the remarks of Ed P. Martin, who was president in 1903, four years after its organization. He said that during his incumbency there were only 48 clubs. The organization started in 1899 with 11 clubs.

Crafts W. Higgins, for many years executive secretary of the association told the members that he has been present at 24 of the association's 25 annual meetings and has watched its growth from 11 clubs until now the largest golf association in the world.

"If all of the golf associations in America ceased to exist the game would continue its rapid growth," James D. Standish Jr., Detroit, a director in the United States Golf Association, declared. "Golf is beyond all of the associations in the country," he said.

Standish, who is chairman of the public links tournament, said that, while he had never seen a public links before taking charge of the public links championship, he had been surprised at the national interest in the affair.

More About Professionals.

An incident of the meeting showing the elevation of the golf professional golfers' association. Only rie, president of the Illinois professional golfers association. Only a dozen years ago golf professionals were not allowed to enter a club house and not until after the national amateur open tournament at the Midlothian Country Club in Chicago in 1914, were professional golfers admitted to club houses on a par with amateurs, he said.

Tonight, for the first time in the history of golf, Pirie and Phil Gaudin represented professional golfers at an annual meeting of a major golf association.

Other officers, all re-elected, are: vice president, Melvin A. Trayler, Chicago; secretary, Joseph W. Busch, Chicago; treasurer, A. C. Allen, Chicago. Directors: J. K. Wadley, Texarkana, Tex.; W. J. Foye, Omaha; N. J. Clarke, Cleveland; A. S. Sperry, Seattle, Washington; W. M. Armstrong, Los Angeles.

Georgetown Is Dropped.

By the Associated Press.

NEWTON, Mass., Dec. 8.—Georgetown is missing from the Boston College football schedule for next fall, as announced tonight but two important games have been added to the list, Syracuse on Oct. 18, and the Haskell Indians on Nov. 1.

DOBIE TEACHES CORNELL ELEVEN TO HOLD BALL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The Cornell football team, under direction of Gil Dobie, went through another successful season without anything approaching the menace of a defeat. Cornell's football is the football of precision and it takes a ripping defense to upset it. Once under way, the Cornell attack carries off the tackles with speed and power, no matter who is carrying the ball, and is usually a consistent gainer.

One of Dobie's theories is the value of continued possession of the ball. If he can hold it long enough his team, even though not scoring fast, can prevent the other team from piling up the points. It does not follow that this is another instance of the idea that "the best offense is the best defense." Continued possession of the ball uses up time and robs the opponents of just so many plays by which they may attempt to score.

It is not uncommon to find the Ithacans letting the ball go on downs, or passing in opponents' territory on the fourth down, even over the goal line. With the terrific drives off tackle the Ithacans use, the pressure on, and if the ball goes on downs there is sufficient reliance on the defense to get it back again in a few moments. Not that Cornell's kicking game is bad; simply that it is not called upon so frequently as in the case of most other elevens.

Only 12 working days remain in which to enroll and earn one of these sturdy, handsome Coaster Wagons.

Get four new subscriptions to the POST-DISPATCH and know the joys of earned ownership.

These are "last chance" days for fun-loving boys and girls who yearn for earned ownership of this "Coaster Wagon Aristocrat." They are days fraught with opportunity for all who are willing to work for this worthy prize and determined to make each day count for progress.

This is a final opportunity, too, for the parent or other adult relative of the small boy or girl who expects Santa Claus to bring an Aero Flyer. There can be no truer interpretation of the best Christmas spirit than to gladden the heart of the little lad or miss on Christmas morning by the fruit of your own effort, directed toward satisfying his desire for this safe, speedy, health-developing playfellow.

More than 5500 boys and girls have been made happy by Aero Flyer awards. Yet there are ample stocks and ample delivery facilities for those who earn Aero Flyers during these closing days of the campaign. No boy or girl who complies with the requirements will be disappointed.

It is of great importance, though, that all who enroll understand the requirements fully. And we again urge all to

READ CAREFULLY THESE TERMS OF THE OFFER

Offer is open only to persons who are not identified with the sale or distribution of the POST-DISPATCH, and who reside within St. Louis carrier delivery limits, including East St. Louis, Belleville, Granite City, Venice and Madison in Illinois; and Kirkwood, Webster Groves, Florissant, Valley Park and Maplewood in Missouri.

4 subscriptions are required—each for six months. No extra credit for yearly subscriptions.

New subscriptions are required—from persons not now reading the Daily POST-DISPATCH, whether purchased from newsboys or newsdealers, or delivered by carrier.

Daily subscriptions are required. No credit allowed for Sunday POST-DISPATCH subscriptions. A Sunday POST-DISPATCH reader who has not been reading the Daily POST-DISPATCH may subscribe through you under this plan.

Verified subscriptions are required. We investigate the validity of the order and the subscriber's responsibility. All orders are received subject to acceptance or rejection by the POST-DISPATCH.

Home-Delivered subscriptions are required. Business district readers are better served by newsboys and cannot be included under the terms of this offer. This makes necessary a definitely restricted area and orders will not be accepted for delivery within the district bounded

DUTCH SCHOONER WITH $250,000 RUM CARGO TAKEN

Prohibition Agents Say Craft Brought Over Stocks to "Mannie" Kessler, Convicted Bootlegger

MAPS OF LONG ISLAND COAST FOUND IN SAFE

Skipper and Crew Arrested After Two Coast Guard Cutters Bear Down On Vessel and Board It.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The Dutch auxiliary schooner Zeehond, known to prohibition forces as the "Zeehound," the venturesome transport which brought to American shores from island rum ports the vast stocks purveyed by "Mannie" Kessler, the "bootleg king," was seized by coast guards today off Fire Island inlet.

At her stern fluttered the Tricolor merchant flag of the Netherlands. In her hold was $250,000 worth of the finest champagnes and whisky.

Capt. H. I. Krans, the skipper of this steel-hulled rum cask and 11 picturesque crew of nine, stolid, bearded, baggy-breeched Dutchmen, were paroled in the custody of the Dutch consular agent pending examination by Federal authorities, while in the Tombs prison, whither they were sent after conviction of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws, "Mannie" and the commander of his rum forces, Morris Sweetwood, received news of the capture.

Counsel for Kessler and Sweetwood later announced that they had withdrawn their appeal from the sentences of two years' imprisonment in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, and would spend Christmas behind the bars.

Registered From Netherlands.

The Zeehond is owned in the Netherlands, according to official registration, but Kessler was believed to have controlled all her operations insofar as the carrying of liquors was concerned.

Capt. Krans declared that this was untrue. The 2500 cases of champagne and the numerous cases of whiskies and cordials in his schooner, he insisted, were to be taken to a banker in Halifax, whither the ship was bound, according to her papers.

But then, Capt. Krans' cabin safe gave up some interesting documents, among them a map of the Long Island coast, showing the inlets and other features interesting to mariners heading their vessels that way. There were lists of residents in Long Island coasts towns.

These names were friends and acquaintances, the Captain said, but they are to be used by Government agents in an investigation of rum runnings in the section.

Stopped "For Repairs."

The skipper admitted that the Zeehond had been lying in rum row for a week or more, but not to discharge any of her cargo. Rum row was an interesting place, he said, and he had anchored down there to repair a donkey engine. The weather turned bad and he moved closer inshore that the repairs might be made hurriedly and the schooner shaped to proceed to Halifax.

The schooner was lying several miles off the inlet early this morning when sighted by the coast guard cutter Seminole. Word of the discovery was sent by wireless to the cutter Lexington, also on patrol, and both cutters then bore down on the Dutchmen and were alongside before she could get under way.

The crew offered no resistance and the boarding party of coast guards ordered her turned harborward. Captain Krans readily complied, but declared that the seizure was illegal. His cause was taken up by the Dutch Consular agent, who announced that he would investigate the case and determine the legality of the seizure.

U. S. Proposes New Treaty of Commerce With Holland.

By the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, Dec. 8.—The American Minister, Richard M. Tobin, has approached Foreign Minister Van Karnebeek with a view to opening pourparlers on the subject of a new treaty of amity, commerce and consular rights on a most favored nation basis. The Dutch Government has agreed in principle. Negotiations also have commenced with a view to reaching a settlement regarding the transportation of intoxicating liquors on board Dutch vessels in American waters.

Gets Verdict for $2500.

By the Associated Press.

HANNIBAL, Mo., Dec. 8.—A jury in United States Court here today found for J. A. Harris of Weaver, Ia., against the American School of Osteopathy, of Kirksville, Mo., and awarded him $2500 in his $50,000 suit in which he alleged that treatments received at the school's hospital had permanently injured him. The jury found in favor of Dr. George Laughlin of Kirksville, who had been made a co-defendant in the case.

K. K. K. Cross on Davis Obelisk.

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky., Dec. 8.—The fiery cross of the Ku Klux Klan was burned last night at Fairview, 12 miles from here, on the top of the concrete obelick now being erected in the Memorial Park at the birthplace of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy. This obelisk is now 250 feet high. The cross itself was about 20 feet tall. Preceding the burning of the cross, two klansmen entered the Methodist Church, where the Busy Bee Club was holding an entertainment, C. R. Gregg, who is building the obelisk, being an active worker in this club. To him they handed $10.25 and a letter, asking for permission to burn the cross on the monument, which was granted.

$18,000 FOR LOSS OF LEG

Jury Finds for Car Checker Against Toledo, St. Louis and Western.

A jury in Circuit Judge Hall's court yesterday returned a verdict for $18,000 in favor of Hilbert Stuart Allen, 46 years old, of Madison, Ill., against the Toledo, St. Louis & Western Railroad Co. for the loss of his right leg. Allen was injured while checking cars in the company's yards at Madison, Oct. 27, 1922. His leg was crushed under car wheels, necessitating amputation five inches below the hip.

He sued for $100,000, alleging negligence by other employes. As the accident occurred when the railroad company was in charge of Walter L. Ross as receiver, Allen's lawyer, H. R. Polak, contended that the judgment also should be against the receiver but Judge Hall sustained a demurrer on the ground the receiver had been discharged.

The company made the defense that Allen, who formerly was a school teacher, assumed the risks of the job and also was guilty of contributory negligence.

CORPORATION TO RUN BARGE LINE PUT UP TO WEEKS

War Secretary Urged to Indorse Plan to Form $10,000,000 Government Concern for Service.

BILLS TO CREATE IT TO GO TO CONGRESS

Delegation, Pleased With Reception at War Department, Says Weeks Seemed Sympathetic.

By a Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Plans for formation of a $10,000,000 Government owned corporation for development of the Mississippi barge line were laid before Secretary of War Weeks today by members of the Senate and House Rivers and Harbors Committees, accompanied by James E. Smith of St. Louis, president of the Mississippi Valley Association, and M. J. Sanders of New Orleans.

Bills authorizing the creation of such a corporation will be introduced in the House and Senate next week by Representative Cleveland A. Newton of St. Louis, and Senator Ransdell of Louisiana, it was announced after the conference, which lasted over an hour.

Secretary Weeks told the delegation that flexibility of management and more appropriations were needed for river improvements. The Congressmen were pleased with his reception of their plans and stated that the Secretary seemed sympathetic to their corporation idea.

Questions Advisory Board.

Sanders, in introducing the corporation proposition, said that the Mississippi could not be developed to its utmost capacity until shippers realize that the barge line was permanent. He declared that he and his associates were against the Government going into business, but that at the present time no private organization could force coordination with the railroads, which was the first prerequisite of profitable management.

The corporation, he explained, would have an unpaid advisory board, selected by the Secretary from different parts of the valley from Texas to Pennsylvania. This board would meet with Col. L. Q. Ashburn, chief of the Inland-Coastwise Waterways Service or his successor and the Secretary of War would have power to veto all its decisions.

Secretary Weeks said he believed this would add more red tape to the management, but Senator Reed of Missouri attempted to show that it would cut red tape as the board would present only matters of general policy.

Reed to Help Revise Bills.

Secretary Weeks asked the old question about transfer of the service to the Department of Commerce. Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania explained that immediate action was necessary from the War Department, and that if the corporation were authorized, the service could be more easily transferred to any department or to private interests. Senator Reed of Pennsylvania joined his colleague by adding that the work of army engineers might be complicated by such a change.

Senator Brookhart of Iowa said he was not opposed to the transfer if immediate action could be obtained for channel improvement.

"I am perhaps the only person in this room who favors Government ownership," the Iowa Senator said. "You can call that a bolshevist idea if you will, but I believe the Government could run these lines efficiently. I favor immediate action on these improvements, but I am not fundamentally against transfer to another department."

James E. Smith explained that his association favored the corporation plan, as it would give performance to the river development idea. He stated that millions had been spent on the Mississippi and that money was needed now to make the funds expeided bring in returns.

Senator Ransdell an dRepresentative Newton said Senator Reed of Missouri would be called upon to help revise the bills before they were submitted to Congress.

AIR SPEED RECORD RATIFIED

Established by Lieut. A. J. Williams at Mineola, Nov. 4.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—The International Aeronautic Federation this afternoon ratified the world's speed record for airplanes made by Lieut. A. J. Williams, the American aviator (winner of the 1923 Pulitzer Trophy race), at Mineola, L. I., on Nov. 4. Lieut. Williams' speed, as given in the ratified record, was 429.025 kilometers an hour.

As given out after the record-breaking performance of Lieut. Williams at Mitchel Field on Nov. 4, his speed was 266.68 miles an hour. The record in kilometers, as stated in the Paris dispatch, works out within a small fraction of this speed.

The House of the Interpreter

A Little Sermon on Home Ownership by One of America's Best Known Ministers

There is no agony more poignant than that of feeling we are in the way. The elasticity goes out of the step, the speech becomes slower; the reaction to youth and the response to the call of hurry is slow, and at times, even to the nearest and dearest, a little tiring.

When that time arrives, and a man finds himself in somebody else's home, the agony is intensified a hundredfold.

We give different reasons at different stages of life for home ownership. It means one thing to youth and another to maturity. As I come up the hill and get a glimpse of the sunset side, I find my chief reason for owning a home is the desire, if I get in the way, to step aside under a roof that I have paid for.

I demand of myself that all others under my roof shall be guests. To the last breath I want to be host. The place may be small, inconspicuous, but it's mine, mine, bought and paid for by money that was transmuted energy of my body!

The incentive that a man's wife, co-partner in his work and mother of his children, should share this independence is just as great for her as it is for himself. They both dread dependence—no matter upon whom.

There are times and circumstances when a man loses his home, can't help himself. Then the very soul seems to go out of life. That is the time when a man regrets he did not pay more attention to this question of a home. It's too late then, however. Time goes not back, he can not retrace his steps. The mistakes that seemed to him to be mere footprints in soft sand are now turned to bronze, forever unalterable.

If there is a reason which is closely allied to this one of independence in age, it is that the house I own shall be to me the House of the Interpreter. I don't want to be a Pilgrim, just passing through. I want to be the interpreter, the host, the entertainer and the guide. I want to sit in the twilight when the day's work is done and call out of the past the companions of my youth; I want the furniture I have gathered around me to be vocal, the pictures to be alive. I want men and women to walk out of the books on the shelves and give me greeting! This involves no philosophy of spooks, but just pure fancy and creative imagination.

In an age in which the home is rudely invaded by the world, I want to make mine a place of repose, a quiet sanctuary, a meeting place of friends, a place to which the family can come back and renew their youth.

Having neither wealth nor elegance, there is yet left to me in the possession of a home the chance for atmosphere—the atmosphere of personality. And that in the sunset of life is worth all the struggle, all the sacrifice.

The realizations of age depend upon the efforts of youth. NOW is the time given you to make a home of your own. Nor were values in properly appraised home properties ever more interesting and worth while.

Study carefully those offered in the Post-Dispatch's "Real Estate" columns. Go and see them, get the reasonable terms upon which they may be purchased—and then invest. It is investment in freedom and financial security such as only mature age can fully appreciate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Vilhjalmur Stefansson, noted Arctic explorer, is enthusiastic over the proposed aerial expedition to the North Polar regions next summer by the United States Navy, seeing in it "the initial voyage in a new era of trans-arctic air commerce."

In a letter to Rear Admiral Wm. A. Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics and chairman of the Naval Arctic Air Board, Stefansson says that important work will be accomplished by such an expedition, and placed at the disposal of the Navy Department the benefit of his knowledge of conditions in the Arctic region.

Stefansson has a vision of the development of the commercial aviation via the Arctic route in the near future, "when the Arctic will be covered by a net of airways somewhat as the Atlantic is now covered by the tracks of steamers."

STEFFANSON OFFERS TO AID ARCTIC TRIP

Explorer to Place His Knowledge of Conditions in Polar Area at Disposal of Navy.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Vilhjalmur Stefansson, noted Arctic explorer, is enthusiastic over the proposed aerial expedition to the North Polar regions next summer by the United States Navy, seeing in it "the initial voyage in a new era of trans-arctic air commerce."

In a letter to Rear Admiral Wm. A. Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics and chairman of the Naval Arctic Air Board, Stefansson says that important work will be accomplished by such an expedition, and placed at the disposal of the Navy Department the benefit of his knowledge of conditions in the Arctic region.

Stefansson has a vision of the development of the commercial aviation via the Arctic route in the near future, "when the Arctic will be covered by a net of airways somewhat as the Atlantic is now covered by the tracks of steamers."

"If this enterprise succeeds in initiating such an era," he said, "then it will, in my opinion, be in the class of the voyage of Columbus, doubtless not quite so important, but nevertheless entitled to comparison in the very exclusive group."

Admiral Moffett received a letter from H. H. Hammer, representative of Capt. Roald Amundsen in this country, who arranged for the participation by the navy in Amundsen's proposed flight to the North Pole next summer in heavier-than-air planes. Lieut. R. E. Davison of the Navy has been detailed to the Amundsen flight and will command one of his three planes.

The special board appointed to work out detailed plans for the naval expedition today received valuable suggestions from Capt. A. J. Henderson of the coast guard service concerning weather conditions and possible locations for bases in Alaska. Capt. Henderson indicated that a few feet difference in altitude at Point Barrow in the summertime makes a very great difference in temperature. For example, he has known instances where it was so cold on deck that an overcoat was absolutely necessary while at the same time a man at the masthead could not wear one without feeling uncomfortably warm.

This bit of information was considered of great importance in considering possible aerial activities in far northern latitudes and is said to support the belief of scientists that the colder temperatures reported at the surface in the Arctic are due to the effect of the ice. At altitudes above the surface it is believed that the 24 hours of sunlight in the summer months give comparative warmth.

Capt. Henderson offered every facility of the coast guard in the transportation of supplies and equipment for an Arctic base. He pointed out, however, the difficulties incident to establishing bases for airship operations as far north as Point Barrow, stating that ships could not reach the shore there until the first of August to lay down supplies. None, on the other hand, can be reached months earlier and already is equipped with machine shops and other facilities which would prove of great value to the expedition.

WILLS TO FORMER WIFE $6000 FROM ALIENATION JUDGMENT

Man Who Dies of Burns Gives to Her What He Got for Loss of Her Affections.

The will of John Clayton Losch, 53 years old, of 3024 Hawthorne boulevard, who was fatally burned last Wednesday in an oil explosion at a Standard pumping station of which he was manager, was filed yesterday. It was made at City Hospital just before he died and left his estate to his former wife, Mrs. Mary A. Losch, from whom he was divorced, after giving $100 to a daughter.

The principal asset is said to consist of $6000 paid to him a month ago by John E. Friede, proprietor of a welding company, in satisfaction of a judgment for alleged alienation of the affections of Mrs. Losch. The alienation case was tried in Circuit Judge Hamilton's court two years ago.

INDIAHOMA FIRM SOLVENT, REPORT TO COURT HOLDS

Special Master Recommends That Receivership for Refining Company Be Denied.

CRITICISES DEAL INVOLVING RAILROAD

Statement Says Officers Overstepped Bounds in Transaction; No Evidence of Fraud.

By a Special Corespondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MUSKOGEE, Ok., Dec. 8.—Recommendation that petition for receivership for the Indiahoma Refining Company be denied is contained in the report of Grant Foreman, special master, filed in United States District Court here late today.

The special master declared he found no evidence to prove fraud or mismanagement on the part of company's officers. While the company is in a straitened financial condition, according to his findings, he asserts it is solvent. He places the entire blame for the company's difficulties on the existing general depression in the oil business.

In only two instances does the special master uphold the allegations of Hugh D. McCorkle and Irwin J. Hesley, trustees under the will of Gustav Wamganz, who brought the original action to force a receivership.

The special master finds officers of the company handled its affairs in such manner to conserve assets for stockholders, rather than dissipate funds and properties as charged in the second amended petition for receivership.

Rail Purchase Criticized.

Officers of the company, through William O. Schock, president, did overstep the bonds of propriety in purchasing the Okmulgee Northern Railroad, a nine-mile line affording traffic facilities for the company's refinery at Okmulgee, report asserts. This action is interpreted by special master as dividing allegiance of Schock and his colleagues between refining company and railroad company, from both of which they drew big salaries.

The other instance in which officers are cited for unbecoming conduct is in connection with issuance of the company's last financial statement. The special master asserts the statement, issued September 10, 1923, did misrepresent value of assets. In this connection report declares:

"I find from evidence that value of assets, contained in said consolidated balance sheet and mailed to the stockholders of said company, allowing for such depreciation as is indicated, is far in excess of the actual value of said assets. But I find from all the evidence that the defendant is owner of assets equal in value to amount of its debts and liabilities and I find, therefore, that the defendant is not insolvent.

Summing up, Special Master declares appointment of receiver would cause foreclosure by bondholders, resulting in the diminishing of assets. The only reason for receivership, in his opinion, would be to make possible suits against individual officers to recover funds misused or misappropriated. The evidence does not sustain charges of misuse or misappropriation, he concludes and if there has been irregularity of any kind, law provides a remedy in form of litigation to be instituted directly by the stockholders and not through receiver.

Capitalization Reached $7,00,000.

The Indiahoma Refining Co. was organized in 1912 with a capital of $150,000. In beginning and up until 1919, the Schock family of St. Louis A. W. Gieske of Baltimore, owned practically all stock. In 1919 following gradual increases in capitalization it was decided to increase capital again, this time to $3,300,000. For first time stock was sold to public. Other increases in capital were voted until Jan. of 1922, the capitilization had reached $7,500,000. Only $5,000,000 of this amount now is outstanding.

The company operates two big refineries, one of 10,000-barrel capacity, at Okmulgee, Ok. And a smaller plant, of 4500 barrels capacity at East St. Louis. It owns 602 tank cars, has 205 miles of pipe lines and an average daily crude oil production of about 500 barrels. Present officers of the company are: William O. Schock, St. Louis, president; J. J. Schock, Okmulgee, vice president; H. L. Wirick, Okmulgee, vice president; A. W. Gieske, Baltimore, vice president; H. A. Tingley, Baltimore, vice pre ident; J. A. Berninghaus, St. Louis, vice president; F. C. Winters, St. Louis, secretary-treasurer; F. J. Greve, St. Louis, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Directors are: E. E. Schock, E. W. Gieske, W. O. Schock, V. G. Duhnington, H. A. Tingley and E. L. Krause.

In attention to their salaries as officials of the refining company the special master found these men receiving large sums as officers of the Okmulgee Northern Railroad. E. E. Schock, as president, $12,000 a year; J. A. Berninghaus, as vice president, $24,000 a year; J. J. Schock, as secretary-treasurer, $24,000 a year; W. O. Schock, as vice president, $8000 a year.

When original petition for receivership was filed, a number of officers and directors were named as co-defendants with company. In two amended petitions names of officers and directors were eliminated. The report goes on to show that some 4000 persons, most of them residents of St. Louis and Baltimore, own stock in the corporation, which is chartered under the Oklahoma laws. Principal offices were in Okmulgee and St. Louis.

Suit for receivership was instituted by the Wamganz trustees after stockholders had watched quotations of stock on principal exchanges fall from $18 in October of 1922 to $1.37½ in October of this year.

Subsequent to filing of the original petition in October, a score of other stockholders have sought to interpleand. Their pleadings likewise will amount to naught if the special master's report is followed by Judge R. L. Williams in District Court.

Foreman's report goes into detail concerning the railroad deal in order to acquaint the Court fully with the facts. He found the Okmulgee Northern was not taken over by the Federal Government during war, and that under the national administration of railroads, had had a hard time paying expenses. H. L. Traber, Muskogee railroad man, was active head of Okmulgee Northern at the time. The report says Traber presented a deal for sale of the road through W. M. Powers, then traffic manager for the Indiahoma company.

The deal was put through in March of 1919, the report declares. To obtain funds, the railroad company issued notes for $85,338.77, which were indorsed by new purchasers. The buyers also agreed to guarantee interest on $242,000 in first mortgage bonds. With Indiahoma company's freight business as its principal source of revenue, it is asserted, the railroad company was able to pay the Schocks and Berninghaus their big salaries, as well as to retire its notes and pay interest on first mortgage bonds.

The report declares specifically the refining company obtained better railroad facilities as a result of the deal than it enjoyed prior to change of ownership of the Okmulgee Northern. This condition, the report declares, did not result in financial loss to the stockholders, but it did put part of the profits into pockets of Schock's and Berninghaus. The "questionable propriety" of the railroad deal naturally would result in actions like the present petition, the special master finds.

Aside from the railroad deal and misstatement of assets in the September, 1923, statement, the report has nothing but commendation for the official acts of the company's officers.

WARRANTS FOR TWO SOLDIERS

They Are Accused of Crossing State Line in Stolen Auto.

Arnold Scheer and Leroy Burns, private soldiers in the Sixth Infantry at Jefferson Barracks, are held on warrants charging them with violation of the Dyer act in the interstate transportation of a stolen automobile.

They were arrested in East St. Louis Friday in possession of a Ford sedan belonging to Hugo Weismantel of 228A King's highway Park.

SEEK TO INTERVENE IN HOUSING TRUST CASE

Petitioners Charge Millspaugh Acted to "Head Off" Inquiry Into Lincoln Firm.

Charges that the petition in Circuit Court resulting in appointment of State Finance Commissioner Millspaugh as receiver for the Lincoln Housing Trust was filed to "head off" inquiry into financial affairs of the trust requested under previously filed petition for receiver, are contained in an intervening petition filed in the Federal Court yesterday.

The intervening petition, signed by six certificate holders of the trust, seeks to intervene in the involuntary petition in bankruptcy filed in Federal Court Oct. 12 by four other certificate holders.

As is known, the Millspaugh receivership petition was filed and acted upon June 13, several hours after another receivership petition had been filed by J. A. Chambers and four other certificate holders. Millspaugh then explained that he rushed into court with his petition to prevent control of the trust from passing out of his hands, his department having been considering reorganization of the trust into a building and loan association.

The intervening petition declares that the Millspaugh suit was filed for the purpose of "heading off" the Chambers inquiry and was filed "at the invitation" of the officers of the trust and "at their request" in order to "enable them to accomplish their purpose of retaining control" of the funds of the company and to "use same for the financing of a new venture of their own choosing; and that they had the promise of co-operation from said Millspaugh to aid him in said purpose."

The finance commissioner, as receiver, and officers of the trust have opposed the bankruptcy petition in Federal court on the ground that it is without jurisdiction. This question has not been passed upon.

HIGHER TENDENCY MARKS TRADE OF WEEK IN STOCKS

President's Remarks on Railroad and Tax Problems in Message to Congress Favorably Received in Market—Foreign Election Affects Exchange.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Waiting markets which responded favorably to constructive developments have featured the last week. Underlying the whole market situation has been the evidence that the business community has recovered its equananimity with regard to the outlook. The reaction from the too rapid spring movement has run its course in an orderly fashion. Signs are not wanting that it is about at an end. While it is realized that patience must be exercised in the matter of new buying movements, the prospects are rather encouraging. The reaction is now looked on as a beneficial development which is likely to preserve and extend the period of prosperity. The actual convening of Congress, furthermore, has forced a closer examination of the vague fears of radical legislation and this examination has served to show that most of these fears have but a small substantial basis. The radicals will have the power to obstruct in this congress, but their ability to carry through any substantial part of their own program is quite doubtful.

"Under these circumstances President Coolidge's clean-cut and eminently sound message met with the response it deserved. The message goes far towards confirming the spirit of good business next year. It serves as a kind of insurance against Government meddling and encourages the belief that wise policies will prevail. The firm stand taken behind Secretary Mellon's excellent proposals for tax reduction, taken with the country's growing determination that these reductions must be put in finance, is a constructive factor of the first order. The Congress hardly can afford to disregard this lead. And the President's opposition to the bonus should help to kill that refuge for professional cowardice or at least to mitigate the danger from it. Leadership has appeared both from the Treasury and the White House, and the country's reaction to it suggests that a courageous facing of the facts still is a potent influence in national affairs.

Proposal for Railroads.

"The President's remarks on the railroads are particularly heartening because they are favorable both to better transportation and better business. At the present juncture what the railroads need most is to be let alone. They are in the midst of a successful comeback with regard both to service and earning power. They have met the needs of the moment and have laid the foundations for restoring their credit to its former strength. Another year of good traffic and fair rates will enable them to consolidate their positions and to embark on improvements which will provide for future growth. To continue their progress will mean better and cheaper transportation. President Coolidge recognizes the principle of a fair return as the rule of rate making. He advocates a scientific revision of rates, probably having in mind the possibility of reducing the rates on certain bulk commodities, such as grain and coal, and of increasing the rates on other classes of freight. His idea of revision does not contemplate a reduction of railroad income. His plan should forestall crude demands for flat reductions. And in urging voluntary consolidations with a hint of compulsory measures if such should prove necessary, he adds impetus to a movement which gradually is moving towards its natural conclusion and which will bring benefits to both the roads and the public.

"Wiping out of the Conservative majority in the British Parliament caused some reaction in the exchanges, but appears to be nothing in the way of a calamity. Protection is lost; but that will hardly weaken the British trade position. The rules of the election make a strong Government impossible; but there is a question as to how much even a strong Government could accomplish just now. After all, there is little that Britain can do at the present juncture but wait for the France-German struggle to come to a decision and for a reparations settlement to be evolved. In the meanwhile sound British fiscal policies will continue in force.

"In the most active market for the two-hour session seen in a long time, stocks continued to manifest that strong undertone which has characterized the trading during the past five weeks. At the start the market started off with a rush and the momentum which developed, especially among the high-priced issues carried the main body of stocks up a point or so and resulted in new high levels for a number of active issues. The early strength, however, stimulated the usual week-end profit-taking proclivities of traders and early gains were not maintained. Selling was well absorbed, nevertheless, and at the close the list was irregularly higher. Bonds were active and fairly steady.

Exchange Quiet Saturday.

Trading in the foreign exchanges was rather listless, partly owing to a church holiday in many countries, and the same condition prevailed at London. Sterling, French francs and the currencies of the Allied countries, however, were firm. In moderate dealings sterling was quoted ¼ of a cent higher at $4.34¾, while French francs advanced 2 points to 5.34 cents. The tone in other European rates, excepting Italian, was unsteady.

This week's statement of the Clearing House shows an increase of $12,500,000 in surplus reserve, the total standing at $25,500,000. Loans and discounts decreased $42,-614,000, and net demand deposits

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers Magazine and financial editor of the London Evening Post, in review today, says:

"Will Baldwin victory and a decisive labor defeat should have unfortunately affected the imagination and have stimulated at least a temporary trade revival, the outlook for commerce and finance, in view of the actual results of the election remains moderately hopeful.

"Even if the first development after the election will be a tendency to concentrate attention on domestic politics, and present indications suggest that Poincare is likely to show a somewhat more reasonable attitude. While all pressing reports about a German loan are premature, the feeling is slightly more hopeful. It is believed that representatives on the reparation commission, Sir John Bradbury acted with commendable discretion, and as a result commands considerable French respect and confidence.

Trade Improves.

"Altogether, aside from politics, the indications are distinctly better. More buying orders are received from the East and Far East, and further evidence of increased trade activity, is furnished by bank-clearings, which are advancing. This week's total was £822,000,000 against £743,000,000 a year ago. Even if this improvement will continue for a while, though it will not be much momentum behind it, the present situation clears quickly.

"In this connection opinions concerning the course of the exchanges, and especially of sterling because, while there is a disposition to hope for a maintenance or even an extension of the present position in the pound, it is recognized that any important trade revival must be preceded by a real growth in imports of raw materials. The preponderance of opinion reveals a further improvement in sterling, which will be due largely to the fact that dollars have been slightly overbought by those who are afraid of being short.

"Moreover, in considering the present exchange and trade outlook, the fact is not forgotten that other conditions may be adversely affected next year by the unsettlement preceding a presidential election, and that presently all the other countries will be faced more definitely with the problem of debtor countries endeavoring to make payments in goods and services amid embarrassments caused by protective tariffs.

Deposits Show Increase.

"Present indications favor a satisfactory banking year as regards trade and a generally sound position. Deposits, moreover, are showing a slight tendency to

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The following, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says:

"The foreign exchange market during the past week was governed to a great extent by prospects and results of the recent elections. At intervals during the first half of the week the market showed a strong tone, but advances were not maintained and when high levels were established there was a withdrawal of support by the leading exchanges. Until late Thursday, however, the market was held in good control, while moderate reactions being followed on the next advance upturn, but yesterday, when the results of the English elections were definitely known, there were offerings of sterling for foreign account, causing a weak front $4.38¾ to $4.38¼ for demand, but even on this decline the fair volume of business did not fail to the preceding level of the week when the was down 33⅓. An advance from $4.38¼ to $4.38¾ was attributed by banking dealers to Government support. Rallies caused by sterling, which will be due largely to the fact that dollars have been slightly overbought by those who are afraid of being short.

"Moreover, in considering the present exchange and trade outlook, the fact is not forgotten that other conditions may be adversely affected next year by the unsettlement preceding a presidential election, and that presently all the other countries will be faced more definitely with the problem of debtor countries endeavoring to make payments in goods and services amid embarrassments caused by protective tariffs.

GRAIN LIST LOWER ON LOCAL MARKET

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The leaders in today's market were some of the motors and motor parts stocks, a few of the steels and oils, and the shares of the electric manufacturing companies. Studebaker above 106, General Motors at 15 and Chandler above 63 were some of the accomplishments in the motor group. Later in the session the demands shifted more to the motor accessories, like Stewart-Warner and American Bosch Magneto.

Schulte and Tobacco Products were both actively sold in the last hour after having made new highs at the start.

The market became exceedingly irregular toward the end. There was heavy profit taking all through the list and the net result was a series of varied price changes. Steel common dropped below 95 after having sold well above that figure early in the day. Railway shares were inclined to sag off with one or two exceptions.

The Bond Market.

The bond market of today maintained the generally firm tone which has characterized it all the week. Interest, however, was concentrated almost exclusively on either the more speculative issues or certain of the new offerings, distribution of which has not been completed.

The new American Telephone & Telegraph debenture 5½s syndicate, support of which was withdrawn Friday, held at 98 or above as against the issue price of 98½, a noteworthy achievement for an issue amounting to $100,000,000. There was also a good market for the St. Paul Union Depot 6s, but the new Pan-American Petroleum 6½s lost ground, perhaps in sympathy with the reaction in the stock. The favorable reception accorded the better new offerings and the subsequent course of the same has greatly encouraged investment bankers and the outlook at the week-end is regarded as bright.

There was further buying of Erie bonds, all of which are up from 1 to 2 points on the week. The advance in Erie obligations has been very steady and the reaction very slight. It was not alone the general 4s and three-series of convertible 4s which found speculative favor, but the prior lien 4s were also eagerly bought.

Bond traders insist that the advance in Erie securities is simply recognition of an improved financial position of the road. While Erie obligations have been the most prominent other speculative rails have had their improvement also. This is the case with Missouri Pacific, Wheeling and Lake Erie, the International Great Northern, the Denver & Rio Grande and the Chicago & Alton. In the case of the New Haven the consolidated 6s sold at 61 again today, up nearly 4 points on the week.

Industrial issues have been very irregular. Wickwire Spencer Steel 7s had a sharp drop. Central Leather 5s continued heavy. High grade investment issues, both rails and industrials and United States Government loans were steady but with little change in prices.

Steadiness was also the feature inthe foreign bonds, except for Mexican issues. Here there was a sharp break following reports of revolutionary disturbances, a part of the loss being later regained. French, Belgian and most of the mid-European bonds appeared to be marking time, awaiting further developments on the other side.

The week's new issues totaled $65,336,000, of which public utility financing formed almost half.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS EXCHANGE, Dec. 8.—Wheat closed lower and corn unchanged to lower on the local market.

In the local cash grain market Saturday there was pretty good demand for the best No. 2 red wheat and it brought steady prices. Ordinary No. 2 and No. 3 were slow and 1c to 2c cheaper. The offerings were closely cleaned up. Offerings of hard wheat were light and with buyers indifferent prices were 1c lower. There was hardly any milling demand. Light supplies of corn were well cleaned up at declines of 1c to 2c. Mills, manufacturers and elevator concerns were the better buyers, though there was scattered local and shipping order demand. Offerings of oats were cleaned up closely at 1c decline except in case of No. 2 white, which were ¼c to 1c lower. There was good demand at declined prices from local trades and elevators.

Prices were fractionally lower as a rule in the trade following the decline in both wheat and corn participating in the downward trend. Liverpool wheat closed unchanged to ¼d lower.

May wheat opened at $1.11 to $1.11¼, July wheat $1.06¼, December corn 75⅝c, May corn 74⅝c and July corn 70⅝c.

The three Northwestern markets combined, and 2067 cars of wheat, compared with 1,040 cars last week and 1,040 year. Minneapolis receiving 215 cars, Duluth 90, and Winnipeg 1762.

Primary receipts of wheat were 65,000 bushels, compared with 201,600 a week ago, and 79,200 last year, including 37,400 bushels local and 28,000 bushels receipts, which were 78,355 bushels, compared with 136,500 a week ago and 74,000 last year. Clearances included 24 cars local and 8 through. Oats receipts, which were 460,000 bushels, compared with 1,000,000 week ago and 88,000 last year, included 26 cars local and 5 through. Hay receipts were 97 cars, including 4 through.

Primary receipts of wheat were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 1,031,000 bushels. Corn receipts were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 653,000 bushels.

Primary shipments of wheat were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 507,000 bushels. Corn shipments were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 639,000 bushels. Oats shipments were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 519,000 bushels.

Clearances were 12,000 bushels of wheat, flour equivalent, and 119,000 bushels of wheat and flour.

WHEAT TRADE MORE ACTIVE BUT UNDERTONE HEAVY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Trade in wheat was a little more active today, but the undertone was heavy. There was enough absorption of wheat on the breaks by commission houses, however, to make short sellers a little wary of pressing the decline. The selling was attributed by some to Eastern longs and by others to the Northwest. Prices had a bulge in the last hour, when some of the bit traders tried to cover. Liverpool market held well and this, together with the firmness in exchanges, helped the export trade. Milling demand in wheat is slightly improved. Seaboard reported 2,000,000 bushels Manitoba worked for export the past two or three days. Local cash sales were 7,000,000 bushels wheat. Market closed ⅝@⅞ net lower. December $1.03⅝@⅞. May $1.09⅛@1.09. July $1.07¼.

Corn was a little easier. The feature trading was the selling of December and buying of May at ¼c difference by a reputed Eastern long. Aside from this the trade was largely local. Indications point to an increased movement next week. Receivers tell of increased consignment notices and an Omaha house tells of diverting corn from their Western Iowa stations to Chicago. Shipping demand was light. Cash corn premiums were off local ½c. Shipping sales, 53 bushels. Market closed ⅛@⅜c lower, December 73⅜@⅝c, May 74¼@¾c. July 75⅝c.

Oats were easier with other grain. Shipping sales were 79,000 bushels. Market closed ¼@⅜c lower, December 43c, May 46¾c, July 43¾@⅞c.

Sharp rise in Liverpool lard caused buying of that product and advanced prices here. Later prices reacted under selling credited to larger packers. Lard closed 2¼@5c off, ribs 10c off and bellies 5c lower.

DR. HUGO MUNDT TO LEAVE ST. LOUIS WEDNESDAY

German Consul, Whose Office Has Been Discontinued, to Go to Berlin.

Dr. Hugo Mundt, German Consul here from early in 1922 until Nov. 30 last, when the St. Louis consulate was closed following orders from his Government, will leave St. Louis Wednesday for his return to Berlin. There, he understands, he will likely be placed in charge of one of the departments of the German Foreign Office.

His consulate here, the first one maintained in St. Louis by the German Government since the war, was ordered closed about six weeks ago, the discontinuance being due, it was said, to reasons of economy. Dr. Mundt expressed regret at leaving St. Louis and the United States, and declared his appreciation of "the fairness of the St. Louis newspapers."

After being joined in New York by his wife, who is already there, he will go first to Zurich, Switzerland, for a short stay before entering Germany. Mrs. Mundt will remain at Zurich for a time.

DR. WILLIAM CROWE, PASTOR OF the Westminster Presbyterian Church and president of the Church Federation, will speak at the vesper service at the Young Women's Christian Association Sunday at 4:45 p. m.

CAROL SINGING WITHOUT COLLECTIONS THIS YEAR

Several Groups Already Organized —Hospitals to Be Visited.

The custom of singing carols on Christmas eve, which has been conducted under the auspices of the Children's Aid Society, will not pass into history because the society has become one of the 51 charities served by the Community fund. The carol singers will pass as usual through the streets of St. Louis, but they will not collect funds.

Officials of the society say the suggestion that the carol singing be abandoned brought many letters to the society's office asking that the custom be continued, particularly in the hospitals and institutions. Already a large number of groups have been organized and applications are being received daily at the Children's Aid office in the Vanol Building. The groups of singers are cautioned ... singing this year is a ... offering and that under ... tion will money be ... ceived by them.

THE YOUNG MARRIED ... St. Louis are invited to ... club which has been ... W. C. A. The club will ... Wednesday of each week.

Drudgery Ended by Electricity, and City Luxuries for Village and Farm, Predicted by Expert

"Age of Power," Within Life of Next Generation, Will See American Industry and Living Transformed, Samuel Insull Says.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.

AMERICA stands on the threshold of the "Age of Power," an era in which most of the drudgery of life will vanish before the mighty genie of electricity, which is being harnessed to man's use.

This is the prediction of Samuel Insull, for many years private secretary to Thomas A. Edison and one of the world's greatest electrical experts. Insull today controls the electric lighting industry of Chicago and a dozen other Western cities. But the great enterprises of which he is head are the mere beginning of what he predicts will come within the life of another generation.

Insull represents a type of big business leader that is becoming more and more common in America. He is a technical expert who is more concerned with facts than fancies and has vision that reaches far beyond the limits of his particular industry, seeing it in its proper proportion to the whole great fabric of civilization which the race is building.

"I wish I could answer you," he said, a trifle wistfully, when asked what power development meant to the average American. "I wish I could look 50 years ahead and see myself tremendous changes which I know are coming, but must leave that kind of thing to Mr. Wells and the other fiction writers.

"Yet no man is better qualified to prophesy in this respect than yourself," the correspondent suggested.

Facts vs. Fancies.

"Well," replied Insull, "I have dealt with facts all my life and I prefer to keep my fancies for my private consumption, but if you insist on prophecy, I think I can tell you some of the things that are coming because they have already been born, and it is merely a question of further development which is as certain as anything human can be.

"We are accustomed to talk of the different phases of man's growth as of the age of stone, the age of iron, etc. Using the same phrase, I believe that we are today passing out of the age of transportation and are witnessing the dawn of the Age of Power.

"I mean by this that we have probably built most of the railroads and supplementary systems which we need and that the railroad problem is now a question of intensive development so as to make each mile of track carry more traffic. We have only made a mere beginning, however, in regard to the development of power, and we have as yet no proper coordination of effort or systematic planning in production and distribution.

"We started with individual plants operating as independent units, and we have found that that is wasteful and inefficient. I believe the day of the private power plant is over and that the time is rapidly coming when power will be generated and distributed to the entire country through a vast system of central generating plants which will supply all manner of different users, from the home owner to the manufacturer, the mine operator and the public utility corporation.

For Farm and City.

"Such a system will mean not merely a tremendous reduction in the cost of power, but will place it at the disposal of the small village and even the isolated farmstead as well as the great city or industrial community. Fifty years from now power will be so cheap and accessible that man will be independent of his surroundings. The comforts and luxuries which we think of today as inseparable from the large town or city will be then available for every home in the country, whether it be in the heart of New York or St. Louis or in the mountains of California or the plains of the Northwest.

"When that time comes nearly all the mechanical processes of industry as well as most domestic services will be performed by electricity and great masses of the population will be relieved of the monotonous drudgery which is an inevitable part of the world's work today.

"What this will mean to our whole social, moral and political life it is impossible for any man to say, but nobody can question that it will spell a better, fuller, healthier and happier existence for all those who will come after us and who will enjoy the fruits of the seeds which we are today planting."

Insull halted himself abruptly and leaned back in his chair laughing.

"There," he said, "in spite of my good resolutions, you are turning me into a prophet, after all."

Prophesy From Facts.

"Still, it is a prophecy with a foundation," the interviewer remarked. Insull nodded. "A very real foundation," he said. "It is based on what has already been done and that justifies very high hopes for the future. Fifty years ago electricity turned not a single wheel except perhaps on a tiny scale in the laboratory of some scientist. Yet at the beginning of the present century the electric lighting and power systems of the country represented a capitalization of about $650,000,000, and 20 years later that capitalization had grown to $5,000,000,000. The increase in production in the last 20 years has been still more impressive. Last year the total output of the country was 47,659,004,000 kilowatt hours, an increase of not less than 1900 per cent in 20 years. Here in Chicago alone the development has been particularly remarkable. The increase in output in the last 20 years for this city was more than 3200 per cent. Generating units which produced 80 kilowatts in 1888 have grown to 35,000 kilowatts today, with a 60,000-kilowatt unit on order.

"At the same time great economies have been effected in the production of electricity. Steam turbines have accomplished wonders in this direction. In 1883 at the first generating station at Chicago it took about 12 pounds of coal to produce a kilowatt hour. This figure has been reduced to 1.8 pounds today, and we expect that in the new station which the Commonwealth Edison

Wave of Spiritual Healing Propaganda Deeply Stirs Religious Folk in England

Conservatives of Faith and Doctors Strive Vainly to Stop It

Churchmen, Scientists, Professors of Philosophy and Psychology, Medical Men and Ordinary Tradespeople Join Excitedly in Arguments Pro and Con, Siftings of Evidence and Recitals of Personal Experiences of "Faith Cures."

By ERNEST FRENNECKE.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

LONDON, Oct. 7.

THAT the British Empire in its present troubled state, is possibly on the brink of a tremendous spiritual reawakening and a widespread revival of belief in the "miracles" to be effected by religious faith is being unmistakably indicated at the present moment by a vast wave of heated discussion and controversy on the subject of "spiritual healing."

Not only churchmen, but also scientists, professors of philosophy and psychology, medical men and ordinary tradespeople, have within the past few weeks joined excitedly in arguments pro and con, siftings of evidence and recitals of personal experiences of "faith cures."

The present spiritual furore in London, however, is both extremely typical of such religious conflagrations and intensely interesting and important because of the depth of the impression it is making on great numbers of people in all stages of social and intellectual life. It is evident, also, that this particular wave, or rather deluge, of interest in the miraculous curative powers of unseen forces, "mental" or "divine," represents only a tiny proportion of the world's growing consciousness of the value for good of forces which lie beyond our ordinary perceptions.

Subject Brought to Fore by Vicar of St. Benedict

The whole movement, so far as England is concerned, was brought to the fore a few weeks ago at a service in Westminster Abbey, at which the Rev. R. C. Griffith, vicar of St. Benedict and of St. Martin at Palace, Norwich, delivered a notable address on the practice of spiritual healing in Eastern England. His amazing statements immediately raised a storm of comment from many quarters.

There were many matters, he said, which God desired to reveal to suffering humanity at the present time. Much might penetrate through the ministry of healing in answer to prayer and faith. We had no need to see the result of healing by faith beyond the seas because in Great Britain today this spiritual healing work of the church was a really live thing. There was no nonsense about it.

"I, myself," he proceeded, "have seen blind people see. I have seen one with a withered arm for 16 years hanging at her side suddenly shoot it out perfectly whole. We have seen cancers disappear within 20 minutes. We have had people who, perhaps, a few minutes before were stone deaf, hearing and kneeling at the foot of the alter, giving forth thanks publicly for all God's goodness to them. This great work, for which I am here to speak, I tell you quite candidly, is upsetting altogether the religious life of the people in East Anglia, in the sense that they are beginning to understand their religion to be a spiritual thing. It is not merely the healing of the body. That is a minor matter. We find in this work that not only bodies are healed but souls are converted and faith is renewed in many lives, and particularly among those who have not received the gift of healing. The enemies who deliberately attack this work say that to try to encourage people to expect to be healed and then find that they are not healed is a wicked thing, because the people lose their faith. That is a blasphemous lie. I have seen thousands of people waiting outside two little slum churches from 9 o'clock in the morning till a quarter past 11 at night, kneeling in the streets and gutters of the city in prayer for those on whom hands are being laid within those little shrines. It takes something to get a hardened sinner on his knees in a gutter in prayer, but the spiritual healing work of the church does it.

"Many will have read the appeal throughout of the press on behalf of the Cancer Research Fund. A leading surgeon on behalf of cancer said in London the other day:

Vicar's Statement That Has Caused Criticism

I, MYSELF, have seen blind people see. I have seen one with a withered arm for sixteen years hanging at her side suddenly shoot it out perfectly whole. We have seen cancers disappear within twenty minutes. We have had people who, perhaps a few minutes before were stone deaf, hearing and kneeling at the foot of the altar giving forth thanks publicly for all God's goodness to them. This great work, for which I am here to speak, I tell you quite candidly, is upsetting altogther the religious life of the people in East Anglia, in the sense that they are beginning to understand their religion to be a spiritual thing. It is not merely the healing of the body.—VICAR GRIFFITH.

Whole Movement Brought to the Fore at Service in Westminster Abbey by a Norwich Vicar Who Narrated Many Instances of Miraculous Cures, Even of Cancer, He Said He Had Seen Effected by Practice of Spiritual Healing in East England.

"There is something about that disease we do not know anything about. One person in every 20 dies of cancer today for the simple reason that nothing can be done. You place your friend in a hospital and the surgeon operates and removes the cancer. Does he stop the growth? Does he heal the disease? Your leading cancer specialist today says: 'No. We all have to tell them they are getting better, but in six or nine months' time they are no longer on this earth. They are in a happier place, away from troubles and sickness.' Then he turned to me and said: 'You represent in your own parish the church of God. What are you doing to help us in our work? We need the Christian Church today as a whole to pray that enlightenment penetrates down from heaven and enrich the minds of the medical profession.'"

The immediate result of these remarkable statements was a general and rather excited inquiry into the "cures" alluded to by Dr. Griffith. His statements were largely confirmed. A woman of the professional classes, for instance, declared that it was quite true that she had received instantaneous relief from deafness as soon as Mr. Maillard, Warden of the Spiritual Healing Fellowship, had laid his hands on her head and prayed. Before this, she said, she had had much difficulty in hearing for many years.

Further testimony was given by a woman living near Norwich, who had been attracted to the mission in the hope that she might be relieved of a nervous chronic disorder for which she had been under prolonged medical treatment. Since the laying on of hands by Mr. Maillard she vouched that one symptom after another disappeared until she felt quite well again. A partially paralyzed boy was similarly benefited in a remarkable way. His right arm, leg and foot had been useless, the foot being turned right over and he could only get about by the help of a stick. "When Mr. Maillard placed his hands on my head and prayed over me," he declared, "I felt a pleasant thrill pass right through me." When led to his seat he felt that strength coming into his right leg and foot, and later, when on his way home, he found he could walk without a stick.

Cures of this nature continued, and still continue, to be effected in all parts of England and to be reported in London. An immense amount of heated discussion followed. The controversy still goes on, and its protagonists may be roughly divided into two opposing camps. The first consists of ardent advocates of spiritual healing as the one great mysterious force with which man may combat terror, pain and disease. The second, consisting chiefly of the older medical men and the more conservative churchmen, regard the publicity which "faith cures" have attained as a most dangerous thing, because, they declare, it causes people to invite disease and death by disdaining or postponing until too late the services of ordinary medical science.

Evils of "Faith Cures" Discussed by Educator

The most distinguished spokesman of this latter group is Prof. George M. Robertson of the University of Edinburgh, whose statements, while extremely forcible, have invariably been both fair-minded and courteous. Shortly after the Westminster Abbey sermon he declared:

"A memorandum on cancer has been issued by the Ministry of Health, in view of, among other reasons, the great and increasing amount of suffering and death due to this disease and the failure so far to find a preventive or cure for it. The value of early treatment is, however, emphasized. It is essential, we are told, that the patient should not postpone or delay seeking competent medical advice, and, above all, should not waste time or money by trying quack remedies.

"This memorandum follows the publication of the address on 'spiritual healing.' But recoveries of functional blindness and deafness as were mentioned are, however, almost commonplace, were seen by many during the war, and were effected by simple means and without the aid of 'spiritual healing.' But, the vicar also added, 'We have seen cancers disappear within 20 minutes.'

"The almost simultaneous appearance of these two records—the memorandum and the sermon—and the contrast of the two views expressed in them, must have struck many people; on the one hand, we have the opinion of the Ministry of Health, with deductions from its accumulated and exact records as well as from the individual experience of its ablest practitioners, combined with the results of the most recent researches; on the other hand, the opinion of one faithful servant of the ministry of Christ, based on his own experience and beliefs.

"Without offense, without desire to impute blame, but with the sole aim of the welfare of suffering men and women, I ask, is the vicar justified in giving such prominence to his vieys on disease? What does he know about cancer? If no more than most vicars, then very little indeed; and at all events not so much as to give him the right or the excuse to lead unintentionally and perhaps to be the cause of the sufferings and the death of thousands which will surely follow, if we are to trust a memorandum which is the last expression of human knowledge on this subject.

Cites Results of Cancer Operations in Early Stages

"The memorandum warns the public against wasting time on quack remedies. There is the world of difference between the selfish attitude of a quack and the reverent attitude and worthy motives of the Norwich vicar, but if the statements in the memorandum be true, this will not protect men and women with cancer from suffering and from death, from which perhaps they might have been spared. For I desire to correct one misstatement of fact by the vicar: when cancer is operated on and entirely removed, which is often possible in an early stage, it does not return."

As an equally courteous and powerful champion of spiritual healing, Canon Samuel Bickersteth of Canterbury Cathedral, who has observed and conducted "faith curing" in many churches in Australia, Tasmania and New Zealand, entered the lists of the controversy with the following observations:

"Spiritual healing, as I have found it preached and practiced in Australia during the past year, does not allow, far less advocate, any less reliance on surgical and medical aid than Prof. Robertson himself could desire. It is true that the Archbishops, Bishops and conferences of clergy and laity (often including medical men) have supported the Mission of Spiritual Healing through the Laying on of Hands; yet at the same time those in authority have widely circulated the draft report of the Committee on Spiritual Healing appointed by the Lambreth Conference. The first general principle in that report runs as follows:

"The church must recognize methods of faith healing in the treatment of bodily disease, but must be careful to apply such methods in accordance with scientific discoveries and analysis made known to us by those who are investigating the inter-relation of mind and body. It is becoming more and more clear that the indiscriminate or unintelligent appeal to faith may bring some immediate relief, but may do more harm than good in the end. No sick person must look to the church to do simply what it is the physician's or surgeon's vocation to do.'

"But it must also be clearly understood that the Australian Church by reviving spiritual healing, has claimed far more than the co-operation of doctors and clergymen, too long in abeyance. She has confessed that in common with the whole Christian Church, she has neglected to claim, and to train, 'the gifts of healing' entrusted to some of her members by Christ. That neglect has put her in a weak position for illustrating those spiritual powers the triumph of which makes the word 'incurable' impossible to a Christian.

"Anyhow, the Australian church, after months of prayer and preparation, put her faith to the touchstone of experience and with many remarkable victories over disease. When even the almost more than human skill and sympathy of some great surgeon in an operation, which illustrates his way of 'laying on hands,' has failed, it is precisely at that point that the possibility of curing cancer and other organic diseases by spiritual healing can triumph. Why not? Why should it be thought incredible that organic as well as functional disease can be thus cured? Another professor and physician, Sir Thomas Clouston, has said, 'It is certain that in time, through mental influences, some diseases now regarded as incurable will be healed. Such influences largely control nutrition, and many organic diseases result from malnutrition.'

"But, if this be so, why should not organic diseases yield to spiritual healing, which consciously recognizes the personality of Christ, whereas mental healing does not necessarily do more than appeal to the personality of the patient?

"Anyhow, 'Australia is the right place for making experiments,' as a distinguished statesman said to me. I therefore hope that Mother Church of England will also learn from her Australian daughter's

Doubts Truth of Stories That There Are Enormous Sums of German Capital Invested Abroad

Maxmilian Harden, However, Says Nine-tenths of German People Believe Every Means of Deceiving 'Enemy' Is Justified

By Maximilian Harden,
The Famous German Editor. Special Cable Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1923.)

BERLIN, Dec. 8.

A YOUNG woman to whom the writer mentioned the fact that America had a hundred million inhabitants, exclaimed "that's not so many." She had been trained to think in billions by shrinking value of the paper mark, 10,000,000,000,000 of which are now required to buy a pound of lard.

Many of the writer's friends believe that Germany herself is to blame for the present high prices, because she furthered inflation by permitting the flight of capital. The Reparations Commission is now discussing a plan to have experts investigate to determine how much German capital is located abroad, and how it can be recovered.

The Germans themselves must desire that this attempt succeed, for people everywhere have been saying to them for years, "The reason your country can plead poverty is that gigantic sums of capital, on which taxes and reparations could easily have been paid, have fled abroad, where they earn vast dividends in valuable currency."

Dividends Ridiculously Small.

Many persons asserted further that Germany's prosperity was shown by the amount of dividends and by stock quotations. But dividends in reality are so ridiculously small that they hardly pay the fees on money orders to transmit them. And stock prices? A thousand-mark share of a great mining industry which cost $400 in 1914 now is worth about $120, despite the fact that the plant has been vastly improved. A share in the biggest German bank, once worth $600, now will not buy two pairs of shoes.

Nobody should talk loosely about Germany's prosperity at a time when millions of her workmen, small officials and renters do not know how they are going to get coal and margarine, when the price of a kilogram of meat exceeds the wage on which the whole family of a veteran railroad employe must exist for two days, and when the overwhelming majority of the city dwellers will not be able to have even a naked Christmas tree.

Perhaps the gossip about the flight of capital deserves equally little consideration, but what one terms the Government today encounters the deepest distrust everywhere in Germany. Since nobody has confidence in the means employed to save the country's finances, everybody has been desirous of saving his own capital, and this could be done only abroad.

Attitude of Officials.

The majority of the officials who are charged with the duty of preventing this come from the old imperial administration, and, being monarchists, they sabotage the republic. They feel that rehabilitation of the country's finances would merely inure to the benefit of their former enemies, and that, therefore, instead of giving the profits to the French and their allies, the Germans should keep them for themselves. Nine-tenths of the Germans believe that all the burdens imposed by the peace treaty were unjustly imposed, and that every means of deceiving the "enemy" is justified.

The Swiss Wulfson and the Frenchman Wernle have just published a book called "The Flight of German Capital." Its assertions deserve examination by the experts. The authors make the following assertions:

Germany's export figures are far below the figures reported by the countries receiving them.

Foreign trusts and holding companies are often merely German straw men, which create fictitious debts abroad in order to permit the Germans to export wares, currency and stocks to meet them. Debtor and creditor are often the same person.

Charge as to Patents.

The Germans are deceiving their own Government by dummy foreign corporations, which exploit German patents in Germany. A Swiss concern which holds the German patent for synthetic ammonia and gets royalties on every ton manufactured in Germany is really a German concern.

Considerable part of the capital which had fled is returning to Germany under disguise.

The authors of this book make many other charges along the same line. Are they truth or fiction? The new Government which Santa Claus brought us should seriously and quickly undertake the investigation and refutation of this dangerous book.

Make-Up of New Cabinet.

Four Bavarians sit in this Cabinet, whose Chancellor is a Rhenish Catholic jurist. The Government hardly differs in any respect from its predecessor. Military dictatorship remains for an indefinite period, with tacit approval of 180 Socialist Deputies. The Reichstag will be sent home for a few weeks or months, and all executive power is in the hands of Generals. But dissolution of the Reichstag has been avowed and payment of salaries has been assured until spring.

Thus the dear fatherland has been saved. It has its fourteenth Cabinet in five years. But—as the young woman says—that's not so many.

Veterans' Bureau Scandals.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR splendid editorial published recently under caption, "Mismanagement Then and Now," certainly touched the present national administration and the grafting former officials of the Veterans' Bureau right upon their guilty hides.

The recent senatorial investigation ended abruptly to prevent gigantic disclosures which would further embarrass the administration. To quote a sentence from your editorial: "The party is in bad odors with the war veterans," and, "instead of voting them favors it has winked at graft where graft was least tolerable."

The latest sinister move of that autocratic department of the Government is "a general and indiscriminate reduction of the compensation allowances that have been awarded to the wounded and disabled."

The frantic economical campaign engendered from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to the Treasury and to the executive is redounding at the expense of the men who bear mental and physical testimony of valor and service in defense of Christian civilization during the recent war, and scores of men, to the writer's personal knowledge, are suffering not only from the old wounds incurred "over there," but the additional humiliation of reduced compensations from the Veterans' Bureau which places them in a pitiable plight. All on account of "rotten politics." The ex-service men, our able-bodied and healthy "Buddies" will resent this a thousand times more than any bonus question, pro or con.

WOUNDED EX-SOLDIER.

Room in the Naval Reserve.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THERE are no fences around the local National Guard or Naval Reserve headquarters on drill nights and there is considerable room in the ranks for men who can pass the physical examinations required by the service.

The writer does not wish to cause any ill feeling against those unfortunates who have been barred from further service, due to injuries received during the last war, or to those with families to support, but to those who spend seven days a week in patent leather shoes and within hearing distance of the latest jazz music.

Here is hoping the next parade in St. Louis will show a greater number of men marching under the colors of the local National Guard units and Naval Reserve battalions than in the past, as it is behind these colors that Uncle Sam can actually look for his men in an emergency. No matter how patriotic or how well-meaning men may be that may belong to patriotic organizations, smokers, dances, etc., will not keep you in trim to take up your duties in the "hole" or in the air when the time comes again, so, "Buddy," if you are still fortunate enough to call yourself a real man and can pass the physical examinations, drop around some night and show Uncle Sam that you are really ready to give him an hour or two a week of your spare time. I am sure you will never regret it.

NAVAL RESERVE.

Make Curfew Mean Something.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHY not start something about the "curfew" ordinance, tell them what the curfew means, tell them about the old song, "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight," and anything else that would be pertinent to the subject matter, and see if some change can be made in bringing up the younger generation, so we won't have so many gang fights, robberies and murders? When I was in my teens, at the first blow of the curfew whistle every boy in the crowd beat it for home, and if he was not at home promptly after the whistle blew dad had something to work on.

Some time back, was talking with Sergt. Hayes of the Tenth, and he stated that in the old days the parents raised the children, but today the children raise the parents. Boys learn nothing good in gangs, more particularly in gangs that hang around corners, vacant lots, poolrooms, beverage joints and what not, but so few of the younger generation know what the curfew means.

A bad gang of young chaps hung around a lot on Terry and King's highway last summer. Hayes broke them up, but they complained that the curfew whistle, General Motors works, Union and Natural Bridge road, had stopped blowing, and they did not know when it was time to go home. The Sergeant asked me why the whistle had discontinued blowing. I rang up the general manager. He said complaint had been made it blew too loud, I told him to disregard the "nut" that complained, and continue blowing, which he did, and has been blowing ever since. Boys all know now just when to beat it, and the gang is now a matter of history.

Why not have a dozen or more whistles blown all over town, and have the fire departments ring the curfew—nine bells at 9 o'clock, like they used to do?

"As the sapling in bent, so will the tree grow"—so keep the sapling straight.

JAMES P. WILLIAMS.

WHAT ABOUT CONGRESS?

Public reaction to the President's message has been favorable and unusually demonstrative. A tumbling flood of telegrams has poured in on Congressmen. There has been nothing like it in recent years, so veteran members say.

Most of the communications dwelt on the President's tax-reduction recommendations. That ought not to surprise our Congressmen. Yet their disposition in numerous instances to straddle this question by professing their approval of it and at the same time announcing their readiness to support a new levy of billions on the people indicates that some of our statesmen think they can hoodwink the public.

Possibly the sentiment of their constituents as expressed by wire will be illuminating and instructive. That is, indeed, a consummation devoutly to be wished. As a matter of fact, the interesting point of speculation as to the effect of the President's message has shifted from the Executive to the Legislative department—from politics to public service. It may be admitted that Mr. Coolidge has suddenly leaped, politically, from a mysterious retreat to a position of command. The signs and portents now all point to him as his party's nominee. But what about Congress? Will Congress perceive that the surest way to public favor is by meeting a great public need?

The question, of course, ought to answer itself. It ought to be a self-evident proposition. Instead, it exists as a political theorem. The reason is plain. Special interest, once a well-defined adversary, has multiplied enormously in late years. Group demand, though in the minority, has shown that by organization and insistence it can exact obedience from the supposed representatives of the public. Congress has largely forfeited its stature of a representative body and become a gathering of special agents. It is no longer divided into a majority and minority of opposing theories of government; it is subdivided into blocs that arrogantly place their special interest above the general interest. In consequence we have been getting our laws from lobbies, not from legislators.

In unequivocally urging tax reduction Mr. Coolidge has struck a comprehensive note of public interest. He has sounded anew the ancient faith that the public interest is paramount. The public's instantaneous response should be inspiring to those members of Congress who have chafed under the yoke of clamorous special interests and should hearten the timid members who have weakly submitted to such dictation as the only formula for holding their jobs.

The result must be awaited. But if the courage of the President's message does transform Congress from the congeries of cliques to which it has deteriorated into the national body which the Constitution designed and which it once was, Mr. Coolidge's fame will be secure against any turn of political fortune.

He will have resurrected our democracy.

THE TWENTY-FOURTH CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL.

This year's Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival will be the twenty-fourth, rounding out nearly a quarter of a century of Christmas good cheer offered free by St. Louis' citizens to needy families and to all children who might otherwise be overlooked. The Christmas Festival, with its huge Christmas tree, its free gifts, its entertainment, and its multitude of happy children and willing workers, has come to be a St. Louis institution, without which Christmas would not be Christmas.

Last year's contributions to the Christmas Festival Fund totaled $15,278. Expenditures for the Festival amounted to $15,240. This year's Festival is planned on as generous a scale, and it is confidently expected that a fund of $15,000 will be raised. Past experience has shown that this amount will be needed if the ideal of supplying baskets of Christmas food to poor families and rounding out the Children's Coliseum Festival is to be realized. Every contribution to the fund, as usual, will be acknowledged in the Post-Dispatch.

St. Louis has justly earned the reputation of being a city of abounding hospitality. And the annual Christmas Festival is one of the most delightful acts of hospitality possible to imagine. No return but good will is expected. And that is abundant reward.

THE RURAL SCHOOL HANDICAP.

State Superintendent of Schools Lee told the State teachers' convention in St. Louis that 8 per cent of the 23,000 school teachers in Missouri have never attended a high school. Only about 77 per cent have completed the full high school course.

Eight per cent is a relatively small fraction of the whole, but it becomes ominous when its significance to rural schools is realized. The city town and village schools naturally bid for the best-educated teachers, so that the country schools bear almost the entire brunt of inadequate teacher training. If the 8 per cent of underschooled teachers are allocated exclusively to the rural districts they become in the latter a fatally large per cent.

The need apparently is for more high schools that can be attended by prospective teachers from their homes. To meet this need Supt. Lee proposes a law that will make possible a first-class high school in approximately every 40 square miles of the State's territory, allowing for State aid for its support when the constitutional limit of taxes fails to provide the necessary funds. An aid to such an extension of facilities would be the passage of Amendment 12 in the revised Constitution to be submitted to the voters in February. This amendment would permit rural districts to vote the same rate of taxation as the urban districts. Mr. Lee indorses this as well as the other two educational amendments.

MR. THOMPSON'S BELATED MIRACLE.

Missouri's road project is in affluent circumstances, according to Treasurer Thompson, but is it not strange that the Treasurer did not discover this delightful status sooner?

The impression that the road enterprise was in a somewhat precarious financial condition is not of recent vintage. As early as last summer Chairman Gary confided his fears to the Governor, and in September the Highway Commission submitted an elaborate audit showing that the enterprise was headed for the rocks unless provision were made for a larger maintenance fund. The Governor properly was frightened, and at his instance Mr. Gary and other members of the commission got in touch with the Automobile Club and persuaded the directors of that organization to sound the sentiment of the members on an increased registration fee. It was right there that the "furore," as the Governor now dubs the agitation for a special session, had its inception. And to think that the whole unfortunate episode might have been avoided if Mr. Thompson, on a moonlight night of June or July had revealed the heaps of shining gold imbedded in the Treasury to the credit of the road project.

It is a great service Mr. Thompson has rendered. In fact, "great" does not do it justice. As a piece of accounting it is a wonder. But isn't it too bad that Magician Thompson did not make his figures perform before the shouting and the tumult?

ANCIENT AND MODERN LAW.

A recent dispatch from Winnipeg, Canada, related that a thrifty dairyman, who took his cow from the public pound against the protests of the pound keeper, was convicted of pound-breach. When it was found that Canadian law provided no penalty for such an offense a search of British law resulted in the startling revelation that a statute enacted 150 years ago prescribed that the culprit in such a case should either be executed or have his ears removed and be deported to the penal colony of Australia.

As might have been expected, the sentence upon the Canadian offender was held in abeyance until the Dominion Parliament might have opportunity to revise the criminal code. When a penalty in law was found clearly to violate modern standards of civilization the law bowed to those standards. The law of civilized nations no longer mutilates the bodies of prisoners. Except in the most extreme cases it has ceased cutting off heads, and Australia, once a penal colony, has become a practically independent nation, reading to the rest of the world lessons in model government.

Nevertheless, where legal archaism is not patently intolerable, the law still bows to precedent established even before the days when ear slashing, banishment and hanging were inflicted for so trivial an offense as pound-breach. The Missouri law, for instance, still tolerates a system whereby an automobile driver, known beyond peradventure of doubt to be guilty of running down and killing a child and speeding from the scene of the accident, despite the pleas of a companion to stop him, was sentenced to 15 days in the workhouse.

We have saved our criminals from mutilation and cruelty, but we are failing to protect society from murderous carelessness and flight from responsibility. Drivers know it and, if not checked by their own conscience, appear to be justified in their contempt for the law's futility.

"Saving money for taxpayers" is an ideal for honest officials, not for private crooks.

A BAS THE SHRIEKING SIGN.

Minnesota, the State of plain, plebeian Magnus Johnson and the land of Gopher Prairies and Babbitts, has set a pace for all America by declaring legislative war on the thousands of shrieking signs and billboards which had begun to make her State highways hideous. The victory for sightly highways, of course, is not complete while the opportunity remains to rent billboard sites from owners of private property along the way. The new law will, however, eliminate frivolous sign-posting, and, by driving signs on private property, will tend to diminish the orgy of defacement. One of the reasons justifying the legislation in Minnesota was the obstructing of the view and the distracting of attention at dangerous road crossings.

Missouri could well profit by Minnesota's example. Here is a proposal which may benefit the farmer as well as relieve the eyes of the city motorist. If signs are driven to private property the farmer whose dollar is kept at low value partly by our protectionist tariff may acquire a few more dollars by leasing sign space. Eventually, we hope, the public will become educated to punish those concerns which slap it in the face with atrocious signboards.

The new block signal device that stops a train in spite of the locomotive's throttle being wide open, approaches the solution of the paradox of the contest between the irresistible force and the immovable body. Some such stop device should be applied to automobiles and street cars.

JESSE JAMES ATTAINS LITERATURE.

At last, more than four decades after Bob Ford, "the dirty little coward that shot Mr. Howard and laid Jesse James in his grave," went to his own assumed repose as losing man in a barroom brawl, Missouri's most noted native has found embalmment in a book published by a reputable house in New York. Jesse James has attained literature. True, it is by no means great literature; but, such as it is, young Mr. Roy Dibble's big volume about certain strenuous Americans recognizes the relative importance of his units of raw material by placing J. Washington James first and foremost.

Jesse is followed by Admiral Dewey, the gentle Frances E. Willard is preceded by Brigham Young, and Mark Hanna brings up the rear. But these others have attained literature heretofore. It is the ultimate arrival of our own strenuous Missourian that entrains our profound interest here.

Blood-and-thundered for half a century in multitudinous paperbacks, which one still sees in the windows of bookshops, Jesse finally has come to be regarded as a serious proposition for a penman's art. Here in Missouri he was a serious proposition for about 16 years before he achieved the peculiar distinction of being the first victim of a Ford, but we'll let that pass.

The point is that even little old New York, which hardly ever sees anything or anybody west of Hoboken, actually has discovered Jesse James. Mr. Dibble is to be felicitated upon his unerring choice of a distinguished subject.

Two bills to change names of streets are up before the Board of Aldermen. If the names are changed, it wouldn't be worth while to erect any signs showing the new names, as there are hundreds of street corners without such signs or with illegible signs. It's no trouble to ask someone "What street is this?" St. Louisans have lots of time to spare to do this.

PANETELA.

YES, Luella,
Mr. Coolidge,
Rising like
The morning sun,
Put a lot
Of dark forebodings
Rather deftly
On the run.
After having Uttered nothing,
Leaving fancy
To its fears,
Lo, the doughty
Man of silence
Almost battered
In our ears!

Even so,
My little girlie,
When you lay
It on the scales,
Hector likely
Would have blown it
Up with one
Of laughter's gales.
In the acid test
Of courage
As to which
We know suspense,
He our prestidigitator
Nimbly walked
The party fence.

What he said
About the bonus
And of taxes
On the whole
Constituted
As to courage
Nothing greater Than his pole,
Armed with this
He lightly footed
Up and down
The picket tops,
Pitching in
By way of acting
Sundry fancy
Little hops.

Nothing to it,
Sweet Luella,
Where our hero
Boldly cracks
Divers little
Heads about him,
These are but
The party's tracks.
When it comes
To pioneering,
What though conscience
Soft and low
Offered fame
For independence,
Calvin never Struck a blow.

So we have it,
Dear Luella:
After this
Our hero's roar,
Lo, we find
The situation
Simply what
It was before!
Though he seemed
To be addressing
Us in singing
Words and pixie
What he had
In mind was money
For his little Old campaign.

ARE WE TIRED OF LIBERTY?

In the October number of the Yale Review Mr. Hilaire Belloc has an interesting article on "Contemporary Stupidity." He comments on a number of examples among which is "the really stupifying (should be stupefying) habit of deducing from words instead of from ideas," and instances our use of the word "choose" in voting for our representatives. He goes on to say: "It is now demonstrated by three generations of experience that with great bodies of men the representative system breaks down. It is a fraud, it is a tyranny, it is unreasonable, it cannot be made to work; yet for some little time longer—not very long—modern men will continue to attempt its use most desperately, hoping against hope that the square wheel will carry their vehicle." And he thinks the main cause of our condition of stupidity is fatigue—"the forces of our society are fatigued."

Doesn't this sound remarkably like Mussolini's declaration that the people are tired of liberty?

Evidently Mr. Belloc is not one of those who would trust the reins of government in the people's own hands; they are too "stupid" to know what is best for themselves; the reins should be held by those only who are skilled in the art of governing.

Well, now—government from above downward was the rule in the Old World until just a few years ago—and the success of it has been written in blood. In this country we have had for 150 years a Government ostensibly of, by and for the people, and we think it has worked fairly well. True, we have made some mistakes, but we always have the opportunity to correct them. The point is that representative government is correct in principle. The officials "derive their just powers from the consent of the governed."

We may be only half educated, as Israel Zangwill declares, but, by the jumping Jehoshaphat! the man who says that we Americans are wallowing in stupidity and that our representative system is a fraud and a tyranny, should—(I suppress the anathema I had written here). He doesn't know us. He, nursed in the lap of the most superstitious and despotic institution the world has ever been cursed with, comes over from Europe and presumes to persuade us that the liberty we have wrested from age-long tyranny is a failure and that we are suffering from stupidity induced by social fatigue!

Well, we must be tolerant, certainly; but we must have more than once regarded as enemies of the republic and thrust into jail men far better than this brazen mouthpiece of monarchism.

PLINTHOURGOS.

Sir: I enjoyed the piece about keeping the penitentiary up by radioing Dr. Cook's bedtime stories, but aren't we forgetting the debt of gratitude we owe Dr. Cook in having entirely changed the personnel of our local Reception Committee? I recall vividly the appearance of these gentlemen in their silk hats upon the occasion when Dr. Cook came here to tell about his trip to the pole. They were the same people we had seen in a thousand similar street parades, and we have never seen one of them pass in a parade since.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

BASIC PRINCIPLES OF LIBERTY.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

THERE are certain basic principles of liberty essential to the perpetuity of democracy. A statement of these by a writer in a recent number of the Independent should appeal to the intelligence, patriotism and interest of every citizen who desire to enjoy the blessings of a practical and helpful liberty of thought and action as distinguished from the masquerading monstrosity which slowly is usurping the principles emphasized by the founders of the republic. These principles should be pondered and remembered. We are in the way of forfeiting a priceless heritage unless we exercise more alertly that eternal vigilance which a great Virginian once asserted was the price of our most invaluable privilege. Says the writer:

"1. In republics and democracies law should be proposed, urged and voted for only by citizens who honorably expect to obey them.

"2. In republics and democracies law can be enforced against the disobedient only by majorities that are themselves law-abiding.

"3. In republics and democracies the vital moral interests of mankind are best safeguarded and furthered if, in the main and as far as possible, they are controlled and regulated by private conscience and public opinion rather than by legislative bodies and administrative agents.

"4. In republics and democracies law and government are created and must be sustained by the initiative and responsibility of individual citizens, and these can not exist apart from individual liberty.

"5. In republics and democracies, therefore, individual liberty should be curbed only as far as public safety and public order clearly, and beyond reasonable doubt, require."

We recommend this clarifying brief especially to all those paternalists, meddlers, prohibitionists and reformers in general who hold that the public must conform to all demands made in behalf of some "cause" espoused by them, or must surrender to the Government the essential control and direction of our persons, our property and our morals.

SAYINGS ATTRIBUTED TO JESUS.

PROF. VON HARNACK in Vossische Zeitung (Berlin).

IN addition to the words of Jesus reported in the Gospels, a score or more of his sayings have been preserved, some of them in other New Testament writings, some in the later Gospels, some in the works of the church fathers. Some are from short collections preserved on Egyptian papyri. They are of unequal value, and very few of them are regarded as authentic. But even some of the dubious sayings possess much interest, because they were attributed to Jesus at a very early date, and they reflect the spirit of His teaching and the picture of Him conceived by the earliest Christians. * * * "Where I find them there will I judge them." This saying is reported in more than 20 places in various Greek versions derived originally from an Aramaic source. Justin the Apologist, in the middle of the second century, expressly attributes it to Jesus, who may have said it in commenting upon Ezekiel xxxiii. There can be no doubt as to the meaning. Saint Jerome has defined it accurately: "God does not look upon the past, but upon the present." In other words, it is an admonition that what a man has done in the past will not avail unless he partakes in the path of righteousness.

experiences, and closely watch the extension of them this autumn to New Zealand.'"

These statements are of course only a faint indication of the intensity of the veritable burst of belief in the power of faith of which there seem to be evidences on every hand. It seems, however, to have achieved a local climax for the movement in England, a climax whose importance cannot now, perhaps, be fully realized. But the controversy and discussion are at least serving one good purpose: they are serving to clarify people's ideas on both medical and religious subjects and are making them realize that there is a possibility of some wonderful, yet unrealized, connection between affairs of the body and affairs of the mind.

Spiritual healing, at any rate, is a practice and belief as old as Christianity, perhaps even much older, and the world will undoubtedly hear much more of it in the days to come. For this reason alone, England's awakened consciousness that such "miracles" as faith cures may actually be taking place is not altogether without interest to the rest of the world.

ELECTRICITY TO END DRUDGERY, EXPERT PREDICTS

Co. is building there will be a further reduction to 1.6 pounds. Incidentally, this station will probably be the largest in the world, with an ultimate rating of 600,000 kilowatts.

"I don't want to daze you with figures, but I want to say that if I have been betrayed into prophecy, I had some solid grounds for the faith that is in me. I have talked of 50 years from now, but many of the things I foresee will come well before that time. Electricity today leads the way in industry. One of the best proofs of its sound development is the fact that it has been on the whole steadily decreased in price. Its future expansion is practically incalculable, and I would place no bounds on any man's imagination as to what it may eventually do for the human race."

DEAF 11 YEARS NOW HEARS PERFECTLY

Thousands Formerly Hard of Hearing Now Rejoice in Hearing Clearly Through Using Remarkable K-17, Formerly Known as "Snake Oil."

It is no longer necessary to suffer the handicap and embarrassment of catarrhal deafness and head noises according to the experience of thousands who were formerly deaf.

Cases of years' standing which were growing worse in spite of every effort seemingly yielded to this remarkable new treatment overnight, and showed complete recovery according to their statements, within a few weeks. For instance, R. A. Fratzke, a resident of Minnesota says, "I have been deaf for 11 years. Now I can hear a clock tick across the room. I can hear better now than I ever did."

If you are deaf, troubled by head noises and would like to experience the blessings testified to by thousands, you may do so without risking one penny. All you need do is send your name and address to the Greene Laboratories, 210 Greene Bldg., Kansas City, Kan., and they will immediately send you a $2 treatment of K-17 (formerly known as Rattle-Snake Oil) for only $1 and postage.

Send no money—just your name and address and the treatment will be mailed at once. After using it according to simple directions for 10 days, if you do not hear perfectly, or are not satisfied for any reason, your money will be refunded immediately, without question or argument. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this wonderful compound a trial.

FOUR GANGSTERS GUARDED AFTER BEING SENTENCED

Springfield, Ill., Police Hear of Gathering of St. Louis Friends of Convicted Men.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 8.—An extra guard of policemen was thrown about the jail here yesterday after four St. Louis gangsters had been sentenced to 25 years each in the penitentiary for mail robbery. It was reported that between 30 and 40 St. Louis friends of the prisoners were in the city and every precaution was taken to prevent a possible jail delivery.

The defendants were "Pee Wee" Shelton, "Two-Gun" Madison, Morris Rudensky and Joe Bouman. Judge FitzHenry, before passing sentence, asked the gangsters if they had anything to say.

"Your honor," replied Rudensky, "I think we've had a fair trial and want to thank you and the jury."

The others had nothing to say.

As the prisoners were being led to jail Miss Edna Jose of East St. Louis, who had testified at the trial that she and Shelton had planned to be married in Springfield the day after the robbery, ran after the policemen and United States Marshal's deputies and begged that the wedding be allowed to take place before Shelton began his sentence. She was referred to the Judges, who denied her request.

New Trial Denied.

After a motion for a new trial had been denied the defendants were allowed 30 days in which to file a writ of error, but relatives present said they did not think this would be done, as they had no funds with which to finance the defense further.

Claude Smith, another defendant, who had been discharged in the course of the trial because the evidence against him was considered weak, was taken to St. Louis, where he is wanted for bond jumping, having been charged in an information there with assault to kill and second degree burglary.

The St. Louis charge against Smith grew out of the shooting and wounding of Patrolman Lawrence Treinen the night of May 15 when he interrupted burglars in an attempt to get into the Wein pants factory at 503 North Eighteenth street.

$100 Loot in Mail Robbery.

As has been told, the mail robbery at Springfield netted the bandits less than $100. They rushed into the baggage room at the Chicago & Alton depot the night of March 31, overpowered the mail messenger and baggage man and got away with six pouches of mail. In their flight from policemen they dropped the sacks, one of which, it later was disclosed, contained $125,000, being shipped from St. Louis to Chicago.

The trial lasted five days. All the defendants, with the exception of Shelton, offered alibis, declaring they were in St. Louis at the time of the robbery. Shelton, who was caught in an alley near the depot after a chase by a policeman, declared he sought refuge in the alley not because he was implicated in the robbery, but because he was afraid of being shot or wounded by some of the bullets that were being exchanged by the robbers and policemen.

VERDICT OF $600 FOR FORMER WEBSTER GROVES POLICE CHIEF

Suit of J. F. Donnelly Against Woman Was Based on Alleged Defamation of Character

A suit, growing out of the dismissal of John F. Donnelly as Chief of Police of Webster Groves Nov. 6, 1922, was decided in Donnelly's favor Friday by a jury at Clayton, which allowed him $600 actual and punitive damages against Mrs. Mary Luraschi of 105 North Elm street, Webster Groves.

Donnelly sued Mrs. Luraschi for $10,000 damages for defamation of his character. He alleged that Mrs. Luraschi, after being convicted of manufacturing liquor June 12, 1922, told the Webster Groves Board of Commissioners that she had paid him $650 for protection. Donnelly set forth in his petition that his professions of innocence were disregarded and he was summarily dismissed after refusing to resign.

Donnelly formerly was a member of the St. Louis Police Force and Chief Martin O'Brien testified at the hearing to his good character. Popular opinion in Webster Groves was said to have favored Donnelly at the time of his dismissal as Chief.

CAPSULES IN ROOM OF DEAD NURSE SOUGHT

Inquest in Case of Miss Lola Quick of Chicago to Be Resumed Tomorrow.

The inquest into the death of Miss Lola Quick, 24 years old, a registered nurse of Chicago, will be resumed tomorrow, when Deputy Coroner Fath hopes to have additional evidence to aid him in determining whether she died of natural causes, an accidental overdose of a drug, or by her own hand.

Conflicting testimony was given at the opening of the inquest yesterday, and the Coroner withheld a verdict until a box of capsules taken from Miss Quick's room at Hotel Statler could be found and their nature established. Policemen

Inquest in Case of Miss Lola Quick of Chicago to Be Resumed Tomorrow.

The inquest into the death of Miss Lola Quick, 34 years old, a registered nurse of Chicago, will be resumed tomorrow, when Deputy Coroner Fath hopes to have additional evidence to aid him in determining whether she died of natural causes, an accidental overdose of a drug, or by her own hand.

Conflicting testimony was given at the opening of the inquest yesterday, and the Coroner withheld a verdict until a box of capsules taken from Miss Quick's room at Hotel Statler could be found and their nature established. Policemen testified they gave the box to a physician at city hospital.

Miss Quick died Thursday after she was found unconscious in the hotel room Wednesday. An autopsy performed by Dr. Alfred J. Griot showed death was due to lobar pneumonia, but Dr. John Hogan, physician at Hotel Statler, testified that he administered first-aid as in a poison case.

A letter addressed "To Whom It May Concern," stating that the writer was "going to end it all," was found in her grip.

Her sister, Miss Nellie Quick, 6018 Maple avenue, a Deputy Sheriff in Judge Calvin Miller's court, said her sister had been taking an opiate to allay pain resulting from a recent operation, and may have used too much.

Miss Quick came to St. Louis about six weeks ago, but left her sister's home Tuesday, presumably to return to Chicago.

Max Hart Visits St. Louis.

Max Hart, president of Hart, Schaffner & Marx, of Chicago and New York, accompanied by M. W. Cresap, secretary-treasurer of the firm, was in St. Louis yesterday on business. He expressed himself as well pleased with prospects for the new year. The visitors spent the day at Wolff's, Broadway and Washington avenue.

One Thing for Which There Is No Substitute

Dr. F. J. Guilbault

The world is constantly finding substitutes for existing methods, products, or ideas, and these substitutes frequently prove of greater value than the originals and so supplant them, but in all the world there is absolutely no substitute for eyesight.

Eyestrain headaches and other annoying symptoms are Nature's warning of impending eye trouble.

Don't delay a day in having your eyes tested. A trivial defect frequently grows into a serious complication in a very short time.

For 20 years I have specialized exclusively in the correction of visual defects by means of properly prescribed glasses.

Eyes are tested, lenses ground, and frames fitted under my personal direction. Over 30,000 people endorse my services and my most reasonable charges.

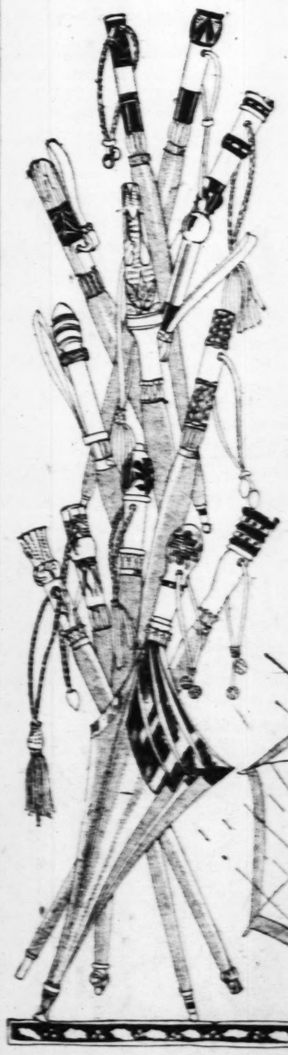
The Umbrella Gift Shop of St. Louis

Invites You to Choose Your Gift Umbrellas — From the Largest Stock West of the Mississippi

$5.00 $5.95 $6.50 $6.95 $7.50 $8.50 $10.00
$12.50 $13.50 $15.00 $17.00 $20.00 to $35.00



Dry or Stylish?

Years ago Umbrellas were used to keep dry; clothes were worn to be warm and comfortable.

Today hot clothes and Umbrellas must also be fashionable—comfort is more or less incidental.

Umbrellas used to be plain, strong looking, efficient, and were expected to wear for years.

Today Umbrellas have "costume value" much as a smart piece of jewelry adds to one's costume—combining, at the same time, the quality of good service.

Vandervoort's is known as headquarters in St. Louis for the individual Umbrella. The unusual handle is the usual order of the day here.

Umbrellas are more than ever charming gifts this year, since they assume such importance in the world of fashion, hence in the favor of everyone feminine.

Umbrellas for men are purchased largely by women. He wants a good Umbrella but rarely takes the time for thoughtful selections. Enhance the joy of Christmas giving by presenting HIM with a really nice Umbrella.

Miss Mary Tiffany Makes Her Début At a Rose Ball

Atmosphere Reminiscent of Generation Ago Marks Brilliant Affair at Elks' Club—Mgr. J. J. Tannrath in Receiving Line.

AN atmosphere reminiscent of a generation ago prevailed at the rose ball given at the Elks' Club Friday night by Philip C. Scanlan for his debutante niece, Miss Mary Christy Tiffany. The building was the home of Mrs. Peter L. Foy, an aunt of Mr. Scanlan, until her death about fifteen years ago, and prior to that it was the old Chouteau home, and was chosen as a setting for the party chiefly because of the memories it recalled to the minds of the host and some of the older guests. Much of the richly carved dark woodwork remains intact, and the drawing room at the left of the reception hall entrance, except for the mural decoration lately added, is arranged as it was in the days of their youth, when the belles of one of our oldest French families made their debuts there. Standing in the reception hall, one could almost picture a bride of those days, in her hoop skirts and basque bodice, descending the stairway to greet her husband-to-be, and in the almost gloomy half-light, the air heavy with the fragrance of thousands of roses clustered over the chandeliers, and arranged in vases about the reception rooms, stately parties of other days seemed to clash with the gay crowd assembled for the more modern ball.

The balustrade stairway leading to the ball room on the second floor was literally hidden beneath quantities of rose-studded smilax, and in the ball room itself thousands of the pink blossoms filled wrought-iron standards placed between long window seats which lined the room, and cascaded to the floor. The heavy chandeliers of the large room were garlanded with roses, and over the doorway they looped down almost to the heads of the guests. The west end of the room was covered by a smilax

Two Interesting Engagements Are Announced

Week Also Brings Wedding of Miss Mary Cord and J. Henry Rotehamel — Douglas-Vickes Nuptials to Take Place New Year's Eve.

MR. and Mrs. Guy Scott Warren of Evanston, Ill., announce the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Anne Warren, to Paul Chalmers Buford Jr., of Roanoke, Va. The wedding will take place in the spring in Evanston. News of the engagement is of special interest here, as the Warrens are former St. Louisans. Mrs. Warren is a cousin of Mrs. Douglas W. Robert of 5240 Washington boulevard, and was formerly Mrs. Nell Fisher Prather, daughter of the late John J. Fisher, whose home years ago was at 3423 Washington avenue. Mrs. Fisher, president of the Young Women's Christian Association, resides at 5849 Cates avenue, where Mrs. Warren is now a guest. Mr. Warren's father, the late Dr. Isaac Warren, was a member of the firm of Warren, Gratz and Jones.

The bride-elect was educated at the Northwestern University in Evanston. Mr. Buford, the son of Mrs. Paul C. Buford Sr., is a graduate of Washington and Lee University, and a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

A recent engagement announced in Pelham Manor, N. Y., is that of Miss Mary Barnett Heed Mariner, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Crandall Mariner, formerly of St. Louis, and George Church Durant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Terry Durant of Great Barrington, Mass. The announcement was made at a tea given by Mrs. Edward C. King at her home on the Esplande, in Pelham. Misses Alice Bentley, Katherine King, Odielin Pearce and Madeline Trowbridge served. Mr. Durant was a member of the 1919 class at Yale University, but left college to serve overseas with the Yale Ambulance Corps. The date for the wedding has not been announced.

Miss Mary Cord, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William J. Cord of 6036 Washington boulevard, was quietly married at 11:30 yesterday morning to J. Henry Rotehamel, son of Mrs. Nancy Rex Rotehamel of 317 North Union boulevard. The Rev. Father John Spencer performed the ceremony in the parish house of St. Roch's Church. Mrs. Harry C. Barker was matron of honor, and Thomas W. Hill, best man. The bride wore a beige georgette frock and a gold embroidered tan hat, with a short veil arranged in Spanish fashion. Her corsage was of orchids and lilies of the valley. She wore the gift of the bridegroom, a diamond and platinum bar pin. After a three weeks' honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. Rotehamel will be at home at 5737 Kingsbury boulevard. They were educated at the University of Missouri. Mr. Rotehamel was a lieutenant in the aviation corps during the war.

The wedding of Miss Beatrice Douglas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Douglas of 5079 Waterman avenue, and Kenneth Vickes of Portland, Ind., will take place quietly at 8

Junior League to Open Shop for 'Work-Cure' Patients

THE Junior League, well known for widespread work in reconstruction, occupational therapy and general philanthropic work, is to embark on a new venture Jan. 10, with the opening of a permanent shop in the new Galeria Building, Euclid and Maryland avenues, where the product of the various occupational therapy departments supported by the League will be on sale. From time to time successful sales have been held by the League, but now in order to enlarge the work and give employment to many patients in hospitals and to shut-ins, a more extensive sales plan is to be followed. The shop will be in the hands of Junior League members, with Mrs. Marion Clifford Bloomer as chairman. Every member of the League will be called upon for sales duty, so that every day there will be competent sales girls on hand, and they will be well instructed in salesmanship. Novel decorations and sales lattice, forming a bower for the receiving party, flanked at either side by flower-filled gold baskets. Mr. and Mrs. George S. Tiffany, parents of the debutante, received with her and Mr. Scanlan, as his bride Miss Mary O'Fallon, whose card was enclosed in the invitations. Msgr. J. J. Tannrath of the New Cathedral, and Mrs. Cornelius Tompkins Jr., a sister-in-law of Mr. Scanlan.

The debutante wore white chiffon over satin and embroidered in silver, while Mrs. Tiffany was gowned in gold brocade, and Miss O'Fallon wore satin and chiffon with a rose girdle. At the opposite end of the room the orchestra was seated on the stage before which had been drawn a curtain of roses and smilax lattice work. Card tables were provided in one of the rooms for the guests who did not care to dance.

Dinner was served in the more modern rathskeller below the ball room, where the lights were dimmed in the hearts of roses, and reflected a pink glow in artificial lakes made by moss-bound mirrors which formed the centerpiece for each table. Clusters of roses arranged in the backs of china ducks gave a color note to the glittering array of silver and crystal. Miss Tiffany presided over a round table seating 25 guests, while Miss O'Fallon was the center of attraction at an oblong table opposite.

JUNIOR LEAGUE TO OPEN SHOP FOR WORK-CURE PATIENTS

o'clock New Year's eve, in the Douglas residence. The bride will be attended by Mrs. Frances Dunn of Elkhart, Ind., and Ervin Vonnegut of Indianapolis will be best man.

Miss Douglas is a graduate of Mary Institute and Wellesley College. Mr. Vicks is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Vicks of Portland, who will attend the wedding. He is a graduate of Purdue University, class of 1916.

A number of out-of-town visitors will give impetus to the Christmas entertaining. Some of the guests are former St. Louisans, while some are school friends of daughters of St. Louis families. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Blumer of Boston will arrive a day or two before the holidays to visit Mrs. Blumer's mother, Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott, 21Westmoreland place. Mrs. Scott's son, Mr. George Drake Scott, recently returned from a Mediterranean cruise. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Reynolds of Lake Forest, Ill., will visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles White Scudder, during Christmas week.

Mr. and Mrs. James D. Livingston of 40 Kingsbury place expect their daughters, Mrs. Donald Hudson of Old Mexico and Mr. Hudson and Mrs. Norton Schuyler of Clinton, Mo., with Mr. Schuyler.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Gooding of Cambridge, Mass., will be the guests of Mrs. Gooding's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward V. Papin.

William M. B. Freeman of Newton Center, Mass., will pass the holidays with his fiance, Miss Betty Hodgman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Hodgman of Waterman avenue; Miss Kathleen Brandt of Grand Rapids, Mich., will arrive Dec. 26 to visit Miss Ruth Woerner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Woerner of Wydown boulevard. Miss Anne Riordan of Arizona, will arrive next week to be the guest of Miss Elizabeth Thatcher, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hudson Thatcher.

Miss Frances Compton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Compton of 18 Kingsbury place, has gone to New York for a week. Later in the season she will have as her guest, Miss Marion Harris, of Cleveland, O., a former classmate at Vassar College.

Miss Isabel Bevins of Short Hills, N. J., is to be the guest of Miss Virginia Price, daughter of Mr. Thomas E. Price of 26 North King's highway. Miss Price will give a dinner dance at her home Dec. 22 for the visitor.

Miss Helen Isham of Chicago is the guest of Miss Etta Randolph of 7 Kingsbury place.

Other visitors in St. Louis for the holiday season will be Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Skinner of St. Paul, Minn., and their daughter, Bessie, who will arrive Dec. 22 to be the guests of Mrs. Skinner's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Crunden. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bills of Chicago and their two small daughters will come here to visit Mrs. Bills' parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Searcy of Westminster place.

Mrs. E. O. Poggensee of Oklahoma City, Ok., will arrive Tuesday morning to be the guest of her mother, Mrs. Charles Henry Dietz of the Adelaide apartments, 5674 Shaw avenue. She will remain until early January to attend the wedding of her sister, Miss Margaretha Elvira, and McKinlock Sharp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Sharp, 6345 Westminster place.

Dr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Allison of Boston, Mass., will be the guests during Christmas of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Porter Tirrill of the St. Louis Country Club grounds. Dr. Allison is a brother of Mrs. Tirrill.

Miss Frances Treat of Plainfield, N. J., who with her mother and sister removed from St. Louis last year, will come this month to be the guest of Miss Virginia Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gordon.

Mr. and Mrs. Richards Kimbrough Peek of Hempstead, L. I., and their small daughter, will be the guests during the holiday season of Mrs. Peek's parents, Mrs. George Nicoll of 4372 McPherson avenue. Mr. Peek will return shortly after Christmas day, but Mrs. Peek will remain several weeks longer.

Foot troubles need no longer sap your nervous energy

The pain of those poor aching feet—how you long to get rid of it! For not only is the constant irritation distressing, but, as physicians well know, it saps your nervous energy, too.

This week, December 10th to 15th inclusive, is your chance to get genuine relief from foot ills—without even a change in your usual style of footwear. Aching feet, burning, tender soles, weak ankles, corns, callouses, bunions—it makes no difference; there's a Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Appliance or remedy for every form of foot trouble.

Dr. Scholl's Foot-Eazer eases feet, body and nerves

Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Week

December 10th to 15th

is a nation-wide drive to bring comfort to all foot sufferers. We are behind the movement heart and soul, to build up the foot health of this town. Bring us your foot troubles; and enjoy once more the comfort of healthy, active feet.

Foot comfort is yours if you come to our store

WASHINGTON SOCIETY DOINGS OF INTEREST HERE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, first lady of the land, made her debut as official hostess of the White House on Thursday night at the first state function of the new administration, the Cabinet dinner in honor of the President's official family and their wives.

Fifty guests were seated about the great oblong table in the state dining room, with its gold service and great golden centerpieces and table decorations of Mme. Butterfly pink roses and stevia and maidenhair fern.

The guest list was studied with close attention by Washington hostesses, as it was felt that it was a guide to who is who at the White House just now. Of course, all the members of the Cabinet and their wives were invited and also included in the guests were Senator Lodge, Senator and Mrs. Francis M. Warren, Senator and Mrs. Borah, Senator Charles Curtis, Senator and Mrs. James W. Wadsworth Jr., Senator David I. Walsh, Representative and Mrs. William Madden of Illinois, Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Representative and Mrs. Louis A. Frothingham, the Governor of Massachusetts and Mrs. Cox, the secretary to the President, Bascom Slemp, Ambassador and Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg, Mrs. Eugene Hale, Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean and Dr. and Mrs. Charles W. Richardson.

The next White House function will be the reception to the diplomatic corps on Dec. 12. The State functions will then pause for the Christmas holidays.

Miss Bertha Coontz, daughter of Rear Admiral Robert E. Coontz, and who is a Missouri girl, was one of the assistants at the tea given by Read Admiral and Mrs. William A. Moffett, for Miss Janet Moffett, a debutante of the season. Miss Moffett and Miss Coontz went to the same school.

Assistant Secretary of War Dwight Davis of St. Louis has been asked to select a mount for Mrs. Coolidge from the blooded stock at the army post, Fort Myer, just across the river from Washington. Mrs. Coolidge has not ridden since her girlhood, but she has begun to take lessons and will accompany the President on some of his early morning rides which he still gets in despite the pressure of official duties. Davis mounted guard while Mrs. Coolidge took her lesson in

Mrs. Coolidge has not ridden since her girlhood, but she has begun to take lessons and will accompany the President on some of his early morning rides which he still gets in despite the pressure of official duties. Davis mounted guard while Mrs. Coolidge took her lesson in the riding hall of the fort, while impatient photographers vainly tried to pass him to get a snapshot of the novel scene.

Mrs. Clarence Cannon, wife of Representative Clarence Cannon, who succeeds the late Speaker Champ Clark as member from the Ninth Missouri District, has arrived in Washington and taken an apartment here. Mrs. Cannon has been elected a member of the Congressional Club.

Miss Bertha Coontz will give a dance for the subdebutantes and some of this season's debutantes Dec. 27.

Mrs. Edwin S. Puller entertained at luncheon Wednesday in compliment to Mrs. Edward L. Pretorius of St. Louis, who is spending the winter in Washington. Mrs. Pretorius will be the guest at a luncheon Mrs. Thornton Boland will give on Dec. 20.

Plans are being made to make Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of Senator Henderson of Missouri, honorary vice president for life of the Congressional Club. The plan to create the honorary office was proposed at the first meeting of the season and is expected to be adopted at the next meeting. Mrs. Henderson gave the land on which stands the club, which includes in the membership the wives, daughters, sisters and mothers of members of Congress and of officials of present and past administrations.

Mrs. Thornton Boland of St. Louis, who is spending the winter in Washington, will entertain the debutantes of the season at a luncheon in honor of Miss Nina Diamantopoulos, sister of the Secretary of the Greek Legation, Dec. 18.

Mrs. Reed, wife of Senator Reed of Missouri, returned to Washington last week.

An Exceptional Sale of 300 Ultra-Fashionable Winter Coats

Be Sure to See Our Additional Advertisements on the Next Three Pages.

This Beautiful Coat Is Made of Gerona With Collar and Cuffs of Taupe Fox

Sizes 16 to 46
(Second Floor—Nugents.)

We can truthfully say that this group represents the most marvelous purchase of fine Coats that this store has made in recent years.

Our Group of Stores Bought the Entire Stock of

Singer Bros., 498 7th Av., New York

Our Share of This Purchase Consisted of 300 Coats

This well-known firm decided to liquidate their Coat and Suit business, after more than twenty years of successful business activities, during which time they established a reputation second to none. They gave up this business in order to devote their entire attention to the nationally known Hickson Company, in which they are largely interested. The phenomenal growth of the latter concern demanded their entire time.

$110, $125, $150 and $175 Coats

Imagine buying a gorgeous Coat of Gerona with a lustrous collar and cuff set of beautiful fox.

Or a Coat of Marvella in a new side-tie effect with collar and cuffs of rich golden beaver.

In This Sale at

Picture a Coat of lustrous Oriona with a deep shawl collar of first quality black wolf.

Or a Coat of soft Preciosa with collar and cuffs and border of taupe fox.

You will find all of these here Monday, and hundreds of others equally as good. Take our word for it—you could not buy the furs and materials employed in the making at this price.

These Coats Are Ideal for Xmas Gifts

A Small Deposit Will Hold Any Coat Until After Christmas

The Materials Would Cost You at Least—

4 yards material, $14.00 a yard	$56.00
Furs used (average)	$40.00
Linings, findings, etc.	$14.00
Total,	$110.00

This does not take into consideration the cost of making.

Singer Bros.

Were the leaders of the Cloak and Suit industry. Their name was always associated with the finest garments made.

In Connection With This Remarkable Purchase We Offer These Two Specially Priced Groups:

$45, $55 and $65 Winter Coats

You'll Find Coats of: Bonovaine, Truvonnet, Francette, Ormadale, Raritan and Velverette.

On Sale at $39.75

Exceptional Coats in choice of black, navy blue, brown and taupe in a full range of sizes, 16 to 46. This is a new lot, enabling us to repeat an offering of last week that many women will remember for a long time with great pleasure.

$75, $85 and $100 Winter Coats

You'll Find Coats of: Ormadale, Velverette, Nubian, Formosa and Bonovaine.

On Sale at $59.50

You'd little expect to find such Coats at this price. This is a group, very specially purchased, that affords choice of many of the best materials and finest furs. The best colors are represented and you will find a full range of sizes.

Furs Used: Manchurian Wolf, Platinum Wolf, Viatka Squirrel, Squirrelette
(Second Floor—Nugents.)

Out-of-Town Visitors

Make Monday the day to come for the luxurious Coats you're wanting. Remember, there are only 300 of these fine Coats and no more are to be had.

Furs Used: Squirrel, Beaver, Caracul, Wolf, Fox
(Second Floor—Nugents.)

Singer Bros. did not make a Coat to retail at less than $110.00. These Coats are all late Fall models in the most desired colors—taupe, navy blue, black, and brown.

RECENT WEDDINGS AND ENGAGEMENTS

The engagement of Miss Beatrice Jennings, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. Dwight Jennings of 4101 Washington boulevard, to Chester W. Kotzeman, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Kotzeman of 6171 McPherson avenue, has been announced through notes sent by Miss Jennings to her close friends. The announcement party originally planned was not given because of the illness of Mrs. Jennings. Miss Jennings and Mr. Kotzeman are graduates of Washington University, the latter having graduated from the law school. Miss Jennings is a member of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority and has spent several months in European travel. Mr. Kotzeman is a member of the Delta Theta Phi fraternity. No date has been set for the wedding.

The marriage of Miss Ruth Jamison to Howard McCord will take place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Jamison at "Red Gables," St. Louis County, on Dec. 15 at 8 p. m. The Rev. James Fowle of the Central Presbyterian Church will perform the ceremony. The bride will wear a pearl embroidered robe over white satin with a court train of the same material. The veil will be held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms, with a cluster of them at each side. She will carry white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Margaret Heath, maid of honor, will wear a frock of shell pink georgette over satin and will carry pink roses and sweet peas. R. C. Long will be best man. The house will be decorated in pink and white.

Miss Ruth Leu of 4028 Lexington avenue and Earl Carson of 4364 Page avenue, were married at the Rock Church Thanksgiving morning. Miss Mae Fallert and J. Schmelder were the attendants. After the wedding breakfast was served at the bridegroom's home. A reception was given in the evening at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. J. A. Schaefer. The guests were Messrs. and Mmes. Rocco Florita, Frank Klug, Misses Lillian, Florence and Doris Klug, A. Schaefe and Mrs. Charles Smith, Tom Ryan and Al Brehmer. Mr. Carson is a graduate of St. Louis University.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Carter of 3870 Humphrey street announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Carter, to Anthony E. Mrazek of 3408 Utah street. Rev. Father Lyons performed the ceremony at St. Pius Church Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock in the presence of the immediate families. Miss Blanche Mrazek, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and Clifford Carter, the bride's brother, best man. A breakfast at Mission Inn followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Mrazek will spend their honeymoon in the East.

Mrs. M. H. Barker of 5764 Westminster place will be at home this afternoon from 2 o'clock to 6 o'clock in honor of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Tesse Barker, to Emanuel F. Werner of 5514 Pershing avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Rodecker of Long Beach, Cal., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Bernice Rodecker, to Gilbert Michel of Detroit, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Michel of Gatesworth Hotel.

A wedding of Wednesday was that of Miss Edna M. Vanausdoll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vanausdoll of Dow, Ill., and Clyde M. Ferguson, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Ferguson of 5229 Northland avenue, which took place at the bridegroom's parents' home at 8 p. m. The Rev. F. E. Crowe performed the ceremony. A reception followed. The bride wore royal blue charmeuse and silver. Miss Mary Schupp was maid of honor and Glen Vanausdoll, the bride's brother, best man.

Miss Olivia Anna Brueggeman was married to August C. Wuertz at SS. Peter and Paul's Church, the morning of Nov. 28. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. F. Stevens, assisted by the Revs. Leo Ebel and William Bauer. She was given in marriage by her brother, Joseph Brueggeman. Miss Rose Wuertz, matron of honor and Junior Brueggeman, ring bearer. The ushers were Arthur Wuerz and Andrew Brueggeman. Mr. and Mrs. Wuerz will reside at 2909 Semple avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Weiss of 5129 Enright avenue, announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ida Weiss, and Jack Portnoy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Portnoy of 2710 South Compton avenue, at a party given at the Weiss home last Sunday evening. No date has been set for the wedding.

The wedding of Miss Leona Jost, daughter of Mrs. F. W. Jost, of 4467 Holly avenue, and Edward L. Zollner Jr. of 4480 Clarance avenue, took place Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, the Rev. Alfred Doerffler officiating. Miss Margaret Schrick was maid of honor, and Melvin Zollner, a brother of the bridegroom, best man. Dr. Arthur Jost, a brother of the bride, gave her in marriage. The wedding gown was of white crepe brocaded in velvet, and the tulle veil was held in place by a pearl coronet. She carried roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Schrick fore peachblow Canton crepe and carried pink roses. The couple are in Detroit on their honeymoon trip, and will make their home at 4478 Clarence avenue.

PARTIES, DANCES AND RECEPTIONS OF THE WEEK

One of the parties at the St. Louis Country Club dinner dance last night was given by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hopkins King of Brentmoor in honor of Miss Grace Whitelaw Wallace, Veiled Prophet Queen, and Miss Katherine Steedman. Another was the smaller party given by Miss Celeste Terry, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert J. Terry.

Miss Rosemary Craig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert George Craig of the Buckingham Hotel, will give a luncheon Dec. 19 complimentary to Miss Anne Riorden of Flagstaff, Ariz., who will arrive next week to be the guest of Miss Elizabeth Thatcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hudson Thatcher of "Glen Owen," Ferguson, and to share honors at her debut ball the evening of Dec. 22.

Miss Ruth Woerner, daughter of Mr. nd Mrs. William F. Woerner of 6433 Wydown boulevard, will be hostess at a dinner dance at Hotel Chase Dec. 15.

Mrs. Francis H. Ludington of 14 North King's highway will give a luncheon Tuesday honoring Miss Isabelle Chenie Smith, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Smith.

Robert and Sevier Bonnie of Louisville, Ky., are visiting their cousins, Mrs. Harry Langenberg of the St. Louis Country Club grounds, and will share honors at a luncheon Mr. and Mrs. Langenberg will give at the Country Club today for Miss Mary Christy Tiffany. They attended the ball last night.

Another dance for the college set returning for the holidays will be given by Miss Mary Delle Woods, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David E. Woods of 7069 Kingsbury boulevard, and Miss Marie Reid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Reid of Polo Drive, the evening of Dec. 14 at the Glen Echo Country Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis P. Aloe of 26 Kingsbury place have sent out invitations for a masked ball Dec. 21 at the Century Boat Club. Their twin daughters, Misses Isabel and Louise Aloe, seniors at Smith College, who are to return home for the holidays, and Miss Sylvia Joseph of St. Paul, Minn., a classmate, will be honor guests. Miss Joseph will visit at the Aloe home over Christmas.

Among those who will entertain guests at the St. Louis Country Club at the New Year's eve celebration will be Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Edmunds, Mr. and Mrs. Frank V. Hammar and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. McMillan.

Mr. and Mrs. Cabell Gray of 5955 Clemens avenue gave a small dinner party Monday night at Hotel Chase complimentary to Mrs. Gray's debutante cousins, Misses Minerva Carr Nichols and Clemence Adreon.

The annual William Woods Collegeluncheon was given at Hotel Statler Dec. 7. Dr. Crossfield, president of the college, and Miss Winfrey, dean, with 49 alumnae and instructors, were the guests. Impromptu talks and songs comprised the after-luncheon program.

A social event of the holiday period will be the visit of the Harvard Glee Club, which will give a concert at the Odeon Thursday evening, Dec. 27—the first in two years. Chairman of the boxes, Humphrey Gifford, reports the following box holders: Mr. and Mrs. George D. Markham, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pettus, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Swartz, Mr. and Mrs. Guido Pantaleoni, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Fischel, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. C. R D Meier, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kendall, Mrs John H. Haskell, Dr. and Mrs. Archer O'Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Mallinckrodt Jr., Mrs. George F. Steedman, Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Gifford. Chairman of Entertainment Eugene Pettus and George Moore, vice-chairman, are disposed to let the entertaining take the form of a number of private luncheons and dinners with one general luncheon and reception. Mrs. Jesse Greenman will entertain groups of the visiting men, the sons of the Greenman family being Harvard men. The Harvard Glee Club numbers 60 men on tour.

The Ladies' Ball of the Century Boat Club, which is an annual event given by the wives and daughters of club members, will take place at the Club House on Saturday evening. Dinner will be served from 8 to 10 o'clock and dancing will continue until 1 a. m.

The entertainment and arrangements committees consist of Mmes. Fred Breitt, Sidney A. Belle, Harry Burkart, Aloys Herz, Charles Holzworth, George H. Fox, Otto Hampe, J. Douglas Brown, Fred W. Pape, G. A. Buder, Albert Beisbarth, O. W. Earickson, Al Versen and George Vierheller.

The reception committee will consist of the wives and daughters of club members and will be in charge of Mrs. G. A. Buder.

Minstrel entertaining comprised the program given Friday evening, Dec. 7, by the sub-freshman class at Lindenwood College. It was a holiday party, with Christmas greens and Christmas trees as decorations. Miss Margaret Enloe was "interlocutor," and the four "end men" were Misses Hazel Roberts, Helen Smith, Jean Johnston and Alberta Schell. The remainder of the class were dressed as negro "mammies." President John L. Roemer was guest of honor for the class. Several weeks ago, when the freshmen gave an elaborate party in honor of Mrs. Roemer, the sub-freshmen began plans to honor the president, in turn. The day began with special ceremonies, escorting Dr. Roemer from his residence, "The Gables," to breakfast. A pony cart, decorated with flowers, was sent for him. In the evening program, original songs were sung in honor of Dr. Roemer and other members of the family. Miss Marjorie Weber, sponsor of the class, assisted in receiving.

The Jerome L. Goldman Post No. 96 of the American Legion gave its annual fall dance the evening of Dec. 5 at Trimp's Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Sichel of 5415 Waterman avenue will receive informally on Dec. 18 from 9 p. m. to 12 p. m. at the Columbian Club in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Frank Sichel and Miss Carolyn Victor.

THIS lot of Overcoats represent the surplus stock of one of the leading makers of fashionable clothes in this country.

Due to the amazingly low prices their manufacturers have requested us to refrain from using their name, but each garment bears their label which you will immediately recognize as a mark of character and distinction in clothing.

Included are Ulsters, Ulsterettes and Chesterfields—fashioned of the finest woolens in the season's smartest loosely draped or semi-fitted models. Set-in sleeves or raglan shoulders—half or full belts. A variety of distinctive colorings and designs.

This Sale Will Begin at 9 o'Clock—on the Fourth Floor. The Selections Are Ample, but We Urge You to Come Early for First Choosing.

WOMEN'S SOCIAL, MUSICAL AND STUDY CLUBS

The executive board of the Wednesday Club, at a meeting Dec. 3, voted to create a class in political science. All programs will be in charge of both a Republican and a Democratic leader, and political information will be given to women of both parties. Mrs. Frank P. Hays, Republican, and Mrs. Frank P. Crunden, Democrat, have been chosen to formulate the programs and supervise the conduct of the meetings. The text book will be the Missouri Blue Book, issued Dec. 1, 1923. The club has removed guest restrictions and the meetings will be open and free to all women of the city, whether or not they are members of the club.

The first meeting of the class will be in the first week in January. Applications for membership in the class can be obtained by calling Forest 6410, Wednesday Club, or Mrs. Crunden or Mrs. Hays. Copies of the Blue Book will be furnished if desired.

The education section of the Wednesday Club, of which Mrs. Henry S. Caulfield is chairman, will hold its regular meeting on Dec. 12 at 10:30 a. m. Mrs. George Gellhorn has charge of the program. Wilford Aiken, director of the John Burroughs School, will speak on modern education, and Father Wilbur will speak on the Jesuits and Jansenists.

Luncheon will be served at 12:30 p. m. and at 1:30 p. m. It has been arranged by Mrs. Edmund F. Brown for the members of the poetics section to hear Ricardo Quintano of the English department of Washington University on the poetic drama of the last 50 years in England. Parts of the play, Hassan, by James Elroy Flecker, whic his now being played in London, will be read by Mrs. Walter J. Knight and Mr. Quintano.

The history and literature section of the Monday Club held two classes at the club on Dec. 3. Mrs. William S. Hull, chairman, appointed the following committee to consider a program of work for the coming year: Mrs. W. W. Keysor, Mrs. Fred M. King and Mrs. John Q. Patterson. The next meeting of this section will be on Jan. 7, when members will give favorite quotations from plays studied.

Mrs. James F. Cook, chairman of the education and current topics section, appointed the following committee to consider a program for the coming year: Mrs. James K. Stribling, Mrs. Ralph McClure, Mrs. C. W. Cuno, Mrs. G. A. Shepardson and Mrs. Charles E. Galt.

A paper on "Modern Stage Craft" was read by Mrs. William Hess. The next number was "Adam and Eva," a play in three acts, read by Mrs. C. W. Hyde. A musical will be given at the open meeting on the afternoon of Dec. 10.

The College Club subject, Tuesday, Dec. 11, will be "Journalism—the Magazines and Critics," led by Mrs. Franklin Miller. Mrs. Walter Kirchner, the hostess, will be assisted by Mrs. Richard F. Jones, Mrs. M. C. Emanuel, Mrs. Philip Shaffer, Mrs. M. C. Gamble, Miss May Hamilton, Mrs. Charles E. Cory.

At 7:30 Tuesday evening the business and professional women of the club will hold their monthly business meeting. This will be followed by a program, "What is Wrong With the Theater?" led by Mrs. M. G. Seelig.

The literature and reciprocity section of the Fine Arts Committee of the M. F. W. C. met in Vandervoort Auditorium Friday morning. Letters were read from the State president, Mrs. Ess, and the State chairman of reciprocity, Mrs. Elliott, giving formal notice that St. Louis was to be the future headquarters of the reciprocity bureau. Revision of the list of "Missouri celebrities" is the objective of the committee this year. A special committee was appointed for this work, consisting of Mrs. E. P. Sommers, chairman; Mrs. Frank Davis and Mrs. George Scott. Mrs. Som- [illegible] suggested a boost could be

There will be no meeting of the committee in December, except the joint meeting with the Music Committee Dec. 12, and the meeting with the Committee on Legislation Dec. 14, when Dr. Lippincott of Washington University will lecture on "What We Are Paying For."

The weekly meeting of the St. Louis Tercentenary Shakspeare Society was held Tuesday, Dec. 4, in the St. Louis Art League rooms. After the regular monthly business session, Father Robert Hall Atchison gave a lecture on "Cymbeline." The next meeting of the Tercentenary Shakspeare Society will be the monthly public program in the Vandervoort music hall, on Tuesday, Dec. 11, at 2 p. m., when Edward J. White will lecture on "The Criminal Types of Shakspeare," and special music will be provided by Miss Lela Garvin.

The Tuesday Literary Club met at the Artists' Guild Dec. 4. Inventions and their contributions to the progress of the world was the subject for discussion. Mrs. W. T. Midlam, Mrs. Harry Linneman and Miss Ida Lubke gave talks.

The Delphi Delphian Chapter met on Monday, Dec. 3, at the Community Center, 1401 South Grand avenue, with the president, Mrs. E. L. Weinert, presiding. The study of Greece, from Troy to Athens, was taken up, with interesting discussions under the leadership of Mrs. H. W. Schmale.

Text reports were given as follows: "The Homeric Poems and Military Life in Homeric Times," Mrs. Lydia Kansteiner; "Private Life in Homeric Times," Mrs. M. K. Gillespie; "Sources of Greek History," Mrs. Adele B. Brown; "Early Migrations," Mrs. Bertha Voit; "Early Sparta," Mrs. G. M. Chapman; "Early Athens," Mrs. L. A. Brandenberger. The next meeting will be at the same place, Monday, Dec. 17, at 2 o'clock, when the study of Greece will be continued.

The Phi Delphian Chapter held its regular meeting at the Cabanne Branch Library, Wednesday, at 2 p. m., Mrs. H. W. Dawson, president, presiding. Egypt of Bible times was the general theme. A discussion of Egyptian civilization modified by the Asiatic was led by Mrs. Hoyt. Current events of outstanding importance were discussed. The next meeting of this chapter will be on the third Wednesday of this month.

The Harmony Literary Club met Dec. 1 at the home of Mrs. J. T. Emmett, 1363 Granville place. Mrs. W. C. Markham, presided. Mrs. C. W. Parker asked that a time be given to Mrs. Erhart to talk on the educational fund. Mrs. L. Cook reported on Dr. Meyer's Christmas party and to her appeal several volunteers offered their services for December 24. To Mrs. John Payne's request for funds to the Near East Relief, a donation was given. The Committee of Arrangements for the Chamber of Commerce dinner, Dec. 6, reported costumes planned and a Rumanian Gypsy table representation with a number on the program.

The general theme was Africa. The paper by Mrs. C. W. Parker presented the biographies of Livingston and Stanley and their pioneer work in the Dark Continent, paving the way for the foreign powers in later years to form the British and Belgian Congo. The next meeting will be held Dec. 14, at 1 o'clock luncheon at the home of Mrs. E. R. Nyroth, 4433 Blair avenue.

The monthly meeting of the Margaret A. E. McClure Chapter, U. D. C., will be held Monday, Dec. 10, at 2 o'clock, at the Missouri Athletic Association. Mrs. G. K. Warner will be hostess, assisted by Miss Nancy Warner, Mrs. Phil Ebrenz, Mrs. Gilbert Beckley, Mrs. George Andrea and Miss Mary McNamara.

Clotho Club, Mrs. Julia May Barber, president, met at the residence of Mrs. John R. Lanigan.

WOMEN'S SOCIAL MUSICAL AND STUDY CLUBS

that committee recently at which it was decided to give a concert-card-dansant in January for the benefit of the scholarship fund. It is the purpose of this department, which maintains a registration bureau, to assist local musical artists to obtain engagements and receive proper recognition in this city.

Mrs. George J. Dietz gave a talk about our city government.

Mrs. Bloss presented a paper on "Press and Publication of St. Louis," giving a resume of the evolution of the newspaper, first published in 1820 to the present day. She displayed a copy of the "St. Louis Republican of 1848."

The Council of Jewish Women will meet at Temple Israel tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, with an open meeting at 3:30. This will mark the first of a series of talks on the study of social problems. The first speaker will be Frank Tannenbaum, who became a voluntary prisoner at Sing Sing, to study labor conditions. His subject will be "How We Can Prevent Crime."

The Wanderers held their last meeting at the home of Mrs. H. L. King. The next meeting will be with Mrs. H. A. Loery, 5032 Waterman avenue, Wednesday, Dec. 12.

The Cornelia Green Chapter, D. A. R., held their December meeting at the home of Mrs. John Zohorsky, Mrs. Eugene Fusz, regent, presiding. Mrs. Cooper was assistant hostess. Mrs. L. C. Riley reported her recent trip to Jefferson City. On Jan. 2 Mrs. Wheaton C. Ferris of 6995 Washington boulevard will entertain the chapter, and a recital will be given on the pipe organ.

Kirkwood Study Hour Club M. F. W. C. met Tuesday, Dec. 4, at 1 o'clock. Mrs. A. W. Sanders was hostess. Mrs. W. P. Erhart gave a talk on the work being accomplished by the scholarship endowment fund. Mrs. Harry Lange was leader for the program on science. The next meeting will be a Christmas party, Mrs. W. F. Gould, leader, and Mrs. S. J. Fortune, hostess.

The Wandt Literary Club met at the home of Mrs. W. M. Clithero, 4210 Botanical avenue, Dec. 6, Mrs. A. H. Cleveland assisting. "The Modern Woman" was the subject of discussion. Mrs. John Schweitzer's paper on "Famous American Women" was read by Mrs. Oliver Blackinton. Talks were made by Mrs. John Briggs, Mrs. Louis McCormack and Mrs. F. C. Fox. A musical program followed.

The Confederate Dames Chapter, U. C. D., held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Walter Johnson, 14 Wydown terrace, with Mrs. Robert McCulloch and Mrs. Waller Edwards assisting. The club is educating two young women, one at the Peabody Teachers' College in Nashville and the other in the School of the Ozarks, each of whom will be sent a Christmas box. Similar boxes will be sent to the Higginsville Home and to a veteran soldier in St. Louis.

The Fortnightly Club of Kirkwood, M. F. W. C., met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. S. Sudduth of Hanley road, Clayton, with Mrs. V. M. La Fon and Mrs. J. E. McGinnis as assistant hostesses. A report was given by Mrs. M. W. Pullis of the Educational Committee meeting. Mrs. C. T. Pullis reported the meeting of the Literature Committee, and Mrs. M. Seguin told of the musical afternoon given by the Eighth District at Vandervoort's auditorium Saturday.

Miss Clara Pullis read a paper on "Democracy—By the People, of the People, for the People," after which a general discussion was held. Mrs. Herman Schroeder of 207 North Geyer road will entertain the club on Thursday, Dec. 20, and Mrs. Robert Warner will have as her subject "The Influence of Music in Community Life."

The Junior Hadassah is arranging a supper for its members, Dec. 13, at the B'Nai Amoona Temple, when final plans will be made for the annual dance, Jan. 12.

Mrs. Raymond J. Ambs of 2005 South Grand boulevard entertained the St. John's Branch of the Episcopal Church, Missouri diocese, Friday afternoon, at her home.

The Lindenwood College Club will meet Tuesday at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Christy Lowry, 6075 Cabanne place. A musical program will be given by Mrs. William K. Roth, soloist, and Miss Mabel Nix, pianist. Mrs. George W. Sutherland will tell of her trip to Alaska.

The Parent-Teachers' Association of the Oak Hill School will meet Dec. 12 at 1:30 o'clock at the school. Mr. Beckman will speak on "Boy Scouts."

The Mothers' Circle of the Kennard School will meet Dec. 12 at 2:30 o'clock at the school.

The St. Louis Lonely Club will meet Friday night, Dec. 14, in the recital hall of the Odeon.

The Book Club met at the home of Mrs. H. G. Holden, 5146 Waterman avenue, on Dec. 3. There were two papers, "Modern Drama," by Miss Baker, and "Augustus Thomas—Playwright," by Mrs. Warner, after which Miss Huette gave a reading from Mr. Thomas' play, "Alabama."

The Carondelet Women's Club met at the Carondelet Library Monday evening, Dec. 3, with Mrs. W. O. Hill presiding. Miss Florence Van Sickler outlined the work

HADLEY PRAISES COLLEGES OF STATE

Talks on Facilities of Missouri and Washington Universities at Teachers' Meeting.

With a three-day session here of the sixty-first annual convention of the Missouri State Teachers' Association adjourned yesterday, with Kansas City selected for the next gathering, in November, 1924. About 8000 teachers from all parts of the State attended, filling hotels and boarding houses, while school children had a two-day holiday.

The only session yesterday was a general one at the Coliseum, at which the chief speaker was Chancellor Hadley of Washington University. In the course of his address, which was largely devoted to telling of Washington University's scholastic equipment and prominent alumni, he said:

"While the statistics showing the rank of Missouri in the literacy of our children of school age show we have a very substantial and a very important work to do, yet I believe it can be fairly said that Missouri offers better opportunities for higher education than any State west of the Mississippi, and better than any other State a portion of whose territory is south of Mason and Dixon's line. Missouri is the only State west of the Mississippi and south of Mason and Dixon's line that has a State university of high rank and a great urban university of equal standard and efficiency. With this unusual equipment it is not necessary for any young man or woman in this State to go elsewhere for an education and no State can be truly great that cannot claim this distinction."

Other speakers were Miss M. Jones, president of the National Educational Association and principal of a New York grade school, and Miss Theda Gildemeister of the Minnesota State Teachers' College. Supt. Maddox of the St. Louis schools was installed as president of the association and a report of the Committee on Salaries and Tenure of Office was read.

The report declared that teachers' salaries were decreasing from a maximum reached a year or two ago, but pointed out that the cost of living has been higher this year than last. It recommended minimum salaries for teachers, depending on their educational qualifications, of $900, $1200 and $1500 a year, with annual increases of $100 for at least three years for successful instructors.

of the Community Fund. She gave a talk on her travels in Italy in connection with the Junior Red Cross memorial in that country.

There will be a special meeting of the Lloyd R. Bourdell Auxiliary Tuesday, Dec. 11, at 2 p. m., at the Cabanne Branch Library. Mrs. John Hoffman and Mrs. Arthur Kansteiner will talk about Americanization work planned for this winter. The annual luncheon will be held in January.

The regular business meeting of the Mann School Parent-Teacher Association will be held in the school building on Friday, Dec. 14, at 1:30. All members and friends are welcome. Refreshments will be served.

The St. Louis Study Club held an open meeting Monday, Nov. 25, at the Gatesworth Hotel. Hostesses were: Mrs. Thomas Cobbs, Mrs. William Ehlers, H. R. Rieman and C. H. Magruder. The Rev. Ivan B. Holt gave a talk on the language of books. A musical program was contributed by Miss Ruth Napier and Miss Ruth Harris of Webster Groves, accompanied by Mrs. Oliver J. Barwick. The next meeting will be held at the residence of Mrs. B. E. Woods, 7069 Kingsbury boulevard, Monday, Dec. 10.

CAFE SAFE ROBBED OF $750

Proprietor Attributes Misfortune to Early Closing.

Burglars who entered the cafe operated by Tony Massa at 5649 Delmar boulevard, some time Friday night, knocked the combination off a safe and obtained $750.

Massa attributed the misfortune to the fact that he had closed the place at 1:10 a. m., an unusually early hour for him. The thieves entered by "jimmying" a washroom window.

Cracksmen failed in an attempt to open the safe at the Mortigan Monument Co., 1210 North King's highway, and departed after damaging the strong box.

INSURANCE FIRMS TOLD THEY MAY RENEW LICENSES

Missouri Superintendent Rescinds Notices Previously Sent to About 25 Massachusetts Companies

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 8.—Complying with one of the most recent court orders in the Missouri insurance embroglio Ben C. Hyde, State Superintendent of Insurance this week sent letters to 25 Massachusetts life, fire and casualty insurance companies doing business in Missouri rescinding his previous notices that their 1923 licenses would not be renewed at their expiration Feb. 1, and March 1, 1924.

The effect of the injunction which compelled Hyde to retrace his steps is to make the embroglio permanent, it was stated today at Hyde's office, and apparently ends the move to prevent the companies from continuing business in the State.

A hearing on the injunction has been set for March 1, 1924 in circuit court here. Hyde will be required under the law to renew the licenses of the Massachusetts companies when they expire, it was stated if the companies at that time still are continuing to comply with the State insurance laws. Hyde is in New York attending a meeting of insurance superintendents of several states.

Details of Controversy.

Hyde on Nov. 2 last, notified the 25 Massachusetts companies that he would refuse to renew their 1923 licenses, at expiration unless the Massachusetts insurance department receded from a ruling prohibiting a Missouri reciprocal insurance exchange from operating in Massachusetts. On Nov. 7 a similar notice was sent to the several hundred agents of the companies in Missouri.

This action was taken by Hyde under a Missouri statute known as the "retaliatory law" authoring the State Insurance Department to institute reprisals, if necessary, to obtain fair treatment of Missouri insurance companies by other states.

As has been related, the Massachusetts companies on Nov. 28 last, obtained an injunction in Circuit Court here, requiring Hyde to vacate his action. The order issued by Circuit Judge Harris of Fulton, stipulated that Hyde rescind the notice.

Letter Send to Agents.

The two-paragraph form letter sent over Hyde's signature to all the companies and their agents follows:

"I hereby revoke and recall the notice dated Nov. 2, 1923, to the —— insurance company and the notice to you (agent) dated Nov. 7, 1923, in which I notified company and yourself that your authority to transact business in the State of Missouri would not be renewed after the expiration of the 1923 license issued to said company.

"You are hereby notified that you shall disregard said notices of Nov. 2 and 7, 1923."

The 1923 licenses of the Massachusetts fire and casualty companies expire on Feb. 1, 1924, and the licenses of the life insurance companies expire March 1, 1924.

The injunction obtained by the Massachusetts companies against Hyde was the fourth issued against him since early in 1922, and all of them are pending in the courts, together with a citation recently issued against Hyde to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court, for ordering a reduction in certain insurance rates, while an injunction against a previous like attempt still was pending.

Efforts to Reduce Rates.

In January, 1922, Hyde ordered a 15 per cent reduction in the rates of approximately 150 fire, lightning, hail and wind insurance companies operating in the State. He later modified this to 10 per cent, but it was tied up by an injunction. Testimony in the case was taken last week in Kansas City before a special commissioner appointed by the Circuit Court here.

Last July Hyde ordered a 15 per cent reduction for the 150 companies but this was also tied up by injunction before it was put into effect.

On Nov. 9, last, Hyde again ordered the 15 per cent reduction, effective Dec. 15. The companies obtained an injunction on Nov. 27, restraining this cut from being put into effect and also applied for a contempt citation against Hyde for ordering the reduction while the injunction issued was pending.

The Massachusetts companies had obtained their injunction Nov. 27. Two of the injunctions against the attempted rate reductions, and the contempt citation, are set for hearing in Circuit Court here Dec. 15.

The funeral of De Roo Weber, vice president and general manager of the Abeles & Taussig Lumber and Tie Co., who died Wednesday, will be held Monday from an undertaking establishment in Webster Groves, to St. Peter's Church, Kirkwood. Interment will be in St. Peter's Cemetery. Arrangements for the funeral were at first announced for Saturday in Webster Groves.

No Comment by Judge Hall on Parking Accommodation for Jurists.

In a report of the encroachment by automobile owners on parking space in front of the old Courthouse set aside for the Circuit Judges, published in Thursday's editions of the Post-Dispatch, the name of Circuit Judge Hall was inadvertently joined with that of Judge Miller in comment on the situation. Judge Hall did not join in the statement that the Circuit Judges have authority to engage parking accommodations under their expense allowances.

Plain-Figure Prices. No War Tax.

Locust at Eighteenth St. Louis

Again to Be the Center of Another Gay

NEW YEAR'S Celebration

Last year over a thousand people watched the Old Year out and the New Year in at Hotel Claridge. Without exception the guests of the evening pronounced it one of the cleanest and most entertaining celebrations ever held in St. Louis. This year even more elaborate preparations have been made.

PART FIVE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 9, 1923. PAGES 1—12.

Mme. Alla Nazimova, in "That Sort"—Orpheum.

Virginia Watson and Roland Hogue, in "Good Morning, Dearie"—American.

Zella Inez Shannon, in "The Fool"—Shubert-Jefferson

Edward Schilling and Ann Austin, in "Get Rich Quick Wallingford"—Empress.

"To The Ladies," "Unseeing Eyes" On Local Films

"A Day of Faith" and "In Search of a Thrill" Also Among the Offerings—"Scaramouche" Holds Over.

ARTHUR STRINGER'S story, "Unseeing Eyes," which takes its title from the greatest horror of the Arctics, snow-blindness, comes to the screen at the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters this week, with comedy relief furnished by Lloyd (Ham) Hamilton.

Gene Rodemich's orchestra offers a new lineup of popular tunes on the stage. Ross and Brooks, harmony singers, appear with the orchestra.

Lionel Barrymore, Seena Owen and Louis Wolheim, who played on the stage in "The Hairy Ape," are the featured players in "Unseeing Eyes."

Stage and screen attractions divide honors at the Missouri Theater this week. The screen feature is "To the Ladies," a James Cruze production featuring Edward Horton, Theodore Roberts and Helen Jerome Eddy. The story tells of a young wife's interest in her husband's business affairs and her struggle to obtain his promotion to the position of manager of a piano company. Several other of the employes seek the coveted position and many humorous scenes develop around the tactics used to win the boss' favor. "To the Ladies" was adapted from the stage play of the same name. Theodore Roberts is cast as the boss of the piano plant, Edward Horton is the employe who is pushed for the advancement by his wife, played by Helen Jerome Eddy.

The stage attractions include Brown's Saxophone Six in a program of popular, syncopated melodies.

"The Day of Faith," adapted from Arthur Somers Roche's novel, is the feature attraction at the Kings. The cast includes Eleanor Boardman, Raymond Griffith, Ford Sterling and Wallace MacDonald. Stage attractions are Macy and Scott, singers, and Hans Hanke, composer and pianist.

"The Day of Faith" is the story of the experiences of a young woman who attempts to uphold the idealistic view "my neighbor is perfect." A millionaire whose son fell in love with the girl tries to break up her idealistic campaign while seeming to favor the match. She discovers the trickery, but is saved from pessimism by a bright young reporter whom she marries.

The Delmonte's screen feature is Viola Dana, in her picture of Paris life, "In Search of a Thrill." On the program also are the Washington University Glee, Banjo and Mandolin clubs and Ernie Young's Revue. A new "Our Gang" comedy is a short reel feature.

Miss Dana is seen in the role of a young society girl in "In Search of a Thrill." The plot takes her through the gay life of the cafes of the Montmartre district of Paris.

"Scaramouche" goes into its third week at the Pershing. The Columbia offers a first run showing of "The Banks of the Wabash" and the Rivoli has "Mae Murray in "The French Doll."

Madge Evans, in "On the Banks of the Wabash"—Columbia.

Louise Dresser, Theodore Roberts and Helen Jerome Eddy, in "To the Ladies"—Missouri.

Viola Dana and Warren Baxter, in "In Search of a Thrill"—Delmonte.

Francis X. Bushman as Messala in the forthcoming screen version of "Ben Hur."

Rupert Hughes has completed the continuity for his next picture, "True as Steel."

"Yolando" will be retained as the title for the new Marion Davies photoplay from the novel by Charles Major.

Goldwyn will picturize "The Bandelero," Paul Gwynne's romantic melodramatic novel of Spain.

Rex Beach has been spending considerable time of late at the Paramount Long Island studio assisting Lloyd Sheldon in editing and titling the Paramount picture made from his story, "Big Brother." The picture is an Allen Dwan production with a cast including Tom Moore, Edith Roberts, Raymond Hatton, Joe King, Charles Henderson and Mickey Bennett.

Work on the exterior scenes for Thomas Meighan's latest Paramount picture, "Pied Piper Malone," progressed so rapidly at Georgetown, S. C., that the company has returned to the Long Island studio. Fifty-nine persons went south for these scenes. "Pied Piper Malone" is an original story for the screen by Booth Tarkington. Alfred E. Green is directing.

Gloria Swanson has returned to her work in "The Humming Bird" at the Paramount Long Island studio after a week's stay at home due to an eye burn caused by the American Offers 'Good Morning, Dearie;' at Orpheum, Nazimova

Second Week of "The Fool" at Shubert-Jefferson—Tragedienne in Vaudeville Playlet, "That Sort"—Wallingford Comedy at Empress.

A MUSICAL comedy, "Good Morning, Dearie," which is new at least to these parts, begins a week's engagement tonight at the American. Channing Pollock's homily in stage form, "The Fool," played by Mitchell Harris and a competent cast, remains at the Shubert-Jefferson for its second and final week. Mme. Alla Nazimova, noted tragedienne, is featured at the Orpheum in a playlet called "That Sort." The Woodward Players, at the Empress, have a course to "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," a time-honored comedy adapted by George M. Cohan from the once popular stories of George Randolph Chester.

"Good Morning, Dearie," a Dillingham production, is said to have run more than 400 performances at the Globe Theater in New York. Lou Caldwell, author of "Chin Chin" and succeeding Fred Stone there, wrote book and lyrics, and the score is by Jerome Kern, composer of "Sally" and numerous other pieces. The cast includes Virginia Watson, a St. Louis dancer; Gladys Rondolyn Roland, Mary Diehl, Dorothy Clark, Lee Powers, Roland Hogue, Edward Allen and Abbott Kilroy. There will be the usual chorus and a troupe of London dancing girls.

The sequence of scenes passes from a costumer's shop, with its silhouettes, to a street in China-town, the Hell's Bells dance hall, the rooms of a mansion and finally the garden episode.

Nazimova in Mother's Role.

THE sketch presented by Mme. Nazimova and her company at the Orpheum is by Basil Macdonald Hastings, and purports to show the anguish of a mother, who was a stage dancer, and who takes to drugs after being separated from her child by her influential divorced husband. Others on the bill are George Whiting and Sadie Burt, who sing his compositions; Frank Arlington, who plays a cultivated violin-playing tramp, in "Bankes Will Happen;" Fred Sanborn and Sammy Fields, in "Appearing in Person;" Bert Hanlon, pianist; William Ebs, ventriloquist; and Clemons Belling's troupe of dogs and donkeys. McIntyre and Heath and Rae Samuels will head next week's list.

The Rialto's bill includes Ben Meroff, fiddling comedian, and a dancing orchestra; Jack McGowan and Sarah, roller skaters, dancers and dancers; Jack Clifford, with his caricature of a deaf detective in a small town; George Lyons, pianist; and Cooke, Mortimer and Harry, who play baseball in this act with a radium sphere.

The Columbia announces a reduction in prices. The figures range from 17 cents in the gallery to 50 cents in parquet and boxes. The program presents the Six Musical Nosses; Bruce Kent and others in a playlet of flirting, called "Blondes;" Eddie Medley and Marie Dupree, Edmunds and Le Velle, "Speaker" Lewis and Maxine and Bobby, the latter a dog. The feature film is "On the Banks of the Wabash," after Paul Dresser's song.

The Grand Opera House announces a condensed version of "Young America," featuring Benny Sweeny; "Reveries," a posing act; Johnson and Baker, Stuart's "Scotch Revue," Hayden and Atwood, Johnny Morris and Edna Towne, Manners and Lowery, and Oscar Martin. The Gayety's show is "Bathing Beauties," with Jack Hunt and Clyde Bates.

No announcements are at hand from either the American or the Shubert-Jefferson for next week. For Christmas week they promise, respectively, Mrs. Fiske in "Mary, Mary Quite Contrary," and a musical comedy called "Up She Goes." For the week of Dec. 30, the Shubert-Jefferson announces a second musical comedy, "The Gingham Girl."

A Piquant Vehicle for Mary Nash —"The Lady"

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.

AN irresistible tang of other days spices a comedy by Martin Brown, with Mary Nash as star, which opened Tuesday night at the Empire. The rather meaningless title is "The Lady." The time is 1900, and the picaresque verbiage and astonishing sartorial effects of the period are preserved with much fidelity.

As a melodrama, the plot is second-rate, but this is not altogether deleterious to the play. Miss Nash plays the part of a show girl who married a toff and found repentance when he blew the roll at Monte Carlo. Afterwards she took the hurdles of a miserable fate with some 90-odd degrees of finished melodramatics, ending with a dive scene and manslaughter. It is almost superfluous to add that her son, who shoots the brawling sailor in the last act, never does recognize the barmaid in La Havre as his mother.

Lou Tellegen, famous as "the great lover" of stage and screen, who is appearing in "Let Not Man Put Asunder," now in course of production by J. Stuart Blackton for Vitagraph, disclosed in a talk over the radio that he had been a prize fighter when a youth in France.

Vitagraph has asked the motion picture and literary editors of newspapers throughout the country, as well as film fans, to help in selecting the actor best fitted to play Peter Blood, the leading role in "Captain Blood," Rafael Sabatini's newest novel, which that company will produce.

Betty Blythe is making "The Recoil," Rex Beach's story, in its authentic locations at Monte Carlo. The film will be released by Goldwyn.

Camera work has been completed at the Goldwyn studios upon Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks," and on "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model."

"Reno" is the new title for Maj Rupert Hughes' latest picture, formerly known as "Law Against Law." The cast includes Helene Chadwick, George Walsh, Lew Cody, Carmel Myers, Hedda Hopper, Dale Fuller and others.

Alma Rubens has replaced Jetta Goudal as the feminine lead in "Blood and Gold" which Distinctive is producing in New York City. Conrad Nagel has been loaned by Goldwyn to play the masculine lead.

Although Erich Von Stroheim has been working indefatigably for the past month cutting and editing "Greed," a literal screen translation of Frank Noris' "McTeague," his task is still incomplete. Among screen folks more interest has been manifested over "Greed" than any other production of the year.

Unconfirmed reports have cast George Walsh as Ben Hur and Eleanor Boardman and Ford Sterling, in "The Day of Faith"—Kings.

Flonzaleys Appear Saturday Night at Odeon

THE Flonzaley String Quartet, a favorite here during many years, will try its fortunes at the Odeon Saturday night, after having in the past used the much smaller hall of the Sheldon Auditorium. The personnel of the quartet remains the same—Adolfo Betti, first violin; Alfred Pochon, second violin; Louis Bailly, viola, and Iwan d'Archambeau, violoncellist. The program is announced as follows:

Quartet in G Major, Op. 77, No. 1 .....Haydn
Allegro; Adagio; Menuetto; Presto.

Quartet in A Major, Op. 41, No. 2 .....Schumann
Andante expressivo; Allegro molto moderato; Assai agitato; Adagio molto; Allegro vivace.

Menuetto and Fuga, from Quartet .....

THE Ukrainian National Chorus is announced for a concert at the Odeon on Christmas night, in a program of yuletide carols and folksongs, both of Russia and America. Alexander Koshetz is said to have prepared this special repertory for the holiday season. The chorus has twice sung in this city, and established a model of ensemble vocalism.

Report is abroad that Ignaz Paderewski, distinguished pianist and former Premier of Poland, will give his first St. Louis recital in many years at the Coliseum during February. The Coliseum was chosen in order to meet the enormous fee of $5000 for each appearance.

As soloists for the Pageant Choral Society's first concert of the season, Director Fischer has chosen Mrs. Karl Kimmel, soprano, and Qwilym Miles, baritone, both of this city. The concert will take place at the Odeon on the evening of Jan. 15, and Wolf-Ferrari's "New Life" will be the undertaking.

School and Club Items.

STUDENTS of the Strassberger Conservatories will give three concerts, this afternoon and evening, and Tuesday night, at the South Side branch, Grand boulevard and Shenandoah avenues. Mrs. Clarence Strother, Miss Laura Hald, Edith Grand Hurst and Mrs. T. K. Cooper will give musical numbers at Tuesday afternoon's meeting of the Tercentenary Shakspeare Society, at Vandervoort Music Hall. Edward J. White will speak on "Criminal Types in Shakspeare."

"The Music and Musicians of Russia" will be the subject of a program to be given Wednesday by members of the Morning Etude at Baldwin Hall. Illustrations from modern composers will make up the Mel-Harmonic Club's program Saturday afternoon at Baldwin Hall.

The competition for the Morning Choral Club's silver trophy is again open. It is offered to girls' choruses of 16 or more voices, from any school in St. Louis or vicinity. The cup was won last year by a chorus from Hosmer Hall. It will become the property of any school winning it three successive times. Applications may be made to Mrs. Albert D. Chappell, 5764 Westminster place.

Paris Turns From Stage Novelties to the Films

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

PARIS, Nov. 23.

CRITICS are bewailing the dearth of good new plays, and are wondering if the opening theatrical season will produce something to show that the modern French school of drama has lost nothing of its vigor and fertility.

Theatrical managers and playwrights, as well as the public, are agreed upon one thing, and that is that the French theatrical world is in a rather sleepy state. That may be the reason why the public is gradually losing interest in the legitimate drama and transferring its favor to the movies. Every Sunday afternoon and evening, and often on Thursday and Saturday afternoons, long queues may be seen in front of all the boulevard cinemas waiting for admission. This is quite new to Paris, and makes one wonder if the cinema theaters in Paris will not soon be obliged to enlarge their seating space or build entirely new theaters after the American standard.

Even Gemier Is Conventional.

TO return to the subject of the Paris theatrical season, no one seems to care much about experiments in new forms of playmaking and stage productions such as are being tried in other parts of Europe. Gemier, who until a year or two ago was one of the boldest in the launching of new ideas in stage production, appears to have settled down in his new job of superintending quiet conventional plays at the old-fashioned Odeon Theater. Even the little advance guard schools like the "Atelier," the "Chimere" and the "Vieux Colombier" have either closed down altogether or confine their efforts to the production of plays which had more or less success a few years ago.

Jacques Ebertot promised to create a certain livelihood in the theatrical world when he took over the Champs Elysees Theater and kept his promise the first year, but has opened the present season with a series of plays of no more than ordinary interest.

He has, however, created in the same building a third theater called the Studio Champs Elysees, at which he is giving a play, "Le Club des Canards Mandarins," an embroidered tale based upon Chinese material a thousand years old. It is a gorgeously spectacular production, though there is not sufficient novelty in it to attract much attention.

"The Fettered Man."

PERHAPS one of the greatest draws at present is M. Bourdet's comedy running at the Theatre Femina, "L'Homme Enchaine" (Fettered Man). The author fences with the problems arising from a wife's premarital fault. Should the husband forget and forgive? M. Bourdet leaves it to the public to conclude. He himself declines to furnish an answer, perhaps because he considers that no universal answer is possible. His leading character reflects thus: How, in view of her deception (that is to say, not of her single lapse, but her daily, hourly deception of him during their three years of wedded life), how could they live in the future in unfaltering, unwavering confidence? The play ends with just a suspicion that forgiveness may not be far off, but the treatment of the subject, while vigorous, leaves most to the imagination. Maybe M. Bourdet intends to convey the idea that his "fettered man" is every man who loves. Despite occasional weakenings the play is developed on the whole with real power and skill.

Sacha Guitry's rival in ubiquity is Louis Verneuil, who is very much to the fore just now as author, actor and manager. He has new plays running at three different theaters. He acts himself in one of them and is manager of a fourth. The best of his new plays is "Le Fauteuil No. 47," in which he appears himself at the Theater Antoine. It is a comedy about the theatrical world, its principal characters are a successful actress and a modest admirer who always occupies the same fauteuil to see her.

"Pocket Venus" to Star.

THE typically Parisian play of the moment, consisting of that special mixture of cheerful philosophy and wit, which is only to be found here, is "Beaute" at the Theater Marigny in the Champs Elysees, where the star is France's "pocket Venus," Spinelly, who exploits to the full her quaint and piquant personality combined with the latest extravagances in dress. It is a comedy dealing with the greater or less importance of good looks in love affairs. The author takes the view that women are so tender-hearted that ugliness is not an invariable obstacle to the winning of a woman's love.

In the same class, although slightly spicier, is "La Femme du Jour" at the Potiniere—one of the band-box theaters of Paris. In "La Femme du Jour," the author has conceived the notion of turning the charming personality of one of the leading beauties of Paris into a limited liability company. The farcical possibilities of the subject may be imagined, and the author has developed them to the limit.

M. Alfred Savior's "Blue Beard's Eighth Wife," which has succeeded "Vertu, Vertu" at the Theater des Mathurins, is a cruelly caustic as the latter, but has gained much more popularity than "Vertu, Vertu." The irony of this study of a woman who keeps her husband's affection by pretending that she has a lover is very effective.

To Raise Price of Seats.

THERE is little new at the Boulevard theaters. The feature of this season is the revival of Henri Bataille's "La Femme Nue," in which Yvonne de Bray has scored unlocked for triumph. The play itself is proving even a greater success than when it was first produced a few years ago.

M. Emile Fabre, who in addition to being one of the most original of French writers for the stage is director of the Comedie Francaise, has petitioned the Minister of Public Instruction for authorization to raise the price of the best seats. Another consequence of the high cost of living.

The increase suggested is two francs on the present price of orchestra stalls and one franc on some other seats. The insignificance of the sum calls attention to the remarkable cheapness—for foreign spectators—of seats in the State subventioned theaters. With the dollar between 18 and 19 francs, a box seat at the opera costs the American visitor less than two dollars, similarly an orchestra stall at the Comedie Francaise costs little more than one dollar.

PIQUANT VEHICLE FOR MARY NASH; 'THE LADY'

days, and Elizabeth Risdon as a trollop of the corresponding period, provide no end of laughter with their mannerisms, costumes and innocent repartee. The piece is lavishly cast, and the settings are good. One may spend an evening entranced by this crude and hilarious piece. It is undeniably entertaining.

A PATHETICALLY incompetent piece of playwriting, directing and acting was "The Talking Parrot," a comedy by Hutcheson Boyd, which was presented Monday night at the Frazee, and the first night audience accorded it a humiliating reception. Not only were raspberries passed—the whole bowl of fruit was hurled, juice, spoon and all. At times the actors were forced to pause while the audience repeated the last line and guffawed.

There is an ex-vaudeville actress married to a prude, her eighth husband, who goes on a voyage and is drowned. There are two male friends. One engages her to pose for his paintings. The stage becomes dark and the husband's ghost appears to aid his widow in the choice of her next husband. A parrot sits in a cage at one side of the room throughout the three acts. The three men, husband, artist and novelist, in turn implore the bird to speak. They want to know all about "Howe," the man whose name the wife spoke so endearingly one night in her sleep. But Polly is faithful. Nary a word will she speak. The rest is silence.

Russians in "An Enemy of the People."

THE Moscow Art Players' presentation of Ibsen's "An Enemy of the People," Monday night at Jolson's Fifty-ninth street theater, was an exact essay upon the hopelessness of mass government. It was perfect in its conception and therefore was uneventful and unexciting, but still interesting in the sheer logic of the playing.

The great Katchaloff's interpretation of Dr. Stockmann was smoothly admirable. He refused to leap into the whirlpool of forensics, preferring to play the part safely and gently. The fourth act speech was delivered with so kindly an air, with such compassion for those he knew to be his intellectual inferiors, that one wished our swarms of reformers were present to observe his restraint. Even his hands seemed those of a kindly and gentle man.

It was interesting to observe that the mob scene of the fourth act was played by the incensed villagers with an air of wondering that one of themselves could so vilify them. It was exact and Ibsenic, but not nearly so dramatic as the thunder of massed effects in "Tsar Fyodor."

Mahler's G Major Symphony First Time Here

AT the Symphony Orchestra's concerts of Thursday night and Friday afternoon, which will be followed by a holiday intermission of three weeks, Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4, in G Major, will be presented for the first time in this city, and Mrs. Helen Traubel Carpenter, St. Louis soprano, will make her debut on a regular symphony program by singing the solo part of the fourth movement.

Mieczslaw Muenta, a young Polish pianist over whose playing critics in other cities have rhapsodized in ecstatic terms, will be soloist at this afternoon's concert at the Odeon, for which a program of super-popular caliber has been arranged. The pianist will offer Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 2, in C Minor, and among the orchestral numbers will be Beethoven's overture to "Egmont" and the second movement, Largo, from Dvorak's "New World" symphony.

After the regular concerts of this week, there will be a hiatus covering the Christmas and New Year's holidays, and the next Thursday and Friday concerts will be on Jan. 3 and 4, with Ossip Gabrilowitsch as soloist. Likewise, there will be no popular concert on Dec. 23. It had also been planned to omit the popular concert of Dec. 30, but one will be given on that date because of complaints that the previous schedule left the city without symphonic music from Dec. 16, the date of next Sunday's popular concert, until Jan. 3. There will be no popular concert on Feb. 10, and tickets for that date will be honored on Dec. 30.

Soprano Solo in Finale.

IN most of his nine symphonies, Gustav Mahler employed the human voice, either in solo or chorus; and in the final movement of the Fourth he introduces an old Bavarian folk-song, "Her Himmel haengt voll Geigen" ("The sky hangs full of fiddles"), in which the household arrangements of the hereafter are discussed with naive intimacy. The program will be as follows:

Symphony No. 4 in G Major.....Mahler
I. Bedaechtig (Deliberately).
II. In gemaechlicher Bewegung (With gentle motion).
III. Ruhevoll; poco adagio (Quietly; a bit slowly).
IV. Sehr behaglich (Very cosily). (First time in St. Louis.)

Overture to "Tannhaeuser".....Wagner
Aria, "Dich teure Halle," from "Tannhaeuser".....Wagner
Capriccio Italien, Op. 45.....Tschaikowsky

Orchestra to Tour in South.

AT next Sunday's popular concert, there will be two soloists, John Kiburz, first flute of the orchestra, and Miss Aileen Hare, a young coloratura soprano of this city.

Immediately after this concert, the orchestra will leave on a tour in the South. Matinee and evening concerts will be given at Birmingham on Dec. 17, with Mrs. Carpenter and Rudolph Ganz as soloists. Three concerts will be played at New Orleans. On the evening of Dec. 18, Mr. Ganz will appear as conductor and soloist, playing the Schumann concerto. A children's concert will be given on the afternoon of Dec. 19, and in the evening there will be a popular concert, with Michel Gusikoff as soloist. In Jackson, Tenn., there will be a concert on the evening of Dec. 20, at which Mr. Gusikoff will be soloist. The orchestra will return home on the morning of Dec. 21.

Ecomiums for Muentz.

MIECZYSLAW MUENTZ makes his St. Louis debut at a popular rather than a regular concert because he was signed up for such an appearance before he won a furore in New York and Chicago. He is said to be 23 years old. Various reviewers have described him as "a player of subtle moods and delicate coloring," with a "clean incisive touch" and "thoughtful musicianship;" an artist of "sheer virtuosity of technique and exquisite musical sensibility;" and "a young Paderewski." The program follows:

Overture to "Egmont," Op. 84.....Beethoven
Second Movement, Largo, from Symphony in E Minor, No. 5, "From the New World".....Dvorak
Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, No. 2, in C Minor, Op. 18.....Rachmaninoff
I. Moderato; II. Adagio sostenuto; III. Allegro.
(a) "Irish Tune from County Derry."
(b) "Shepherd's Hey".....Grainger
"American Fantasy".....Herbert

CHARLES WARREN EATON'S exhibit at the Newhouse gallery includes the introduction of a phase of the artist's work that few persons are familiar with. The name "Eaton" has been so long associated with the portrayal of pine tree landscapes it is hard to believe if the same artist's work one looks upon when viewing his work of the last summer while in Belgium. His scenes around Lake Como are as far in spirit and handling from the manner of his pine tree pictures as Belgium is from Connecticut.

Something of the spirit of the flat-surfaced lakes has been carried by Mr. Eaton into the remaining landscape of most of these pictures. With cool, calm lack of emotion he has painted the attractive scenes for their pictorial value chiefly. A passivity unknown in Eaton's other works enters into these. By using another key and handling his paint more thinly, perhaps, he has put his Belgian scenes as far away as possible from the deep, luscious tones of his pine tree subjects. While well composed and splendidly painted, the Belgian pictures cannot, to our mind, compare with his pine trees with their stately dignity, the magnificence of design they afford, and the mystery of the rich

The vocal quartet of the Rockbottom Grange obliging with that stirring ditty, "The Farmer Feeds Them All."

One of the events of a flawless evening is the address on "Wayside Marketing," by Farmer Trueman Axel.

Miss Grace Groundsell, the organist, having brought "Mighty Lak a Rose," with variations, to a successful close, is waiting for the applause to die down. Maybe, as an encore, she will oblige with somebody's "Etude in D Minor."

Armed with a souvenir booklet and a good three dozen picture postcards, Mrs. Hattie Rowen will talk on "My Trip to Canada." Mrs. Rowen is the wife of the village undertaker, and is a business woman of no mean ability. She embalms very well, they say.

"Beloved, It Is Morn," sung with great amiability, which is as it should be, by Mrs. Grace Ratwick of the Congregational choir.

Among those present at the entertainment is Miss Abby Wolver, the society reporter of the Rockbottom Enquirer, as ever on the lookout for bits of chit chat—Miss Wolver has gleaned, among other joyful tidings, that on Friday evening the Lady Martha Chapter, order of the Northern Star, is visiting Queen Esther Chapter of the same, at Mandolin Center.

Mr. Hertzog, the Congregational minister, talks for a few brief minutes on the subject of church extension.

Some jokester on the platform has just pointed out the trenchant fact that Joe Wohl, the milkman, is present with a new girl in tow—the new girl being Miss Josie Price who clerks at Migg's general store. Josie doesn't know where to look!

Notes of Interest to St. Louis Art Lovers

CHARLES WARREN EATON'S exhibit at the Newhouse gallery includes the introduction of a phase of the artist's work that few persons are familiar with. The name "Eaton" has been so long associated with the portrayal of pine tree landscapes it is hard to believe it the same artist's work one looks upon when viewing his work of the last summer while in Belgium. His scenes around Lake Como are as fine in spirit and handling from the manner of his pine tree pictures as Belgium is from Connecticut.

Something of the spirit of the flat-surfaced lakes has been carried by Mr. Eaton into the remaining landscape of most of these pictures. With cool, calm lack of emotion he has painted the attractive scenes for their pictorial value chiefly. A quality unknown in Eaton's other works enters into these. By using another key and handling his paint more thinly, perhaps, he has put his Belgian scenes as far away as possible from the deep, luscious tone of his pine tree subjects. While well composed and splendidly painted, the Belgian pictures cannot, to our mind, compare with his pine trees with their stately dignity, the magnificence of design they afford, and the mystery of the rich perfume they seem to give off even through the paint.

TWO colorful scenes of old New Orleans have been sent to St. Louis to be exhibited and will be put on display at Kocian's within the next few days. One picture portrays an "Old Spanish Courtyard" and the other "The Old Book Store in the French Quarter." Marshall D. Smith, the artist, about whom we know little aside from his pictures, is a Chicagoan, apparently belonging to that coterie of artists to whom color is life.

These two pictures of Mr. Smith's, while not to be regarded very seriously, are entertaining from a standpoint of make-up. With some sort of putty or light cement, the composition board has been smeared and allowed to dry before the actual painting is commenced on this foundation. Intensely rich colors are blended effectively and the whole is veneered with a thick coating of heavy varnish. Of course, all that the artist was striving for was effect, and since that is accomplished with a flourish, he can be forgiven his trick of production and also the mark of the amateur in choosing subjects so obviously picturesque.

UNDER the supervision of Miss Mary Powell, newly-appointed head of the Educational Department of the City Art Museum, the work that is being undertaken among the schools is increasing in scope and amount of service rendered. Not only classes of children are being brought to the museum to receive the advantages of the new department, but groups of teachers, women's clubs and individuals are awailing themselves of the opportunity offered.

HEINZE WARNEKE'S wonderfully ingenious brass carvings and miscellaneous modelings recently have been placed on exhibition at the Public Library. With the exception of the prancing stallion carved in wood, and the brass figure of the "Woman With a Deer" (these two being included in the Open Show at the Artists' Guild at present) the collection is complete. In the glass case in the Delivery Hall of the Library, the public will find the frisking young metal animals and the green ceramic monkeys which continue to mystify all except the artist from whom we have been unable, as yet, to extract the exact story of the significance of these extraordinary creatures.

"FIESTA crowds—San Juan, New Mexico," which has been put on display at Kocian's, comes almost as a refutation to the argument against the well-known Berninghaus horse tied to the post before the inevitable abode wall.

"Fiesta Crowds," purely an exhibition picture, contains for its chief interest, atmospheric values rather than subject matter. The scene is one outside the village, on the wide plain of sand. Mexicans in gala dress walk between the covered wagons. But while the figures move about, they do not monopolize interest. Instead, they are subordinated to the proper degree to allow the feeling of the desert landscape to predominate. A soft purple haze that seems a part of the sky luminates the foreground by rather a reflected light. One small cloud floats high in the sky and suggests the solitude of the desert that surrounds this group of holiday visitors.

The picture is beautiful in color harmonies and is skillfully painted.

SHORTLY after the first of the year, Walter Rousseff expects to exhibit some new work. Persons acquainted with the echoes of Krehbell, which comprised Rousseff's show at the Library about a year ago, will be unable to recognize any similarity between those shallow landscapes and the strong mass work he is doing now.

The exact reason for the sudden difference would be hard to determine, except that his present figure and still-life work is more serious and consequently more thoughtful. Certainly it has gained in solidity and force. The Italian picnic scene that he now has under way, and the character portrait of a young Russian bear no resemblance of any kind to the almost flimsy instability of the former landscapes. It is true that they were quick notes done in high key, while the heavier pictures he is at work on are kept down and definitely premeditated. The landscapes, though thin, were not without value, although it is in his present style that his better work will be accomplished.

IRRITATION IN ALL CANCER CASES, SAYS PHYSICIAN

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News.

BRUSSELS.—More and more new facts about the "conditioning circumstances" of cancer are coming out as a result of the anticancer conference in Brussels.

"In my opinion, it is impossible to ascertain a single cause for this dread malady, because cancer is not an entity, but a collection of analogous diseases," says Prof. Frederick Hoffman of New York. "In place of couse or origin, however, we can talk intelligently about conditioning circumstances. The processes of irritation seem to be at the bottom of everything.

"The processes which predispose to malignant growths in the liver, stomach, peritonenum, intensiles, breast or mouth, offer conclusive evidence that particular forms of cancer do not arise without irritation.

"Faulty habits of nutrition, such as constant overeating, ferm one common irritant. Obstructive clothing forms another, particularly among women, as is proved by the large and increasing mortality from cancer of the breast. Still another factor is smoking, which bears a direct casual relationship to cancer of the mouth among men. Cancers of this type are rare among women.

"The essential question involved is the length of time during which the irritating processes have been in operation."

NICOTINE DUST EFFECTIVE IN CONTROLLING BOLL WEEVIL

South Carolina Experiment Indicates It Works as Well as Calcium Arsenate.

By the Associated Press.

CLEMSON COLLEGE, S. C.,—Promising results in controlling the boll weevil by the use of nicotine, as a substitute for the calcium arsenate commonly used in poisoning the pest, have been obtained by the South Carolina experimental station, according to a statement made public here by Prof. A. F. Conradi, etymologist in charge. This has been under way for several months, Prof Conradi said, and comparison of results obtained by the use of the nicotine showed that it was as effective as calcium arsenate used in neighboring fields.

The nicotine is applied as a dust, similarly to calcium arsenate. It is obtained from waste tobacco and can be prepared more economically than the arsenate preparation, it was said.

MISSING CHILDREN IN LOG

WILLIAMSBURG, Ky. — Two children of Ansel Manning, a mountain coal miner, near here, were found the other day huddled in a hollow log, a quarter of a mile from their home. The little ones, a boy of four and a girl of three, had been missing four days. Fifteen hundred men and women had searched almost every nook and cranny of the Whitley County Mountains before they found them.

The wanderers were weak from hunger and exposure, but otherwise little the worse for their experience.

YEAR'S SEPARATION TO BE WEDDING TEST FOR STUDENTS

Annulment Follows Marriage of Girl, 17, and Young Man, 20, Before Football Game.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LINCOLN, Neb.—Mary Burnham, 17, daughter of one banker and granddaughter of another, and Maurice Roberts, 20, son of Mrs. Mary Roberts, also wealthy, motored to Nebraska City to get cider for a University of Nebraska party.

After they got the cider, they decided to go on to Sidney, Ia., just across the Missouri River, and get married. Then they returned to Lincoln and went to the football game that afternoon.

In the evening the young people told their secret to the parents and asked forgiveness. Instead, Mary was sent off to her sorority house. Maurice was ordered to his frat house.

Monday morning their families were in District Court asking that the marriage be annulled. Monday afternoon the court granted a hearing at which the marriage was annulled.

The Burnhams announce they will send their daughter to a school on the east coast. Mrs. Roberts says she will send her son to a school on the west coast.

Both families agree that, if at the end of a year the young people want to repeat the ceremony and get married again, they will be permitted to do so.

Miss Burnham is a daughter of J. L. Burnham, cashier of the First Savings Bank and a granddaughter of S. H. Burnham, president of the First National Bank of Lincoln.

DISABLED SOLDIER, CLAIMED BY 3 MOTHERS, KIDNAPED BY ONE

Deaf, Dumb and Shellshocked Italian Veteran Subject of Dispute Among 3 Families.

Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

ROME, Dec. 8.—Until one of them kidnaped a deaf, dumb and shellshocked soldier from the others, three mothers were claiming Messina, took the soldier from the the man as their son and were taking turns caring for him.

Signora Battarino, a widow from home of the second claimants, the prosperous Megnitti family. The third claimant is a peasant from three lost sons in the war. Cheeti. All three identified him from pictures of unclaimed invalids at the Bologna hospital. All the Battarinos produced the testimony of their son's fiancee. The peasant's claim was verified by the village priest. The Menigittis had pictures remotely resembling the soldier.

Signora Battarino proposed to have the man undergo treatment at the best hospitals for nervous disorders so he might recognize his parents but the Menigittis refused, and the widow thereupon kidnaped the soldier, said to be the worst case of shellshock in any war hospital.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AT THE MOVIE STUDIOS

powerful studio lights. During her absence Sidney Olcott, the director, filmed a number of scenes showing the mobilization in Paris in 1914 and the Armistice day celebration in 1918.

During the filming of scenes for George Melford's production for Paramount of "Flaming Barriers" a cabin which was erected at Columbia, Cal., in 1850 was purchased and hauled 10 miles to Sonora. The cabin was once a barber shop. It was destroyed by fire during the making of the picture.

John Francis Dillon has signed with First National to direct a series of five features. His first is to be "Lilies of the Field," a screen version of the stage hit.

The cast of "Secrets," the latest Joseph M. Schenck production, besides Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien, includes Patterson Dial, Emily Fitzroy, E. J. Ratcliffe, Claire McDowell, Gertrude Astor, Frances Feeney, Winston Miller and Alice Day.

The production is free from the unsightly trickery of the common screen-play; the scenes run in logical sequence, and the action for each chapter is confined to the continuation for the next chapter of the original serial story.

The inserts and subtitles are edited by the persons who are in direct touch with the public. Unfortunately, many of these inserts are not born intrinsically of the film interests.

"Scenarioche" is the advent of a new species of writer, who, confident of his ability to dictate to the public, disregards the limitations imposed by the film's mechanical work and the screen.

PROF. OTTO HELLER, FAMOUS EDUCATOR, TELLS ST. LOUIS—
The production is free from all objectionable, trickery of the trade so characteristic of the common run of photoplay to-day; tawdry display, melodramatic claptrap, and the substitution of cheap sentimentalism for genuine emotional strain.
The inserts and subtitles were written and edited by persons with an intelligent faith in the intelligence of the American public. Unfortunately, such faith has not been habitually manifested by the film interests.
"Scaramouche" is likely to mark the advent of a new epoch in the photoplay art, unless the public in the future by its confident expectation should disappoint me by means of hearty approval its discrimination between this splendid work and the average "movie."
Yours very truly,
OTTO HELLER.

'HEALTH SUNDAY' WILL BE OBSERVED BY CHURCHES TODAY

Part of Campaign to Aid in the Sale of Christmas Seals.

Today will be observed as "Health Sunday" in aid of the Christmas seal campaign of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis in 231 churches. It is also the beginning of "Health Week," set aside for many activities by various organizations in behalf of the campaign.
The campaign has the full indorsement of Archbishop Glennon, the Ministerial Alliance of St. Louis and of Jewish rabbis. The week was officially declared by proclamation of Mayor Kiel.
The churches will distribute literature bearing on the work of the society in its health crusade, and 150 of the number will make special announcements. In some sermons will be devoted to the theme of health. The churches distributing literature have asked for 70,000 pieces.

First Boat Load Since War on Way to Hull.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Dec. 8.—The steamer King Alfred is due in Hull tomorrow with the first boat load of Russian grain to reach this country since the war. She will unload 600 tons of wheat and 600 tons of barley. Two other cargoes to be delivered at Southampton and Manchester, will arrive later.
The merchants of Hull are enthusiastic over the re-establishment of their former trade relations with Russia. One optimistic prediction there is that the thriving exchange of Russian foodstuffs for British machinery and manufactured goods will reach the pre-war figure within a year. Payment for the present shipments of grain is being made by the British buyers in cash. Besides the grain shipped to England, English buyers have received reports that 100,000 tons of grain left Black Sea ports last week for continental countries, while 250,000 tons of Russia's 1923 surplus still remain to be exported.

500,000 FOREIGNERS IN PARIS

200,000 Live in City Permanently; Police Classify Occupations. Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Nearly all the American residents in Paris are in the liberal professions, it is stated Semi-officially. Two hundred thousand foreigners live permanently here; 300,000 have cards of identification, which the police may demand at any time.
Most of the foreign-born in this cosmopolitan city dwell in colonies and follow similar occupations. Many of the British are physicians or lawyers or "gentlemen of leisure." Numbers of Swiss are employed in the great hotels, and are most efficient there. The Spaniards and Italians are builders or decorators; some of them peddlers. Many Poles are tailors; the Belgians are in the iron factories or like occupations. Only the Russians are not gregarious; some of them, once aristocrats, are earning their daily bread here however they can.

Russian Funds for Propaganda.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and The Chicago Daily News. (Copyright, 1923.)
PARIS, Dec. 8.—Confidential French reports from Russia are that a recent meeting of the Central Executive Committee from Russia are that at a recent meeting of the Central Executive Committee, M. Sakolnikov, Minister of Finance, admitted for the first time that one-fifth of the total budget receipts were paid over to the secret revolutionary propaganda fund of the third internationale. Because of Rusia's deplorably bad financial condition, he asked that this appropriation be reduced. The members of the committee refused to make any such reduction.

Buried With Her Parrot.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
CINCINNATI, Dec. 8.—After having rested in a mausoleum in Spring Grove Cemetery here for almost a year, the body of the late Mrs. Viola Dillingham was interred in a lit there. A unique feature of the burial was the fact that a pet parrot, which she had had for 15 years, was buried beside her mistress. The coffin of Mrs. Dillingham cost $2000.

Deer Hide With Cattle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
MORTON, Wash., Dec. 8.—Seven deer fleeing before the guns of hunters sought safety with the herd of domestic cattle on the F. T. Gibbons ranch here. While out in the pasture filling the salt boxes, Gibbons discovered the visitors and was amazed to note they advanced and ate with the cattle.

Do you look Too old to succeed?

Gray hair denotes advancing age. Age is a handicap, and we all know the advantage of a youthful appearance.
Don't stay gray! Look young, vigorous! When your hair turns gray, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur will darken it.
Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store, a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of men and women recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair perfectly, and besides, no one can tell, because it darkens so naturally and evenly.
You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking a few strands at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears. After another application or two its natural color is restored, and you appear years younger.

WILL SEEK SOURCE OF RIVER OF DOUBT

British Expedition to Hunt for Amazon Tribe Said to Be Ruled by Women.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 22.—A group of British scientists and ex-service men has been formed to penetrate the jungles of the Brazilian Amazon and outdo Theodore Roosevelt's discovery of the River of Doubt. The men will gather at Pernambuco for their start into the Amazon jungles where they expect to spend 18 months searching for a tribe supposed to be ruled by the women Amazons who amputate their right breasts in order that they may be more proficient in the use of the bow and arrow. Evidences of the existence of this race are said to have come to light recently.

The leader of the expedition is Col. Carruthers of the Bengal Lancers. He is said to be well known in British army circles. His chief interest in the expedition is in tropical animals. Maj. P. J. Regan O'Connor of the Eleventh British Hussars is going along, as are Capt. J. K. Crespigny of the First life guards and Dr. J. J. Ryan of the Medical Corps. Science is represented by Prof. Karl Hermann, geologist of Bonn University, and Harry Preston and A. J. Chapman, naturalists, from Sydney, Australia. The expedition carries its own photographer, Frank Boyd, who was official guide for Col. Roosevelt and speaks nine Indian dialects.

All Crave Excitement.

According to Maj. O'Connor almost all the members of the expedition are British army officers and ex-service men. The calm of peace is palling on them and they seek excitement. They also hope that their explorations will be beneficial to science and to themselves.

"We are out to find the source of the river Roosevelt discovered," said Maj. O'Connor, "and we are ready to give our lives as the price, if necessary. The expedition gathers at Pernambuco where our supplies have been shipped. We head right into uncivilized country and start from where Roosevelt left off. We are going to investigate many old Indian legends and are going to look for the strange tribe whose women amputate their right breasts in order that they may shoot straighter with the bow and arrow."

According to Maj. O'Connor, the material objects of the expedition are the search for valuable timber, minerals and, particularly, precious stones. A study will be made of engineering possibilities and power development and if any success is met with, the men expect ultimately to acquire concessions for development of the resources.

After Man-Eating Fish.

The naturalists are interested in discovering a species of man-eating fish supposed to infest some of the interior rivers and branches of the Amazon. There is no fable about this fish. American engineers who constructed waterworks for interior Brazilian cities along the Amazon some years ago found such fish there. The fish even attack cattle that enter the rivers to drink.

After the British expedition reaches the limits explored by Col. Roosevelt may be divided into groups in order that it may cover as much territory as possible. Maj. O'Connor explained. However, because of the hostile tribes known to live in the territory, all parties will keep within 24 hours' march of one another.

The members of the party are financing the expedition themselves, each bearing an equal share of the expenses.

CITY CLUB TO LUNCH IN ITS NEW BUILDING JAN. 2

Dining Room Expected to Be Ready Then, But Entire Structure Not Completed Before May 1.

The City Club's Christmas party at noon, Dec. 24, will be the club's last meeting in its present quarters on the seventh floor of the Board of Education Building. Its next meeting, a luncheon on Jan. 2, will be held in the dining room of the club's new $2,000,000 home at Eleventh and Locust streets.

The new building will not be completed until May 1, but plans are under way for a celebration on Dec. 31 when the part of the building will be ready for occupancy. The new quarters will have a large auditorium and a dining room seating 900 persons, as well as many other features not available in the club's present cramped quarters. Since the new building has been under construction the club's membership of 1170 has doubled and a limit of 4000 members has been fixed. The Advertising Club of St. Louis and its Better Business Bureau will move into the new City Club Building within a few months.

COLGATE'S

Gifts that are Sure to Please

WE pass on to you OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES' opinion that memory, imagination, old sentiments and associations are more readily stirred by a fragrance than almost any other means.

With this excellent advice in mind, one chooses COLGATE'S, particularly for Christmas. Down the list—from the oldest member of the family to the youngest; from Johnny's teacher to one's bosom friend—the gift of COLGATE'S brings twofold pleasure. To the recipient because of its fragrant loveliness and fine quality. To the giver because the joy of giving has not been dampened by the cost.

And the pleasure of a COLGATE gift will stir the memory and live in sentiment long after the gift itself has yielded its last precious remnant.

HAWAII REPORTS YEAR OF INCREASED INCOME

Gov. Farrinton Tells of Steady Progress and Well-Balanced Prosperity.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Every economic indicator reflects the "steady progress and well-balanced prosperity which have been the portion of Hawaii durin gthe past fiscal year," Gov. W. R. Farrington declared in his annual report to Congress, made public today. As of special significance, he listed the following:

Saving deposits largest in history of territory.

Tonnage of vessels calling at Hawaiian ports greater than any other one year.

Sugar crop for 1923 estimated at 524,000 tons, valued at nearly $63,000,000.

Pineapples packed estimated at 5,500,000 acses, worth $28,875,000.

Labor conditions measurably improved due to increased immigration of agricultural labor from Philippines.

The Alien Problem.

For the first time in many years, Gov. Farrington said, the Japanese have taken second place in the sugar industry, being superseded by Filipinos. The large alien population continues to present a serious problem, however, and "the insistence of quite a group of aliens that their children be given alien language instruction under alien teachers demonstrates clearly that a good portion of these people have no desire to be assimilated." The right of aliens to insist upon such instruction is being tested in the courts.

"Hawaii does not receive for local appropriations a single cent of the moneys collected in customs and internal revenue. Similar collections in the Philippines and Porto Rico are used for the development of these possessions. Hawaii has never received a dollar of appropriation from the Federal Government for its highways, as in the case of Alaska, where the War Department has expended millions for highways and the Federal Government has constructed a railway. Hawaii has built its own roads and maintained its own territorial and municipal Governments under taxes levied in addition to those paid to the Federal Government. These local taxes total $9,569,218.41 for the year under review.

Out of Federal Aid.

"In the face of this and notwithstanding that Congress in 1910 amended the Organic Act of the Territory to include Hawaii in all general appropriations applicable to states, the territory has been left out of Federal appropriations for national highways, for agriculture and vocational training, and national maternity legislation.

"The territorial Legislature at its regular session of 1923 passed an act setting forth the historical record of annexation, reasserting Hawaii's right to complete recognition as an integral part of the American Union and authorizing the Governor to appoint a special commission to cooperate with the Delegate to Congress in presenting this situation to the United States Congress. This declaration has become popularly named Hawaii's Bill of Rights" and its chief significance is that the people of this territory—far from having any thought of independent autonomy—are aggressive in their ambition to be granted the full status of statehood."

GRIDIRON CLUB AT DINNER REVIEWS PILGRIMS OF 1923

Massachusetts Colony on Pennsylvania Avenue Lays Plans for Scalping "Indian" Hiram Johnson.

PRESIDENT AMONG NOTABLES PRESENT

Feature of Annual Gathering in Washington Is Presence of Ten Sons of Former Presidents.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The Pilgrims, model of 1923, landed tonight on Pennsylvania avenue, historic thoroughfare of the national capital, and in the presence of the Gridiron Club and its guests at the club's annual winter dinner, laid their plans for repelling the onslaught of Senator Hiram Johnson and others of a hostile tribe of "Indians."

Diners to the number of nearly 400, including President Coolidge, members of the Cabinet, of the Supreme Court and the diplomatic corps, Senators and Representatives, as well as a large company of notable guests from widely scattered parts of the United States, saw the story of the original Pilgrims furbished with "wise saws and modern instances" and passed in review as part of a program holding the mirror up to the current political spectacle.

Though the Gridiron Club comprises Washington newspaper correspondents, it is a standing rule of the organization, observed through the 38 years of its life, that all reporters shall be constructively absent when a guest makes a speech. It is not permitted, therefore, to say to what extent, if any, President Coolidge took his audience into his confidence. The President spoke, and showed thereby that the quotation from Oliver Wendell Holmes on the menu card, presumably put there in reference to himself, needed to be taken with some reservations:

"And Silence like a poultice comes
To heal the blows of sound."

Preceding the President's remarks, and scattered among the skits and songs provided by the club members along with the material fare of the banquet, were brief speeches by George Harvey, Senator Magnus Johnson of Minnesota, and Dr. Harry A. Garfield, president of Williams College. Arthur Sears Henning, president of the Gridiron Club, Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, presided.

Ten Sons of Former Presidents.

A feature of the gathering was the presence of 10 sons of former Presidents of the United States and the two sons of President Coolidge—John and Calvin. The 10 were Abram Garfield of Cleveland, Irvin McDowell Garfield of Boston, Dr. Garfield, James R. Garfield of Cleveland, former Secretary of the Interior; Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Archibald and Kermit Roosevelt of New York City, Charles and Robert Taft of Cincinnati, and Richard Cleveland of Boston. These were present in response to special invitations from the club to all the 20 living sons of Presidents. Of those unable to attend, letters were read from Dr. Lyon Gardiner Tyler and former Judge David Gardiner Tyler, both of Holdcroft, Va.; Robert Todd Lincoln, now in New Hampshire, and U. S. Grant of San Diego, Cal.

The guests were hardly seated before the club turned its attention to its guests and other distinguished actors on the political stage. As the dinner progressed there was a rapid fire of raillery in song and dialogue. The gridiron sizzled. Some of those present saw themselves as others see them.

Naturally, the new prominence which New England has gained in national political councils received attention. The stage for the Pilgrim playlet was set with a street sign marked Pennsylvania avenue. Boulders and trees were scattered about. In the background was a view of the presidential yacht Mayflower, riding at anchor. Pilgrim Stearns (Frank W. Stearns of Boston, the President's friend and adviser) led the way for a band of New Englanders, John W. Weeks, "Elder" Henry Cabot Lodge and others, all in Pilgrim dress and carrying blunderbusses. Club members in this and all other skits were the impersonators.

New England Pilgrims "Land."

"At last," said Stearns, "the New

GRIDIRON CLUB AT DENVER RECEIVES PILGRIMS OF 1923

England Pilgrims have landed in Pennsylvania avenue. This is the reward for having faith in Massachusetts."

Taking possession of the avenue in the name of Calvin Coolidge, the chant:

"What seek we thus afar
From our New England shore?
Convention votes, the spoils of war.
For nineteen twenty-four!"

They wonder whether the President of the colony, Capt. Coolidge, will advise them how to keep New England on the avenue.

"Certainly not," says Elder Lodge. "He will remain in the executive chamber, so the colonists may know he never forsakes his duty for a moment."

Weeks: "He leaves all the rest to us."

Lodge: "Of course. That is the major policy of the administration."

Brandegee: "But he may not like it if we plan to nominate him in 1924."

Lodge: "You have only to understand the policy of silence. It gives consent."

Another major policy of the administration, as revealed in the parley of the colonists, is the President's secretary, Bascom Slemp. Slemp it is who will "pour oil on the troubled waters" (but not Teapot Dome oil), who will tell Congress "where to get off," who will deal with the Indians that infest the political woods.

Slemp entered with his clothes awry. He explains that he has been saying "No" to Congressmen. He reports that Capt. Coolidge is going over the list of Republican Senators defeated in 1922.

Lodge: "What for?"

Slemp: "Looking for more Ambassadors."

Moses: "He is very sorry that Col. Harvey came home, isn't he?"

Slemp: "Yes; he hates noise."

Entry of the Indians.

Heralded each by war whoops in the distance, the leaders of the "Indians," one by one, enter and converse with the colonists.

Big Chief Magnus Johnson: "Does anybody here speak Swedish?"

Slemp: "I speak all Congression all dialects, Chief, and yours is no worse than many I have heard."

Magnus Johnson is followed by La Follette, Borah and Hiram Johnson, in the dress of Indian braves. Each declares himself the leader of the tribe of hostile Indians. Hiram Johnson, the last of the Indians to appear, declares that he is out to "kill a Pilgrim." The rival chiefs depart noisily and a witch runs on the stage, pursued by Elder James E. Watson. She is the "spirit of the World Court." Lodge seizes the witch, and Watson orders her conducted to the Capitol and "committed to the custody of the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate."

"And," concludes Watson, "may God have mercy on your soul."

The closing scene shows Priscilla dashing on the stage. Across the front of her dress is a placard, "The 1924 Nomination."

"You have found favor," Weeks tells Priscilla, "in the sight of the President of our colony, that peerless leader of the Pilgrims, Capt. Coolidge—a man not of words but of action; one who is versed in deeds and not a maker of phrases. He will not speak for himself, so I speak for him.

Priscilla: "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

Archly, Priscilla tells the colonists of others who have sought her hand—Herbert Hoover, Charles Hughes, Frank Lowden—and of that present 'insistent suitor," Gifford Pinchot. And all the while, she adds, the Indians are threatening to carry her off.

Weeks declares that all her old suitors will defend her against the Indians, "and would go down to political death" before permitting her to fall into the hands of "that Indian," Hiram Johnson. He asks for a word of hope for Capt. Coolidge, and the maid replies:

"Why does he not come himself and take the trouble to woo me? If I am not worth the wooing, I am surely not worth the winning. Surely a maid worth courting must also be well worth the asking. Granted Calvin is silent, he must finds words if he wants me. If he seeks me, let him ask; till then, I answer silence with silence."

Miss Democracy Worn Out.

The "Gridiron Stock Company" presented a revival of "A Midsummer Night's Scream," with Miss Democracy as Titania, Henry Ford as Bottom the Weaver, William G. McAdoo as a gentleman in waiting on Miss Democracy and Puck as a weaver of dreams.

Miss Democracy is worn out. "That League of Nations," she says, "will be the death of me."

McAdoo tries to revive her with a nip of "life-giving hooch," from a bottle labeled "Farmers' Relief." The drink "finishes" her. Ford enters, calling for his friends, Firestone and Edison. He sleeps and Puck fixes an ass's head on him.

Ford sings:

"The White House, the White House,
I want to go there evermore."

Miss Democracy:

"I pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again:
Thy purse is full, thine ears are long, my love;
Come, let me choose thee as my candidate."

She awakes from her enchantment and shudders. Ford, still sleeping, tells of the rare vision he has had. "Methought," he says, "that Miss Democracy loved me and would feed me hay and oats."

The "Press" Conference."

Then there was a take-off on the "press conferences" between reporters and cabinet officials. Half a dozen reporters are calling on a high official, wearing whiskers. The officially artfully conceals his mind with a wilderness of words, the official:

"The Johnsons rave, the Borahs howl, the Underwoods accuse;
But yes, we have no policy, excepting Mr. Hughes."

A reporter asks:

"I'd like to have you say, sir, if McCormick's charge is true;
Are you a coy Lotophagus, or is that word taboo?"

And the high official counters:

"I cannot deal with persons who refer to me in malice.
The lotus is a plant, I think. See Secretary Wallace."

The official becomes chagrined as the reporters ply him with questions. He concludes the conference thus:

"The world of slight attention, in which rumor stalks as news,
Is not my work, nor due to my diluted interviews."

Gridiron Singing School.

The Gridiron Singing School described a number of political problems and perplexities in topical verse. "O Wonderful Wheat" was sung to the tune of "My Wonderful One." Here is a stanza:

"O wonderful wheat, in the field you are growing.
While bread is now going to rise;
The farmer demands that he get two dollars,

No matter who hollers or cries,
Just wheat, only wheat, is the problem now vexing,
It is most perplexing to meet;
The farmers have votes, sirs, and we are the goats, sirs,
O wonderful, wonderful wheat."

Somebody suggests that the farmers ought to see Slemp, and another cuts in: "Slemp isn't much of a talker, is he?"

"No," says a third. "But, O boy, you ought to hear him listen."

They sing to the tune of "You've Got to See Mamma Every Night."

"You've got to see Bascom Slemp each day.
Or you can't see Coolidge at all;
If with young Bascom you've conversed,
It will be all right when you call.
If it is a job you seek,
First to Bascom you must speak.
You've got to see Bascom Slemp each day
Or you can't see Coolidge at all."

Numerous officials of the Government were made the target of "snappers" set off, apparently at random, between the longer skits. For instance, a club member interrupted to repeat a rumor that Attorney-General Daugherty was about to begin a smashing trust-busting campaign. He wanted to know when it would start.

"When does the Republican party nominate its candidate for the presidency?" asked President Henning.

"About June 10th next."

"Well," asked Henning, "what more information do you want."

Getting Coolidge to Speak.

Finally, the gridiron singers addressed President Coolidge, seated at the head table with the president of the club, beseeching him to the tune of "Three O'Clock in the Morning," to top the dinner off with a speech. This was the chorus:

"Now approacheth the morning:
We've dined the whole night through;
Dinner guests all are calling
For a few words from you.
Oh, please, sir, heed our entreaties;
You may be sure if you do,
We will all keep right on boosting
Forever, Cal, for you."

And the President broke the silence and responded.

VELASQUEZ PORTRAIT FOUND

Picture Was in Storeroom of Court Palace in Vienna.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

VIENNA, Nov. 25.—In a storeroom of the Court Palace a picture by Valesquez, of great artistic value, has been found. It came to the Vienna Court in 1759, and is the portrait of the Infanta Margarete Theresa. Dr. Gustav Gluck, manager of the Museum of Historic Art, says the picture is well preserved, only its edge being somewhat damaged.

According to Dr. Gluck, its genuineness is beyond doubt. The picture is being restored, and will be exhibited in a few weeks, together with a recently discovered Durer.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The Best Cough Medicine You Ever Used. A Family Supply Easily and Quickly Made. Saves About $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clairfied molasses, honey or corn. Instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for healing the membranes.

Pinex is a highly concentrated. To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of iPinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FEDERAL DIRECTOR ADVOCATES NATIONAL PARK IN EAST

Recommends That Typical Section of the Appalachian Be Conserved.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Establishment of additional national parks east of the Mississippi was recommended today in the annual report of Stephen T. Mather, director of the park service. A typical section of the Appalachian should be conserved, made accessible to the public and developed by Federal funds, he said. Some "untouched section of the Everglades" in Florida was suggested as offering an ideal site for a new park.

Director Mather expressed the hope that some public-spirited individual or foundation might purchase the Mammoth Cave in Kentucky for conservation. It is expected, he said, that this property shortly will be offered at public auction, where it should bring about $1,000,000.

Discussing the growth of the system of state parks, the report predicted that every state eventually would join the program. Pressure on the Federal Government to take over areas lacking national park scenic standards, was declared to have come "mainly from states that have not ventured the establishment of state parks."

A super-survey of the country's scenic assets was advocated, such survey to be made by a committee of nationally known experts of various professions under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior.

=EDITORIAL=

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene, the dark, unfathomed caves of oceans bear."

How aptly these words synonymize the actions of obscure benefactors who have the welfare of their fellowmen at heart; they who seek no worldly praise for their good deeds; in fact shun it. The World's Noblemen!

Modestly, quietly they seek out the deserving, the unfortunate, and with encouragement in its various forms instill hope anew into lives whence all the sunshine had fled.

Their Conscience Is Their Reward.

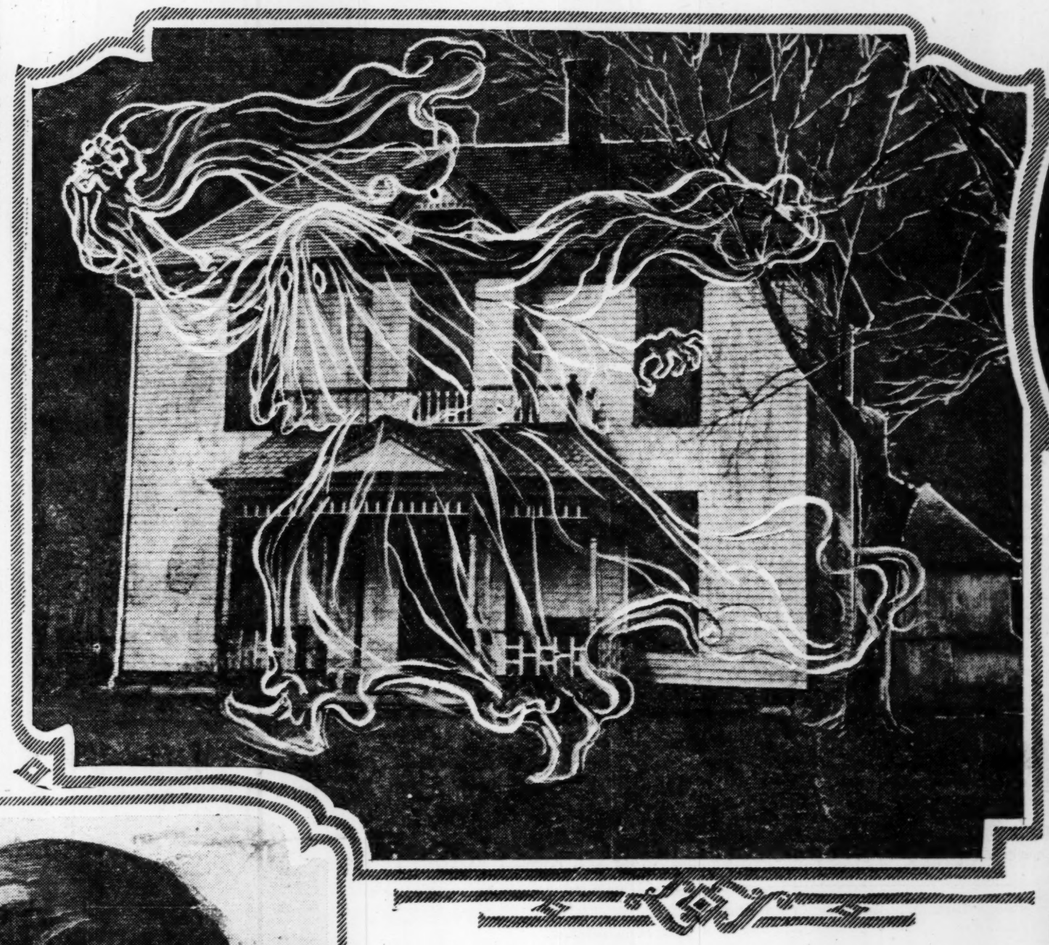
Farm House "Ghosts'" Pranks Stir a Missouri County Grand Jury to Action

Inquisitorial Body, in Solemn Report, Leaves Decision in Abeyance and Will Meet Again to Consider It

Missiles Fly Through the Air From Mysterious Sources, Windows and Doors Close and Open From Hidden Causes and Farmer and His Family Who Occupy the Place, Terrified at the Weird Manifestations, Sleep With All Entrances and Exits to Their Quarters Nailed—Many in Community Point to Young Woman Visitor as the Author of All the Trouble, but All in the Household Deny the Charge.



The "Mystery House," near Philadelphia, Mo., which for nearly four months has been the target for eggs, tomatoes and rocks, hurled by unseen hands. Though guards have been stationed about the place and neighbors have flocked there at reports of new bombardments, they haven't been able to determine definitely where the missiles are coming from. The peculiar tendency of projectiles to bounce away from the house as if thrown from inside, however, has given rise to some well established suspicions concerning the identity of the boisterous "spirits."

Emmet Swisher and his wife, Mrs. Della Swisher (above), who indignantly deny that any member of the family had anything to do with the spasmodic displacement of loose property and pebbles about the place.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PALMYRA, Mo., Dec. 8.

THEY call it "The Swisher Mystery." Meaning the weird manifestations which for three months have persisted at the farm home of Emmet N. Swisher at the cross roads half a mile this side of Philadelphia, 14 miles west of here.

Night after night, unnumbered nights, the substantial two-story frame home of the Swisher family has been bombarded with stones, pieces of coal, vegetables and eggs, hurled out of the darkness. Threatening and taunting messages have been written by unseen hands on the sides of the house. Notes have been left in queer places.

Armed volunteers have guarded the house every night. Sheriff Bender and his deputies have spent 22 nights there. Prosecuting Attorney Hamlin has spent several nights there. The Marion County grand jury has spent weeks investigating and the members made a night visit to the farm.

Arline Anderson, 16-year-old sister-in-law of Swisher, against whom the uncanny disturbances seem to have been directed, has gone away but the disturbances continue.

A one-time peaceful community is strife-torn over it. Neighbor has been turned against neighbor. Suspicion and distrust are rife. Marion County has been stirred to its borders. Opinions have been formed as to the authorship of the phenomena and supporting evidence has accumulated. But nobody has been caught and no motive has been found.

How Girl Came Into Case

Emmet Swisher, now 49 years old, was born in this section but went West and spent years in Montana and in Alberta. He married a West Virginia woman 12 years younger than he. They pioneered in Canada and accumulated land and four years ago Swisher brought his family back to this county to make a home among his own people.

He bought the Dr. William Tipton farm of 205 acres, lying east of the village of Philadelphia, and established his family in the eight-room frame house at the cross roads. He was a hard-working man and a good citizen and made no enemies.

More than a year ago Arline Anderson, orphan sister of Mrs. Swisher, came from Shreveport, W. Va., to make her home with the family, which consisted then and since of Swisher and his wife and their four children. These were three sons, now 13, 11 and 7 years of age, and a daughter, 7.

Arline took her place in the family and the small community, went to the Prairie district school last term and this fall entered the Philadelphia high school. A product of a poorer environment, she adapted herself readily enough to the meagerness of the new environment in which she found herself.

She went to the picture show at Philadelphia on Saturday night and the Baptist church on Sunday, but entered rather diffidently the restricted social life of the neighborhood. She was large for her age, and fairly attractive, but in her attitude toward young persons of the opposite sex she did not exhibit precocity. She was a subject of injured comment among the budding youths of Philadelphia and the country farming community, in fact, that she was indifferent to their bashful approaches.

Rejected Youth's Advances at Show

One bolder than the rest, edged up to her when she was leaving the show one night, and asked if he might "see her home." She gave him a look and he faded away, followed by the jeers of his cronies. Another night another youth craved the privilege of escorting her from church but she said she was quite able to find her way unassisted.

Sooner and by, though, she did give some encouragement to Claude Claggett, a well-reared youth, stepson of 'Gene Moore, whose home was across the fields from the Swisher farm. He went to see her a few times and they were in fair way of reaching the status of "going together" when the girl told him one night she was going to leave next day for West Virginia and said goodby. She did not go away, but Claude, considering himself dismissed, did not renew his attentions.

ARLINE ANDERSON,

The girl in the case whose unsociable attitude toward youths of the neighborhood seems to have had much to do with arousing the "ghosts" to such unseemly demonstrations. Although she no longer lives with the Swishers and has returned to West Virginia, the rock throwing continues and demands an explanation other than that advanced when missiles were found in Arline's apron.

Disturbances Began in August

During the early part of August there were some unexplained disturbances at the Moore place, Chattels were displaced and there was some throwing of missiles. Messages that have since been received by Arline intimate that there was resentment on the part of other youths toward Claude Claggett because for a time she favored him and disdained the attentions of others.

Late in August Emmet Swisher, with his crops gathered, was getting ready to go to Canada and look after his farm there. On a Monday morning when Swisher went out at dawn to feed the stock he found that, over night, the place had been "stacked"—a colloquialism for misplacing and disarranging furniture and implements. He thought then it was a boys' prank. He replaced the implements and utensils and thought nothing more about it until next morning, when he found the same condition. Four more nights there were repetitions of the vandalism. No real damage was done but things were turned topsy-turvy.

Swisher set traps. Dishpans were poised precariously, to be sent clattering if gates were opened. But mornings found the pans still poised and the gates closed but abundant evidence that intruders had been there.

Swisher hated to go away, but he still thought it was the work of boys. He thought they would have chivalry enough to refrain when they knew that Mrs. Swisher and her sister and the children were there unprotected. He locked up everything and told his wife if she was annoyed, to call the Sheriff. He went away and that night five gates were opened, the lambs were turned into the pasture, a disc plow was rolled into the road, the grindstone and a heavy iron kettle were moved.

The next night eggs and other missiles came out of the darkness and struck the house. Mrs. Swisher fired a shotgun and called her neighbor, J. B. Sams. He notified Sheriff Bender and summoned guards from among the neighbors and thus began the three months' siege which has not ended yet.

Disturbers Elude Vigilance of Guards

Swisher had planned to be away a month, but before the end of two weeks Mrs. Swisher wired him that the night visitations had continued and increased ten-fold and urged him to return. He hurried back and took charge of the arrangements for defending his home and family and trying to discover the authors of the disturbances.

Before and after his return the visitations continued almost nightly. Guards concealed themselves about the premises, behind hedges and in outbuildings. But despite their presence pebbles, larger stones, vegetables and sometimes eggs, at intervals struck the house or fell in the yard. Shots fired in the direction from whence they seemed to come were ont answered. Hasty search failed to discover the throwers. Not infrequently while search was being made in one direction a shower of missiles seemed to come from another direction.

The community was aroused. The visitations were so mysterious as to suggest the supernatural and there was not lacking an element that ascribed all the phenomena to restless spirits.

Before Swisher returned writings appeared on the weather boarding. When Prosecuting Attorney Hamlin and Sheriff Bender went to view the first writings they remarked that, although presumed to have been written in the dark, the words were legible, with each "i" dotted and each "t" crossed. The sentences, too, were framed with reasonable correctness. Later writings lacked these characteristics of literacy.

Ghostly Figures Seen About the Place

Arline produced a note which was said to have been found inside a screen door. It purported to have been signed by three boys. It complained that she would only "see" one boy and the writers supposed they were not good enough.

Night after night, 22 in all, Sheriff Bender spent at the farm, sometimes on dark nights, sometimes on moonlit nights. At times searchlights were trained on the house and surroundings. Usually when the Sheriff was there nothing happened. Sometimes missiles were thrown and he and his deputies and volunteer guards charged into the fields only to find emptiness and silence.

Arline told of attacks by shadowy men who sprang out of the darkness and tried to carry her away. Once, although there were guards on the other side of the house, a sponge filled with ether was pressed to her face and she could not scream. Once, at the water trough, three men seized her and Ursa, oldest son of the Swishers, declares he saw them. They leaped a wire fence and escaped.

Swisher and his wife went armed all the time. Once, after dark, Mrs. Swisher saw a dim figure crouching near a chicken coup. She cried: "Yes, I see you, Mr. Ghost." The figure wavered from side to side. She fired. The figure bounded over a wire fence and was gone.

One night there was a noise upstairs. Swisher searched. He found a front window open, which had been closed before, and the screen broken outward.

A basket of tomatoes disappeared from the kitchen table while Mrs. Swisher was at the barn. The children said two men carried them away. That night tomatoes were hurled at the house.

One Saturday night the bombardment was heavier than usual and Mrs. Swisher telephoned to Philadelphia for assistance. The summons just about broke up the picture show. Doings at the mystery house promised greater excitement. The Philadelphians gathered their shooting pieces and hurried to the farm. Missiles continued to fall in the yard after the men of the village had mobilized there. Steady firing was kept up in the direction from which the bombardment seemed to come. Mrs. Swisher took her place on the firing line. Arline replenished the supply of shells. While she was doing that an egg struck her in the back of the head.

It has since been suggested that some of the guards, waggishly disposed, might have cooperated with the unseen bombarders and helped along the excitement by hurling something now and then past the ears of other guards. But again this may be a captious conjecture.

Bloodhounds were brought twice. They trailed around the house and clamored for admittance and on being admitted ranged through the rooms.

As time passed there were circumstances which caused officials to conclude that Arline knew something about the disturbances. These circumstances are assembled in a formal statement of Sheriff Bender and a report of the grand jury, summarized below. Persons in the community to whom these circumstances became known shared the officials' views. There arose a sharp clevage of opinion. The controversy raged in the county newspapers. It came to a point at last that neighbors who actively championed the Swishers were looked upon as being in some manner implicated. The homes of some of these were bombarded.

Sheriff Bender, feeling himself unjustly criticised, issued a public statement. The first night he went to the house, he related, apples, tomatoes and eggs were thrown. They struck the ground easily, as though thrown a short distance.

"At about midnight there was a shower of apples which hit near the back porch. I was lying on the ground in the rear of the house and I looked up and Arline Anderson was at the back window upstairs."

While the controversy was raging the grand jury had been probing. The Swishers and Arline and many others wer equestioned. And one night the entire jury, accompanied by Sheriff Bender and Prosecuting Attorney Hamlin, went to the farm. Swisher was told to dismiss his guards and did so. He and his

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 8.

GOV. WARREN T. McCRAY, under indictment in Marion county charged with 192 criminal offenses including embezzlement, larceny, forgery and fraud, respondent to a petition filed in Federal court to have him adjudged an involuntary bankrupt, defendant in more than thirty civil suits brought to collect on notes he had issued, and under investigation by the Federal postal authorities, is facing whatever the future may have in store for him stoically and calmly.

Disgraced while at the head of a great commonwealth, deserted by the friends who rode into office with him on the crest of the Republican landslide three years ago and who championed his policies through two sessions of the Legislature, he insists that he has done nothing wrong, that all of his vast operations can be explained satisfactorily and that if left alone he will eventually repay every cent he borrowed.

Gov. McCray, who sought and obtained the nomination for governor in one of the most strenuous primary campaigns ever held in Indiana, and who participated in an election campaign that took him into every one of the ninety-two counties of the state, found time in all that turmoil to start the ground work of the plan that resulted in his accumulating more than 15,000 acres of land and debts that on Oct. 6, last, totalled $3,193,482.97.

But Gov. McCray's dreams of vast wealth suddenly acquired were shattered on Aug. 31, when he stood before his creditors at Indianapolis and offered to surrender all his assets in an effort to repay his obligations. At that time he estimated his liabilities at $2,652,000 and his resources at $3,223,000 and insisted that with fair liquidation every one could be paid and he would have a comfortable fortune left.

Little, if Anything, for Creditors

Since then, however, testimony developed in the bankrupter hearing has demonstrated beyond all doubt that he has little, if anything left with which to pay his creditors. This belief was practically confirmed by a letter sent out by the committee invested by his creditors with control of his assets asserting that the Governor's equity in the property surrendered totals about $21,000.

"How has a potential fortune of more than $3,000,000 shrunk to almost nothing?" is the question universally asked in Indiana. The Governor says the huge over-head on his farms, the taxes, the insurance, the upkeep and operation, ate up all of the money which he borrowed. One of his business associates, William Simons, president of the defunct Sawers Grain Co. of Chicago, says that McCray participated with him in a loss of more than $100,000 in grain speculation on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Many people, knowing that McCray was vice president of the Sawers Grain Co. until it closed its doors following his financial crash, believe that he lost his fortune on the Board of Trade in a wild attempt to recoup his dwindling resources. Every attempt, however, of the bankruptcy petitioners to show big losses in this way, has failed and it is possible the true account of the dissipation of the money never will be learned.

The Governor is a man of model personal habits, and has no extravagant ideas. He was born and reared in simple circumstances in the little town of Kentland on the Illinois border, and since ascending to the Governor's office he has maintained the same quiet, modest way of living. Although he is a business men used to dealing with big people in a big way, he never has felt at home in a dress suit and never cultivated the social side of life that might have been open to him, especially since he came to Indianapolis.

To understand Gov. McCray's method of conducting his financial operations which ultimately resulted in his becoming indebted to 153 banks of Indiana for a total of nearly $2,000,000, one should be familiar with his entire life from the time he quit common school and mounted a bookkeeper's stool in his father's bank at Kentland. He sat on that stool until the day he was twenty-one years old and then bought a grocery store.

Loose Business Methods From Start

From that time on his progress was rapid and his expansion wide. He entered the grain business in 1889 and in 1903 he placed the first Herefords on a farm he had acquired in Newton county. Then began the careful process by which he selected prize cattle until at the time of his fall he was recognized the world over as a breeder of thoroughbred Herefords. The little herd grew until, when he surrendered his assets, among them was a herd of 1200 prize-winning cattle.

He acquired land in a more or less modest way up until 1919, just after he had decided to repeat his race for the Republican nomination for Governor which had proved unsuccessful in 1916. Then he began to expand his land holdings and in the next two or three years he had accumulated 15,000 acres in Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, South Dakota, Colorado and Canada.

Although elected as a business man and farmer to the Governor's office, it is doubtful if he followed approved business methods in the acquisition of his holdings. He testified in Federal court that much of this land he had never seen. Nor did he keep books on his gigantic financial operations, relying on his memory for a list of his creditors.

Aside from the Canadian land, which is part of that he never saw, all the property he acquired is heavily encumbered and much of it will bring little more than satisfaction of the mortgages, it has been learned by the creditors' committee.

In the fall of 1921, after McCray had been in the Governor's office about nine months, he began to feel the financial pinch that was affecting the entire country, especially those who had invested heavily in land. He then incorporated a stock company known as the Warren T. McCray Farms Realty Co., which took over his best holdings in Indiana. Through the Myer-Kiser bank of Indianapolis $570,000 worth of preferred stock was sold and the McCray family retained $1,000,000 worth of the common stock. With that money he floated other enterprises.

From that time on until he faced his creditors there were recurring rumors that all was not well with him financially. Vague, and ugly rumors came floating around that he was using his office as Governor to extract loans from banks, but the State's financiers were close-mouthed and confirmation of these reports could not be obtained.

High Finance With Banks

When the blow-up came, however, and a list of his creditors became available some truth was lent to the latter report by a comparison of his loans at banks with the amount of State money placed on deposit at the institutions. Banks apparently lent themselves readily to the scheme whereby, in effect, McCray saw that State money was loaned to the banks, which money he in turn obtained through the banks as a personal loan to himself.

Gov. McCray is a member of the State Board of Finance which is composed of the State Auditor and the State Treasurer. The board's duty is to allot the deposits of State money, which draws only 2 per cent interest and which, therefore, is eagerly sought by the banks since they can lend it at a much higher rate. He saw to it that the deposits, for instance, of his home town Discount and Deposit State bank of Kentland, of which he was president, were increased from $50,000 to more than $200,000.

Banks which had applied for a State deposit were "favored" promptly with a letter from the Governor asking them to handle some of his cattle paper—paper which, he said, had been received in payment for prize cattle sold on his Newton county stock farm. Sometimes the deposit was granted and then the letter would arrive. In either case the effect was the same—the Governor usually got the loan.

A great deal of money he obtained was on notes which he gave in the names of his farm managers. The Governor has repeatedly said that the notes bore no other value than his own indorsement and he insists that the banks looked no further than his name, believing him to be financially stable.

Among the names he used on notes were the Hickory Island Stock Farm, F. J. Henderson, manager; the Morgan County Stock Farm, W. J. Hendry, manager; the Greene Farm Co., Asa Wiggins, manager; H. A. Reinhart & Co., implements, H. A. Reinhart, manager; A. E. Herriman & Co., road contractors, A. E. Herriman, manager; the Brooklyn Stock Farm, W. L. Remsburg, manager; the Howard Cattle Co., J. R. Howard, manager; A. Messman & Co., A. Messman, manager. Other names such as William Simons, his partner in the Sawers Grain Co.; J. Morrison, formerly a janitor at the State house, and W. E. Towers, were attached to other notes. Some notes also were written on the Canby Land & Cattle Co., which the Governor himself testified had no property.

Henderson, Reinhart, Herriman, Simons and Towers, who was the Governor's bookkeeper, have testified under oath that they never gave him authority to sign their names to the notes. McCray asserts, however, that he had power of attorney in all cases to use their names inasmuch as they were engaged in business with him.

Basis of Grand Jury's Forgery Charge

In civil suits brought to collect on these notes the actions as to the so-called makers of the notes have been dismissed and judgment has been entered against the Governor. That is in accordance with his wish, for he asserts that he alone is responsible for the debts thus contracted.

It was Gov. McCray's activities in signing these notes with other men's names that resulted in many of the counts in the indictments returned against him. The grand jury has declared them plain forgeries.

In June of this year things began to look badly for the Governor and he opened negotiations with a group of Indianapolis bankers for a loan of $650,000 with which to meet his pressing obligations. While that was pending he went to the State Board of Agriculture and through its obliging president, Harry Moberly, and its financial secretary, I. Newt Brown, obtained a loan of $155,000.

Bankers Turned Down His Appeal

The Governor, by virtue of his office, is an ex-officio member of the board. The checks, which were drawn at intervals, were made out to the Discount and Deposit State Bank of Kentland, and were indorsed by McCray's signing them as "The Discount and Deposit Bank of Kentland, by Warren T. McCray, president." Brown testified that the Governor represented that the first two checks of $25,000 each were for deposit in the Kentland bank, although he admitted that no pretense marked the later loans. McCray has insisted that the board knew all along he was using the money personally.

Gov. McCray put up $125,000 in notes, some of which were written in the names of his farm managers, for the loan. All this alleged "security" was not advanced until shortly before his crash and testimony has developed that more than $50,000 of the money was given to the Governor without a written word of acknowledgment. This transaction also affords the basis of some of the indictments.

Early in February McCray had obtained a $10,000 check from the State Treasurer "for deposit in the Kentland bank." He indorsed and cashed the check and had it sent, along with another $15,000 loan made at an Indianapolis bank, to the Chicago correspondent of the Kentland bank. He says the $10,000 item was placed to his credit in the Kentland bank by mistake, but the cashier, Amos Morris, says he never was ... otherwise. Anyway McCray is ... the grand jury of embezzling the ...

The bankers to whom he had ... for the $650,000 loan after an ... rejected the application and left the ... ner virtually "in the air." Then he ... to James P. Goodrich, who had ... in the Governorship primary race ... Goodrich organized a group of Indiana ... ness men among whom was Thomas ... the veteran Democratic leader, and ... fund of $350,000.

One hundred and fifty-five thousand ... lars of this was used to retire "bad" ... Suits filed against the Governor in Kentland disclosed that he borrowed $1000 ... Mrs. Mary Williams, a widow; that he borrowed $6500 from Mrs. Alma Jackson, a widow, and that he borrowed $2000 from Ruth ..., a deaf and dumb woman. The story is told in Kentland that shortly before his collapse McCray sent one of these women a check for $160 as interest. She held the money a day and then deposited $100 in the Discount and Deposit Bank just before it failed as the result of McCray's operations. Now, so the story goes, she will be an object of charity.

Politicians, especially Republicans, ... would like to see McCray resign because they fear he will be a millstone around their necks next fall, but he remains adamant and refuses to give in. Members of the Legislature ... this week to discuss the possibility of having him impeached, in the event he is found guilty of the charges in the indictment. Little stress is placed in that method of removal, however, because the sole power to impeach the Legislature is vested in the Governor.

One of the big points at issue in the bankruptcy proceedings is whether Gov. McCray is a farmer. If he is not, he is amenable to the Federal bankruptcy laws and if he is, he cannot be thrown into involuntary bankruptcy. The Governor contends that he is a farmer, that he has devoted his entire life to farming and its allied industries such as the ... grain business.

He won his nomination and election to the governorship largely on the general belief that he was a farmer and understood agricultural problems. The people of Indiana, who are a farmer in the Governor's office and who rallied to him overwhelmingly. He had the support of the farming organizations until last spring, when he vetoed a farmers' co-operative marketing measure. The Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associations then broke with him and in its membership are some of his bitterest critics.

When J. Stuart Blackton Set Out to Film "Let No Man Put Asunder," a Powerful Preachment Against Divorce, He Looked the Field Over for Players With Suitable Matrimonial Records, Then Gave Up in Despair and Selected Lou Tellegen and Pauline Frederick, Both of Whom Have Figured in Sensational Marital Shipwrecks — New York Psychologist and Noted Divorce Lawyer Tell Why the Vast Majority of Screen and Stage People Can't Stay Married.

In line with the prevailing tendency of motion picture producers to combine box office technique with "social service" by following the trend of morality campaigns with films devoted to exhortations against the evils under fire, J. Stuart Blackton, a short time ago, set himself to the task of delivering a screen sermon against the country's divorce affliction and chose as his medium for such a crusade Basil King's story, "Let No Man Put Asunder," a powerful preachment against divorce.

So far, so good. But the problems of producers do not end with the selection of the story for picturization. There must be players. Blackton, then, taking cognizance of the fact recently emphasized by Israel Zangwill that the American playgoing public is prone to center its interest in the personalities and private lives of the actors rather than the characters they portray, cast about for a suitable leading man and leading woman who might in some degree exemplify the sermon of the book by their untarnished matrimonial record.

It is hardly necessary to go into detail concerning the baffling aspects of such a quest. Results tell for themselves about the meager measure of success achieved, for—irony of ironies—whom should he finally engage to assume the roles of living examples of domestic felicity but Lou Tellegen and Pauline Frederick!

Lou Tellegen who has just emerged from a divorce case that for weeks filled a newspaper column or two daily with its sensational developments and Pauline Frederick who has divorced her third husband following the publication of his book which ostensibly aired the unsavory details of her first two marital shipwrecks.

But even if it does seem incredible at first thought that out of the vast array of movie stars Blackton couldn't make a selection less incongruous, a glance over the field will tell much about the difficulty he found himself contending with.

Calling Roll of the Divorced

How many first rate movie stars are there who have not been divorced? Here are a few who have been:

Mary Pickford	Leatrice Joy
Douglas Fairbanks	May Allison
Gloria Swanson	Irene Castle
William S. Hart	Corinne Griffith
Pauline Frederick	Carmel Meyers
Charles Chaplin	Tom Moore
Lou Tellegen	Owen Moore
Geraldine Farrar	Alma Rubens
Elsie Ferguson	Franklyn Farnum
Rodolph Valentino	Jackie Saunders
Lionel Barrymore	Mildred Harris
Wanda Hawley	Florence Vidor
Alice Brady	King Vidor
Constance Talmadge	Jean Acker
Renee Adoree	Barbara La Marr
Monte Blue	Roscoe Arbuckle
Marie Prevost

And there are many more, but this is enough to indicate the state of marital affairs in Hollywood's select circle and to show that Blackton's task was not an easy one.

But why is it that motion picture stars seldom succeed in marriage? What is the explanation for the ever increasing matrimonial wrecks in the lives of men and women of the screen? Does temperament send the Hollywood player off to a bad start or is the profession lined with snags from which none, however cautious, may escape?

The current issue of "Screenland" a periodical devoted to moving pictures and their players, in a timely article entitled "Divorce, the Menace of the Screen," asks these questions and then proceeds to answer them through the views of Dr. Ira S. Wile, New York psychologist, and Max D. Steur, noted divorce lawyer who has appeared in hundreds of cases involving persons professionally or socially prominent.

Dr. Wile in psycho analyzing the causes for divorce does not restrict himself to any one explanation. He offers a variety of motives to show why domestic tranquillity and screen eminence seldom travel together, some of them obvious; some almost unsuspected.

A Fault of the Profession

Dr. Wile does not take the view that actresses and actors are morally inferior to people in other professions. In most cases, he declares, screen players, now divorced, would live happily together if they were in some other occupation not so trying on marital bonds. Men and women of the screen as well as the stage, he points out, are veritable human sieves through which are sifted constantly the characters they are accustomed to play. Eventually the make believe character, especially if the player continues to portray one type of personality, weakens the foundation of the real one and then displaces it altogether.

That is not to say, of course, that the real characters of the players are good to begin with or that all the make believe characters are bad, but regardless of the moral values of either the impersonation of one type for a protracted period tends to make the player into the part he plays.

If the fictitious character is a "vamp" or a "great lover" nine times out of 10 the impersonator will become so obsessed with vamp or great lover practices that they will finally prevail off the screen as well as on it.

How Vamping May Become Habit

Dr. Wile supposes the case of a happily married and faithful wife getting her first part on the screen as a pert French maid who flirts and "vamps" outrageously. For a time she retains her own character and the French maid is simply an impersonation. But as she continues in the role, investing it with intimate touches and mannerisms and forcing herself into the frame of mind peculiar to a "vamp," she becomes what she pretends to be. Emotional intrigue becomes a habit and is as necessary to her daily life and thought as it is to the flippant minx she started out to represent.

Screen vamps, according to the psychologist's diagnosis of their frailities, are seldom content to work their havoc only upon the hearts provided for them by the scenarist and producer. To get the proper stimulus from being a siren they demand daily proof of their ability to apply their technique successfully in everyday life. Besides they must keep in practice, and practicing on a well-behaved husband is entirely inadequate, because keeping his attention does not prove by any means that one is irresistible. The wife knows she has already been successful with him and when he has served his experimental purpose he is no longer of interest. He is discarded for new lovers and new husbands who must then take their turn at proving she still has power over men.

It is the same way with great screen lovers, Dr. Wile avers. A man cast as a "sheik" may be the best husband in the world with no though of plying his "sheiking" powers away from the studio, but just let the Romeo virus get into his blood and see what happens. The first thing he knows he will be sighing across a restaurant table, breathing vows in the drawing room of some feminine admirer, flirting in the subway, in the apartment house elevator—anywhere and everywhere he has the opportunity—because, being an actor, he must act off the stage as well as on it. If he lived the normal life of the average husband he would not be acting. It is, then, the most natural thing in the world for a player whose role calls for embraces and love speeches to become a lover 24 hours a day, and as in the case of the screen vamp, wooing is not convincing when practiced at home.

Environment as a Divorce Factor

Max D. Steur, while refraining from entering into the complex psychological aspects of the question, has much to say about the legal and environmental phases of stage divorce. He is firm in his belief that actors and actresses to begin with are not different from other people in morals and domestic standards. If they had the environment of business or society men and women, he declares, they would celebrate just as many silver weddings, but on the stage they are victims of conditions they cannot control.

"In the first place," he continues, husband and wife meet each other under unnatural conditions usually because they are playing in the same company. Night after night for months or a year two good-looking young people make sympathetic speeches to each other. They are in a false environment. They see each other only under romantic conditions in which unattractive elements are completely missing.

"When people in other walks of life marry they meet socially. They have a chance to observe each other's mannerisms, habits and characters under all sorts of conditions. They find out about each other's families and antecedents. When they finally get married they usually have a pretty fair idea of what to expect.

"As soon as professional people marry the manager tears them apart. Separation begins almost as soon as the minister pockets the fee. Managers do not want husbands and wives together. The wife goes to a Western studio. Her husband is sent to New York. At first they exchange ardent letters. Then the wife suddenly finds that another young man is making pretty speeches to her. The husband has a similar experiece with a charming woman. Their letters stop. Divorce is inevitable.

Thus we have both scientific and legal opinions upon cases in general. Application of them to the cases of a few of the divorced stars already mentioned will show that they are correct. Since Lou Tellegen and Pauline Frederick soon are to figure in an anti-divorce picture, let their cases be considered first.

Tellegen, who once enjoyed the soubriquet of "America's handsomest actor"—though he is French, having been brought over by Sara Bernhardt as leading man—was divorced by Geraldine Farrar, herself a screen star as well as an opera prima donna, because he insisted on appearing in too many off-stage romances. The evidence introduced at the trial disclosed that he had a penchant of continuing his balcony scenes in certain apartment houses and Long Island bungalows after the curtain had fallen on his professional love making in the theaters. As for leading ladies, he sometimes had three in one evening, so Miss Farrar declared.

Pauline Frederick's matrimonial career was riotous from the beginning. She first married Frank M. Andrews, a Chicago architect. That match weathered for two whole years. Then she got a divorce and became one of the several wives that Willard Mack, actor and playwright, has had from time to time. It ended like the first. Next came her romance, as a sort of reactionary movement, with Dr. Charles A. Rutherford, her second cousin and a playmate of her childhood.

MOVIE STARS AND DIVORCE—WHY SO MANY CAN'T STAY MARRIED

"The others were long chances, but you are such a safe person," she told him before the wedding. But this marriage went the way of the others and now Miss Frederick is to expound the virtues of domestic tranquillity through the medium of "Let No Man Put Asunder."

Eighteen years of happy wedded life passed before Lionel Barrymore and Doris Rankin finally arrived in the divorce courts. Perhaps they felt that domestic tranquillity was killing their news value. Anyway, they separated, Barrymore going to Rome and marrying another actress, Irene Fenwick, his pretty leading woman to whom he had been making stage love many months before. His first wife also was remarried shortly afterward to a newspaper man and retired permanently from the stage.

Gloria Swanson was twice married and twice divorced. Her case, however, represents devotion to her career rather than hunger for publicity. Wallace Beery an actor, was her first husband and he wanted a career also. But two careers in one family usually are disastrous and so they proved to be in this. Later she married Herbert Somborn, a producer and said to be a millionaire. Again it was a case of loving her art more than she loved her home and away she went to the courts.

Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, now apparently happily wedded, found their first marriage impossible. The first Mrs. Fairbanks got a decree upon her allegation that her husband was not gallant enough at home and entirely too gallant away from home. Miss Pickford, alleging imcompatibility, divorced Owen Moore, movie actor, who has since remarried. Tom Moore, brother of Owen, has found matrimony no more successful and is estranged from his wife, Renee Adoree.

Irene Castle's Recent Third Marriage.

Charges of incompatibility and cruelty likewise brought Mildred Harris freedom from Charlie Chaplin. Chaplin for several months has been reported engaged to Pola Negri, but it seems that Pola already has an obstinate husband somewhere in Europe, who refuses to be divorced, much as she wishes her freedom.

There are numerous other cases of the same type. Irene Castle has just married her third husband a few months after the divorce from her second, Robert Treman, and is said to be planning to return to the screen. Mae Busch is free again from matrimonial bonds and from her erstwhile husband, Francis McDonald. It is reported that she is to marry Al Wilkie, a Hollywood press agent. Dustin Farnum is about to start divorce action against his wife in New York, after 15 years of married life, and Corinne Griffith, after several years of marital happiness, has gone to Mineral Wells, Tex., for the avowed purpose of getting a divorce from Webster Campbell.

The separation of Wanda and Burton Hawley is another that has come after years of wedded bliss. Theirs was said to be a great love match when they were married in New York, six years ago. She was a student in a musical conservatory then and he was studying to be an electrical engineer. Later they went into motion pictures and the inevitable happened. It was stated in Mrs. Hawley's allegation that her husband was cruel to her.

The charge of desertion is a popular one in Hollywood, it appears from the number of decrees sought upon such grounds, and this, it is declared, is simply a demonstration of the domestic havoc that is wrought when actors and their wives are separated by their work. Florence and King Vidor were happily married for many years while they traveled together and won success in the same company. But when Vidor became a director and his wife went to star in another company, the rift occurred. Recently Mrs. Vidor went to Honolulu, declaring her intention of taking a "marital vacation," and a divorce is the next development expected by their acquaintances.

In October, Irma Gladys Blue, who charged Monte Blue with desertion, was granted a divorce in Los Angeles. Eddie Polo is now suing for a divorce there on the same grounds. H. C. Gerke has just won a decree from Marie Prevost on such a charge, and upon the same complaint, Jackie Saunders has received a divorce from her husband, E. D. Horkheimer. Other similar cases are those of George Melford, who has filed suit against his wife, and of Leatrice Joy and Jack Gilbert, who have been separated and reunited several times, only to come at last to the judge for final disposal of their differences.

The Los Angeles court records are full of cases of movie stars who have followed up hasty marriages with appeals for freedom. Alma Rubens secretly married Franklyn Farnum and the two were separated and clamoring for a divorce before the news of their wedding had become public. Constance Talmadge also got rid of her husband about as speedily as she acquired him. She was married in 1920 to John Pialoglou, a New York tobacco merchant, after a whirlwind courtship which revealed him as a "divine dancer," but which apparently failed to throw much light upon his desirability as a husband. Anyway, Constance sought freedom a few months later, upon discovering that he was "indifferent" and she got it and the incident was closed.

INDIANA GOVERNOR'S DISASTROUS VENTURE INTO HIGH FINANCE

Goodrich has testified that the "pool" subscribers do not expect to realize more than 50 cents on the dollar on the money they put up, and Roy H. Wallace, president of the Aetna Trust Co., trustee of the assets, says that many of the notes they obtained cannot be collected.

So convinced are the creditors that they have lost practically all they loaned that the banks are writing off the losses.

Governor McCray is 58 years old and no matter what disposition is made of the criminal charges and the civil proceedings he will step out of the Governor's office a broken man. He will have no property, beside his old homestead at Kentland which his wife, a sister of George Ade, famous Hoosier humorist, was permitted to retain. At present, he is living entirely on his salary of $8000 a year. He has testified that his campaigns for the governorship cost him $69,000, more than twice the sum he will receive in salary for the four-year period.

"It's pretty hard," said McCray one day in discussing his predicament, "to believe that you are a millionaire and wake up and find out it has all gone. I am on the shady side of life and it is difficult for one of my age to start life family and Arline were told to stay in the house. After a little while Swisher telephoned for Sams, who came. Swisher explained that he wanted Sams to protect him. This expression of distrust chilled the grand jurors and they withdrew.

FARM HOUSE "GHOSTS" STIR MISSOURI COUNTY GRAND JURY TO ACTION

Then, last week, the grand jury made a partial report. It pointed out, as seemingly significant, that throughout the three months that the disturbances had continued there had been no serious breakage or destruction of property and nothing had been carried away.

The jurors had found, they reported, that Arline and the Swisher boys occupied the bedrooms on the north side of the house, that most of the missiles landed on the roofless porch on the north or rear side of the house and that eggs which struck the floor of the porch appeared to have dropped straight, sometimes falling between the porch floor and the weatherboarding; that on two occasions eggs were missed from the henhouse and from the Swisher cupboard, that crabapples which were thrown were the same as had disappeared from a bucket in the kitchen.

"In fact," the report says, "most of the missiles that were thrown at the Swisher premises appear to have been property of the Swishers and property that the Swishers had gathered either on their porch or in close proximity to their house."

For two weeks preceding the date of the report the family had been sleeping in one room on the first floor, with doors bolted and windows nailed; and during that period there had been no bombardments.

Grand Jury to Report Again.

And there the case stands, but the jury has not been discharged and another report is to be made late in December and the expectation is that some definite action will then be taken.

Arline has gone back to West Virginia, but when a stranger visits the House of Mystery, tripping over wires which set warning bells ringing and shying from the traps set to pull the triggers of hidden guns, he is told by Swisher that her going away has not brought peace to the household, for three nights ago another note, threatening and taunting, was found inside the kitchen door, and there have been strange noises at night.

Swisher has his suspicions as to the identity of the perpetrators, but he is not prepared to name them yet. He is distrustful of the officials and everybody else except the few friends who have stood steadfastly by him. He bitterly resents the implication in the grand jury report that Arline has had anything to do with the manifestations or knows anything about them.

NO MORE TEETH STAINS

Dark Teeth Bleached White—in Three Minutes

No matter how dull, yellow or stained your teeth may be, you can now bleach away the most dingy discolorations, leaving the teeth clear, sparkling white and lustrous!

This is through a new scientific treatment called Bleachodent Combination. It consists of a mild harmless liquid which instantly curdles and breaks up the most hardened stain coats,—and a new kind of paste which quickly and gently removes the softened stains, and prevents the formation of future stains. Just one application of this new safe treatment leaves teeth whiter and cleaner than when scoured for an hour with harsh, gritty pastes and powders. Bleachodent Combination cannot affect the enamel as it acts only on surface stains—not on the enamel itself. Simply brush teeth with a few drops of the mild liquid—then use the paste. Yellow, dingy stains have vanished. And instead you have flashing white teeth that everyone will admire. Tobacco stains usually disappear after first application. Bleachodent Combination is endorsed by dentists everywhere. Excellent for sore, tender, bleeding gums. Especially recommended for children's teeth which stain easily. Get Bleachodent Combination today. Be sure and ask for Bleachodent Combination as this contains everything necessary to whiten teeth and keep teeth white. MARBLE DISCOVERED IN JEFFERSON COUNTY

St. Louisan Heads Company to Quarry Deposit at Rush Tower.

The walls of municipal halls, to be built under the provisions of the bond issue, may be constructed of native marble as the result of the recent discovery of 340,000,000 cubic feet of decorative marble at Rush Tower, Jefferson County, Mo., on a 200-acre tract owned by George J. Breaker, an attorney, with offices in Boatmen's Bank Building.

The organization of the Missouri Marble Quarries, Inc., to quarry the deposit, was completed yesterday with Breaker as president. Those associated with him in the venture are: Victor Proetz, an architect, of St. Louis and Chicago; Henry . Preuss, of Ste. Genevieve, Mo.; John H. Walker, banker, of Ste. Genevieve, and Fred H. Wilson, of New York City. Operations will be in charge of S. M. Ramey, of Carthage, Mo., a veteran quarryman.

Breaker said yesterday that he acquired the tract a number of years ago and considered it somewhat of a "white elephant."

It would have remained more of a liability than an asset but for the demand for building materials, which resulted in the two largest marble dealers in the country, the Tompkins-Kiel firm and the Michael Cohen Co., both of New York, sending out geologists in the hope of finding new deposits," Breaker said.

Vallues Deposit at $2,217,000.

"The Tompkins-Kiel firm located a deposit at Ste. Genevieve with the result that the Michael Cohen 'scout' cast about in the vicinity and located my deposit. This was about a year ago.

The report of their geologist, Lester Bailey, of Yale University, turned my 'white elephant' into property having an appraised value of $2,217,000. For my own information, I had H. A. Wheeler, a local mining engineer, survey the deposit and his report confirmed Bailey's. I then decided to surround myself with men familiar with the marble business, and last September we began taking out marble, and another industry was added to Missouri's list."

Breaker said the output of the quarry, in full production, will be 500,000 cubic feet of marble a year. The Michael Cohen Co. has a yearly minimum of 50,000 cubic feet of it. St. Louis dealers have contracted for a similar yearly minimum output.

Twin Deposits a Mile Long.

The marble is in twin deposits, each 45 feet trick and nearly a mile in length. The deposits are on top of each other, and their position is the result of some earth convulsion of pre-historic times, Breaker said. According to expert reports this marble, which is gray in color, is the only decorative marble ever found in the State, and compares in quality with the best Italian decorative marble. It has been found free of "tar seams" and "crow's feet," two serious marble blemishes, and capable of "manufacture."

"All the marble walls you see are not solid," Breaker explained. "Often slabs are broken in transit and have to be pasted together. All marble is not capable of 'manufacture,' as this process is called. Ours will be, and this increases it's value as building material."

Breaker said a sawmill, to cut the marble into blocks, and a crusher, to reduce the 'waste' to sizes suitable for construction work, would be built immediately at Rush Tower, and that under normal production 120 men would be employed. Rush Tower is on the Mississippi River, 47 miles south of St. Louis.

HOMESTEAD GRANTS LAST YEAR 6,309,925 ACRES

Cash Receipts From Sales, Leases and Other Disposition of Public Lands $10,700,000.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Despite the rapidly decreasing area of the public domain, homesteader sobtained patents ot 6,309,929 acres in the last fiscal year, according to the annual report of the General Land Office. Cash receipts from sales, leases and other disposition of public lands aggregated $10,700,000, of which 5 per cent was turned over to the states in which the land was situated.

Withdrawals of public lands for monuments, national forests and similar reservations totaled 1,692,548 acres, while 1,900,000 acres were "restored to entry."

"The steady progress that is being made in vesting title in our Indian citizens," the report said, "is well represented in figures for the past year. Six thousand and ten trust patents were issued to Indians for an area of 446,690 acres, while 2546 patents were issued in fee to Indians or their purchasers for an area of 288,939 acres.

"Since the issuance of the last annual report four national forests have been enlarged and 16 have been reduced; the gross area which has been added from the public domain during the fiscal year is 408,622 acres, and that acquired for forest reservation purposes under the act of March 1, 1911, aggregated 154,458 acres. There are now 146 national forests embracing 182,099 acres, of which a little over 86 per cent is public land."

WAY OF FORCASTING EARTHQUAKE SOUGHT

Exhaustive Study of Earth Disturbances Being Made by U. S. Weather Bureau.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—An exhaustive study of earthquakes in and near the American continent is being made by the Weather Bureau in co-operation with the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Canadian meteorological officials, a number of universities and about 5000 volunteer observers.

Among the university records which are proving of great value are those kept by Father Tondorf, in charge of the seismological laboratory at Georgetown University, whose announcement that a violent earthquake had been registered by his instruments was the first news given the world of the Japanese disaster.

Purpose of the Study.

William J. Humphreys, professor of meterological physics, has charge of the Weather Bureau's work. The purpose of the study, he said, primarily is to determine the exact locations of breaks and cracks in the earth's crust and to gain knowledge of the substructure of the land, although it is hoped eventually to develop a method by which earthquakes may be forecast and their danger minimized.

Only a persistent study, in the opinion of Father Tondorf, can lead to a scientific basis of forecasting earthquakes.

"The geography of earthquakes," he said, "is certain and invariable. No earthquake can happen except at lines of weakness in the earth's crust. Evidently these lines of weakness can only give when the stresses brought to bear on them become sufficiently great. Geological changes, discernible at the surface and within reach of mathematical computation, might presage fairly accurately the release of such stresses. On the basis that these releases of stresses do not happen suddenly but gradually, suitably installed pendula might betray these displacements."

Value of the Data.

The value of the earthquake data being accumulated by the Weather Bureau, Prof. Humphreys pointed out, is revealed chiefly in its application to large engineering undertakings, particularly water supply systems.

Earthquakes of sufficient intensity to make a clear record upon seismological instruments, Prof. Humphreys explained, are located approximately, if not exactly, by comparing observations at various widely scattered points and studying different types of vibrations resulting from the break or slipping of a section of the earth's crust.

Father Tondorf said a theory worked out by Dr. Omori, head of the Imperial Earthquake Investigation Committee, who died recently, had a fair test in the recent Japanese catastrophe. Dr. Omori, from data extending over a period of 75 years, noted that when the lesser earthquakes were more frequent, disastrous ones were less likely to happen, and vice versa. Dr. Omori interpreted these smaller movements of the crust as so many factors in establishing an equilibrium in seismic. Having ascertained that the period of these lesser manifestations in Japan is six years, he predicted in 1921 that within six years after 1921 there would occur a destructive quake.

KANSAS FARMERS REAPING WHEAT PASTURE HARVEST

Some Make $25 to $50 a Day by Letting Out Privilege to Stock Men.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DODGE CITY, Kas.—Although it has been only a few weeks since they finished sowing wheat, farmers of Western Kansas already are reaping a cash harvest from their fields. They are taking thousands of head of cattle to pasture on their fields, and ranchers are paying well for use of the wheat "ranges."

Farmers who grow wheat on a large scale and have thousands of acres are clearing $25 to $50 a day. A fee of five to 10 cents the head a month is charged. Early fall rains gave the wheat a good start. Not in years has it afforded such an abundance of fall and winter pasture. Much of the wheat was four and five inches high before cattle were turned on it.

Most farmers consider they will get larger crops next year as a result of the pasturing, for this causes the wheat to root deeper and lessens the chances of winter killing.

SEED CLEANED WITH SAWDUST

Buckhorn Taken Out of Clover by Its Use in Washington.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OLYMPIA, Wash. — Cleaning seeds by the use of ordinary sawdust has proved successful. In handling clover seed a laborious task was the elimination of buckhorn seeds mixed with it. By an accident some clover and buckhorn mixture was moistened and spilled on a pile of sawdust. The buckhorn seed emitted a gummy substance to which the sawdust adhered. Each grain of sawdust amalgamated with a ball of buckhorn seeds was easily blown out of the clover.

EX-KING AND FORMER WIFE LEAD LONELY LIFE

Luise of Toscana, Who Eloped With Musician, Sews and Teaches Languages.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 3.—Two of the most lonely and unhappy persons in Europe are Luise of Toscana, once Archduchess of Austria and Crown Princess of Saxony, and her former husband and one time King, Frederick William of Saxony.

Luise, who deserted her husband, Crown Prince of Saxony, and their children, just one year before Frederick William became King of Saxony, lives in a Brussels suburb where she supplements her shrunken allowance of 20,000 marks by needlework and teaching French to German.

Frederick William, who never remarried, lives alone in his Silesian castle, only a few miles from the Oels estate of former Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany.

It is said that neither Luise nor the former King ever complains of the situation. There seems to be no indication that Luise has repented her elopement and marriage to Enrico Toselli, an Italian musician, from whom she long has been separated. She was a nurse in Belgium during the period of German occupation, but her sons, officers in the German army, refused to visit her, although they often were in Belgium during the war. She never has seen her daughters since they were taken from her by a court decree.

Luise is a broken, tired woman of 53, who has tried to support herself as a children's nurse and secretary, but has been compelled to fall back on needlework and language lessons. Her children are all well married and living in luxury.

The former King of Saxony is living the life of a recluse, seldom seeing visitors.

W. B. LEEDS JR. PLANS RETURN TO AMERICA

Son of Late Princess Anastasia and Husband of Princess Xenia Tires of Europe.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—William B. Leeds Jr., who inherited a fortune from his late mother, the Princess Anastasia, has decided to give up Europe as a place of abode and go to live in America. Although he has something like a million to spend, his friends say he has found the life of the Old World irksome and dull.

Despite the royal affiliations of his late mother and the fact that his wife is a Princess, the young American believes true happiness can only be found in the land of one's own birth. He prefers democracy to the effete royal institutions of Europe and accordingly he and his pretty 19-year-old wife, Princess Xenia, will sail for America on Dec. 18.

Plans of Young Leeds.

Leeds probably will purchase a mansion in Washington with part of the legacy left him by his mother, and will divide his time between the capital and New York. Later in the season he and Princess Xenia will be the guests of former Ambassador George Harvey on an excursion to Honolulu and other points.

Young Leeds is seeking profitable investments in America for the money his mother left him, which, in addition to the interest on the $30,000,000 trust fund created by his father, comprises a legacy of $1,000,000, which he will receive at the age of 35.

Leeds' stepfather, Prince Christopher of Greece, is now in London adjusting the details of his share of Anastasia's estate. He will soon leave for Italy where he expects to spend the remainder of his life. Prince Christopher has told friends he never intended to remarry, having given that pledge to his beloved "Nancy," as he called Anastasia, before she died.

Burdens on Christopher.

Upon Christopher is likely to develop a large share of the burden of supporting the [illegible] Greek royal family, who have vanished from Athens. The only member of the house having any considerable means is Queen Sofia, sister of the ex-Kaiser. She is living in Bucharest with Queen Maria. Sofia inherited 2,000,000 drachmae from the late King Constantine of Greece.

Sisters Reunited After 21 Years.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Dec. 8.—After being separated 21 years, two sisters, Miss Lizzie Morris of Chicago and Mrs. Cal Folden of Pinckneyville, Ky., were reunited here when information leading to their location was obtained by a local newspaper. They were separated here 21 years ago, when their parents died, while they were 3 years old.

ARGENTINE FOWL AND FRUIT FOR U. S. HOLIDAY SEASON

80 Tons of Turkeys Shipped to Eastern Markets in Cold Storage in September.

Special Correspondence of Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 20.—Argentine turkeys, chickens and wild fowl are expected to keep down the prices of poultry in New York and other Eastern markets during the Christmas holidays. Placing Argentine fruits and poultry on American tables at holiday time became not only possible but practicable with the establishment of the Shipping Board line between New York and the Brazilian and Argentine ports.

In September, this year, 81 tons of Argentine turkeys were carried in cold storage in two steamers to New York and in October the tonnage increased. It is expected to reach its maximum early in December, when an effort will be made to ship every available turkey to New York for the Christmas and New Year feasts.

This business of exporting Argentine poultry and fruits, while seasonal, is assuming large proportions. More than 4,000,000 pounds of highly perishable foodstuffs were shipped to New York in the first nine months of this year. Turkeys form a small item of these food products, others being butter, cheese, fruits and meat.

As seasons in the United States and Argentina are reversed there is now the opportunity in North American cities to get fresh Argentine grapes, pears, peaches, melons, plums, oranges and apples. Since Jan. 1, the Shipping Board steamers have carried 1,272,608 pounds of fruit from here to the United States under refrigeration. During the same period there was sent into the New York market nearly 500 tons of butter, 400 tons of poultry, 30 tons of cheese and more than 500 tons of meat.

NEW CROSSING SAFETY DEVICE

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 21.—The use of mirrors at railroad crossings, a new expedient for the reduction of accidents, is being tried out by the Swedish State Railways.

The first such "warning mirors" have just been installed at certain crossings for tests and approval by the general public. They are slightly convex in form and reflect the image of an approaching train which may be seen by drivers at a considerable distance down the road. They are particularly valuable at night because of the bright reflection of train lights.

A Word About Linoleums

LINOLEUM and all floorcloths should have a coat of Victoria Floor Finish to preserve them. They can then be waxed as any finished floor. The first coat of varnish or paint should be brushed out thoroughly, as the linoleum absorbs the liquid rapidly. The second coat is readily applied. Linoleum floorcloths should be painted with Floor Paint or Glaze, as the linseed oil paints dry too slow and are apt to make Floor Finish dry tacky.

RANCHER'S DEATH AT SMUGGLERS' HANDS AVENGED

Two Texas Officers Storm Headquarters of Liquor-Smuggling Gang, Killing Martinez, the Leader.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Gregg Gibson, wealthy young ranchman of Jim Wells County, shot in the back from ambush last June, was avenged when two Duval County officers stormed a smugglers' lair, shot and killed M. Martinez, the border bad man, identified as Gibson's murderer, according to word from Sheriff Jesus Oliviera, who led the raid.

Surprised in their rendezvous, the desperadoes scarcely were given time to put up a fight. Martinez was killed instantly and his three companions fled, escaping across the Rio Grande into Mexico, in a shower of bullets.

Sheriff Oliviera discovered the smuggler stronghold near Benavides while he and Deputy Juan Guerra were searching for liquor smugglers. A bullet from the sheriff's rifle closed the career of Martinez.

Opened Fire Without a Word.

"We knew where they were, so we went there and, knowing they would not surrender and that it was their lives or ours, we opened fire without saying a word," said the Sheriff.

Martinez has been known along the Texas-Mexican border for a number of years as a rum-runner and all-round bad man. He operated chiefly in the "high brush" section of the Rio Grande valley. He is said to have been the leader of a gang of liquor smugglers with whom the Sheriffs of Duval and Live Oak counties and a posse of Federal officers engaged in a revolver battle the last of June. The smugglers were forced to flee, abandoning their contraband and pack horses on which it was loaded. Martinez is said to have been recognized.

Two days later Gregg Gibson was shot in the back by one of the fugitive smugglers, who lay in wait at a small tank. Gibson is supposed to have died immediately, while the slayer escaped on his horse.

Posses were organized immediately and every effort made to stop the fugitive before he could cross the Rio Grande, but the distance to the border was so short the fugitive already had made his escape when the posse reached the river.

Since last June Martinez has lived continuously at Guerrero, six miles south of the border, opposite Zapata, Tex. Repeatedly reports were received that, despite the fact that he was wanted in Texas for murder, he was leading a band of smugglers which was running liquor from Mexico into Texas.

Texas officials have been working unceasingly to obtain custody of Martinez and it was believed that when recognition was accorded the Obregon Government and extradition laws again were functioning, he could be extradited. Shortly before Martinez was killed by Sheriff Oliviera, negotiations had been entered into between Texas and Mexican officials for his delivery on the northern side of the Rio Grande, but, either through local influences, as some alleged, or because of an honest error, a peon, a stranger to the American side of the line, was arrested in Mexico as Martinez. This man later was liberated.

When Oliviera received word that Martinez was on the American side of the border and was told where he might find him, the Sheriff did not wait to form a posse, but with one deputy sought the gang's headquarters in the high brush and fired on the four men.

Makes Fat People Slim

New York Physician Perfects Harmless Method of Reducing Weight

The loss of as much as a pound of excess flesh a day with no harmful results is the record made by many patients of Dr. N. W. Newman, a licensed practicing physician of 286 Fifth avenue, New York, who announces that he has perfected a treatment which has quickly rid fat people of excess weight. What is more remarkable is the Doctor's statement that he has successfully treated thousands of patients for fat reduction with no change of diet or unnecessary exertion. It is also said that fat people who suffer from chronic rheumatism, gout, asthma and high blood pressure obtain great relief from the reduction of their superfluous flesh. Realizing that this sounds almost too good to be true, the Doctor has offered to send without charge to anyone who will write him, a free trial treatment to prove his claims. If you want to rid yourself of superfluous fat, write him today.

BIRTHPLACE OF FRENCH REVOLUTION FOR SALE

Royalist Deputies Among Those Trying to Prevent Demolition of Chateau Vizille.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The Chateau Vizille, in the department of the Isere, which has been termed the birthplace of the French Revolution, is for sale. Th edefenders of French historical sites are up in arms, lest the magnificent old building disappear.

Strangely enough, the Royalist deputies, Magallon, Magna, Guibal and Joly are foremost in the movement to induce the Government to class the chateau as a historical treasure and thus save it from demolition.

It was at the old chateau that Claud Perier great-great-grandfather of Casimir-Perier, fifth president of France, called together the notables of the old province of Dauphine in 1788 to protest against encroachments of the Crown upon the prerogatives of the Parliament of Grenoble, and thus started the movement which resulted in the convening of the states general and developed into the revolution.

The chateau long has been in the hands of foreigners, and now is owned by an Italian, Alberto Maron who, finding the place an elephant on his hands, has decided to demolish it and sell the land in small parcels.

A strong group of deputies, including the four monarchist leaders propose to appeal to the Government to save the place where the death knell of the monarchy was sounded.

Two Tennesseeans, Who Began Life in Log Cabins, Members of Congress

One, J. Will Taylor, Being Mentioned as Vice Presidential Candidate—B. Carroll Reece Worked Way Through School

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov.—From log cabins to Congress.

Such is the step in the life of two Tennesseeans. They are Congressmen B. Carroll Reece, of the First Congressional district of Tennessee, and J. Will Taylor, of the Second Congressional district.

It was 42 years ago that Taylor was born in a little log cabin in Union County, near the Powell river.

He was 18 years old when he made up his mind that he would go to Congress. One day Judge Gibson, noted Tennessee orator, was scheduled to speak in the schoolhouse for a congressional candidate. Will Taylor was present, and the oratory of Judge Gibson wakened dreams and aspirations which shapened the course of his life.

His first step toward the realization of his ambition was to enter the Lebanon Law School, where he made a record in his class. When he was graduated he began the practice of law at La Follette, and almost immediately began to take an active part in public life. Among the positions he held were Postmaster at La Follette for five years, Mayor for one term and State Insurance Commissioner under Gov. Ben Hooper. He was next elected head of the State Republican Campaign Committee and conducted the campaign of 1916. In 1918 he was elected to Congress. He was re-elected in 1920 and again in 1922, each time by a larger majority.

Recently he was chosen National Committeeman of the Republican party. He is also being prominently mentioned for the vice presidency, as a running mate with Coolidge and will likely be the choice of Southern delegations.

The other Tennessee Congressman who was born in a log cabin also has a life story which reads like an Alger book. He was born in a one-room cabin on the banks of the historic Watauga River, under the shadow of "Stump Knob," Dec. 27, 1885. He was the eighth child of a family of 14, and almost as soon as he was able to walk he had to be the guardian of younger brothers and sisters.

The family was poor, but the parents managed by hard scraping to send him to a country free school five miles away.

There the future Congressman attended three or four months a year until 1906, when he was old enough to earn money to pay his way through school.

He entered the Watauga Academy, and during the summer months he worked in the woods, peeling tan bark. For this work he received 85 cents a day, and 20 cents of this was to help pay for the food and education of the six other children who were growing up.

In 1908, Reece was graduated. In 1909, he entered Carson and Newman College.

He entered the University of Tennessee in 1911, and during the summer months he worked in the woods, peeling tan bark. For this work he received 85 cents a day, and 20 cents of this was to help pay for the food and education of the six other children who were growing up.

In 1908, Reece was graduated. In 1909, he entered Carson and Newman College.

In 1914 he went to the University of New York, and while there took his first public office when he was elected secretary of the School of Commerce.

Came Home to Die

"Three years ago I came home thinking 2 or 3 weeks would be my limit to live. I had suffered for 15 years from colic attacks and severe liver and stomach trouble. I happened to see an advertisement of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and purchased a bottle at the drug store and after taking the first dose I felt better. Today, I am 15 years. I am now in the best of health—thanks to Mayr's Wonderful Remedy." It relieves the catarrhal mucous from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Rupture Not Dangerous

The Real Danger Is Not From the Rupture Itself, But From the Hard Pads and the Pressure of the Spring of the Usual Style of Truss.

The Brooks Appliance Is the Only Strictly Modern and Entirely Comfortable Way of Holding a Rupture.

SENT ON FREE TRIAL

This Man Is Rupured Yet Plays Football Safely—Because He Uses A BROOKS APPLIANCE

Just because you are intolerable in height and weight is no good reason why you should not freely engage in every form of athletic sport, dancing, skating and all amusements.

The Brooks Appliance will hold firmly yet with perfect comfort at all times and under all conditions. There are no hard pads nor cruelties of any kind about a Brooks Appliance. A soft, pliable rubber air cushion is so shaped as to fit closely to the body and hold the rupture exactly as you would do with the pressure of your hand.

The percentage of permanent cures that the Brooks Appliance makes is astonishingly great—over 30,000 people all ages, all conditions and children have taken advantage—have given written testimony of cures.

A TRIAL TRIAL is always allowed. Do not be deceived by counterfeits and so-called "Brooks Made." Look always for the trade mark and signature of C. E. Brooks in gold upon every genuine Appliance.

The measure of the Brooks is due to a system that brings nature's help—gives wonderful ease and comfort—and is absolutely satisfactory.

U.S. HOSPITAL FOR EX-SERVICE WOMEN

Soldiers' Home at Danville, Ill. Open to Such Patients in Immediate Future.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—American ex-service women who need medical attention, whether for disability incurred in the war or for illness or injury suffered since, may receive such treatment from the Government, it has been announced here by Endora M. Clover, administrator of disabled service women for the American Women's Overseas League.

The league, Miss Clover explained, has received this assurance from the War Department. It means that all women who have been or may be enlisted under such status as army nurse, navy nurse, yeomanette or marinette will be eligible, on producing an honorable discharge and a proper certificate of disability, to care and maintenance in a Government hospital or home.

No Strings on Offer.

The duration of the disability, or the time and manner in which it has been inflicted, will make no difference, according to the announcement. Such permanent disabilities as old age will entitle a woman to care for the rest of her life, but entry into a Government institution will entail no obligation to remain, a patient being as welcome to enter for an operation or a brief illness. The Government will pay the cost of transportation of eligible applicants.

In view of the comparatively few women claiming such attention at this time, the national soldiers' home at Danville, Ill., has been designated for all patients of the immediate future. There two brick buildings have been set aside for the exclusive use of the women. There also is a hospital with more than 200 beds.

It is estimated that there are approximately 17,000 women eligible for this benefit should they need it.

Their Previous Status.

Previously these women had been held entitled only to the relief afforded them by the Veterans' Bureau, which required a 10 per cent disability attributed directly to service for the army or navy.

The new ruling places ex-service women on an equal footing with ex-service men.

Applicants are advised to apply to Gen. George H. Wood, of the national home for disabled volunteer soldiers at Dayton, Ohio. Application blanks are available at the national homes in Milwaukee, Wis., Augusta, Me., Leavenworth, Kan., Los Angeles, Marion, Ind., Danville, Ill., Johnston City, Tenn., and Hot Springs So. Dak.

PAINTING OF LINCOLN FOR SALE

One of Washington Also Offered in Germany.

(Copyright, 1923.)

By Radio to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—Historic paintings of Washington and Lincoln are offered for sale by Regierungsrat Hoffmann of Halle, Germany. They have a curious history. They were painted by Franz Stucken, a German artist, living in the United States before and during the Civil War. He was a personal friend of President Lincoln, who, a short time before he was assassinated, ordered a portrait of himself. This painting was finished later from a daguerreotype. Another picture is of Washington crossing Rochambeau before the final attack on Yorktown. It was painted at Lincoln's request.

The paintings, though ordered, were not accepted by Lincoln's heirs, so were brought to Germany by the artist and subsequently passed into the possession of his nephew, Hoffmann. Another portrait is supposed to represent Lincoln's wife or sister.

JURY TRIALS DENIED IN U. S. COURT IN CHINA

Due to Ruling That Constitutional Rights Cease When 3-Mile Limit Is Crossed.

Special Correspondence to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 15.—Persons who recall that the Constitution of the United States grants every man a right to trial by jury may be surprised to know that there is an American court in China which does not permit jury trials. The court has jurisdiction of all classes of offenses from murder down to civil cases and its power is equally extensive. No provision was made for juries in the act which established the United States court for China. It is a Federal court. Judges and other officials appointed by the President, following the same procedure and administering the same laws as other courts in the United States.

The United States Supreme Court in a case which came from an American Consular Court in Japan years ago decided that the Constitution of the United States does not extend beyond the territorial limits of the country. Jury trials and other rights guaranteed to citizens cease when the three-mile limit is passed. It may be difficult for the layman to understand how a court which is created by the American Government which holds the Constitution as its basic character, and a court which administers American laws which must be in accord with the Constitution, can set the Constitution aside in its own proceedings. However, the Supreme Court says it can and it does.

Judge Against Jury Trials.

Judge Charles S. Lobinger, who for the past 10 years has presided over the court, personally disapproves of jury trials on account of peculiar conditions in China. His reasons are substantial but, of course, they are not what abolishes juries. The American population in any city of China is small and it is impossible to get a jury which does not know litigants or lawyers or is not prejudiced for either side.

The Judge himself objects to trying murder cases without a jury, being averse to inflicting the death penalty on his sole responsibility, and has found authority which he believes justifies impanelling juries in insanity cases and inquests.

Congress created the United States Court of China by an act of June 30, 1906. Since that time there have been few changes although there are many ways in which it might be improved. It is a sort of hybrid institution, partially under the Department of Justice as are other Federal courts and partly under the Department of State.

Congressman Dyer introduced a bill providing for several amendments to the original act at the last session of Congress, but it did not have time to get beyond the Judiciary Committee. It has been revised and will be again introduced at the next session. The proposed changes have been approved by the Associated American Chambers of Commerce of China and by Judge Lobinger and various members of the bar.

One section proposes to get around the limitations against juries by providing for referees. They will have more power than jurors as the name indicates. Referees may be appointed by the Judge, one or more for any case to sit either with the court or alone, and to make a finding on the facts on which the court shall base its judgment.

At the present the court has a commissioner, appointed on recommendation of the State Department, which has jurisdiction in civil cases up to $300, and in criminal cases when the sentence does not exceed 50 days or $100 fine or both. This jurisdiction would be extended and on consent of the litigants would enable the commissioner to hear any case.

The proposed amendment also places the court directly under the supervision of the Attorney-General and provides that the presiding Judge shall appoint the clerk and deputy clerk of the court.

The Shame of the Blemished Skin

For unsightly skin, eruptions, rash or blotches on face, neck, arms or body, you do not have to wait for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Mentho-Sulphur and improvement shows daily.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Mentho-Sulphur brings. Even fiery, itching eczema is dried right up.

Get a small jar from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

New German Oil Formula Rubs Out Rheumatic Pains

Local Druggists Give Written Guarantee to Refund Money If First Application Fails to Bring Relief.

A veritable new discovery, now produced quick, according relief to thousands sufferers, German chemists found has given to the world the form of Aspirin for the relief of headache pains, and Novocaine for painless operations, is now added to a new compound with another scientific discovery that is absolutely guaranteed to end rheumatic pains.

This marvelous discovery, known as Rheumo Oil is a new combination of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and Iodine, which itself has proved to be a most remarkable pain relief. It is so penetrating that it seems to go right to the seat of pain, where it must be entirely absorbed by the body tissues. Results are truly astonishing and numerous reports from druggists state that Rheumo relieves pain among the very worst cases, even relieving chronic cases. Drop the most advanced, stubborn cases show astounding improvement almost at once.

Remember, it has been found in all scientific tests of the world, that the rheumatic poisons formed in the bloodstream which are carried by the blood to the muscles and joints and the new German discovery is designed to neutralize these pain-causing poisons.

So amazing have been the results from the German discovery that American druggists have written a positive guarantee, signed by the druggist himself, to refund the purchase price if even the first application fails to bring prompt and gratifying relief.

If you suffer from stabbing rheumatic pains in the arms, legs and other parts of the body, remember there's no use in it would break in two—if your joints are stiff and swollen, don't delay another day, but get a bottle of Rheumo Oil today. You'll never want to be without it.

Remember—it is sold under an absolute written guarantee from your druggist. If it fails to give you relief after the first application your druggist is authorized to refund your money on this offer. Rheumo will only be obtained from druggists. In this city Rheumo oil can be obtained, under this written guarantee, at Liggett Drug Co., Jefferson Drug Co., Boyle & Owen Drug Co., Kingshighway Pharmacy, Rieves Drug Co., Lemay Drug Co., Lemay Pharmacy, Electric Drug Co., Gerard Drug Co., Lemay Drug Co., Gerard Drug Co., Lemay Drug Co., Gerard Drug Co., Lemay

Voice of Union Labor And the Radical Press

The Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorial or other articles in organs of labor unions and the Socialist and Communist parties showing the tendency of thought on public questions among those bodies of citizens and indicating causes of social unrest.

WAGE CUTS ON AS PROFITS PILE UP.

(From the Seattle Union-Record, Labor.)

The big copper interests have announced an immediate reduction of wages. In the Utah mines the workers will be slashed 10 per cent. In Butte and Arizona wages will be cut approximately 50 cents a day. In the moving picture industry there is a similar campaign afoot. Such big producers as Adolph Zukor, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and the Metro Pictures Corporation, are planning to shut down in order to force a reduction in wages. Though there is no wide unemployment yet, the Annalist Index of Employment for the first time shows that "volume of employment is below normal and is not increasing."

Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Co., Providence, R. I., normally employing more than 6000 workers, has reduced operations to 40 hours a week. At Fitchburg, Mass., the Bay worsted mill is working four days a week; at Clinton some plants have closed for an indifinite period; at Saco, Me., the York Manufacturing Co. has closed 750 out of its 5000 looms. The High Point Mills at Charlotte, N. C., has closed four of its plants using white cotton. The Southern Power Co. of the same town is also curtailing its service.

At the same time the anthracite interests are piling up such big profits that the Federal Trade Commission has been compelled to announce they are selling "at prices that are neither reasonable nor necessary." And such big concerns as the North American Co., Allis Chalmers and Beech Nut Packing continue to pile up big profits. The last named has just declared a 50 per cent stock dividend, assuring the distribution of almost $15,000,000 in stocks in the last two years. The North American Co. has within the last year increased its surplus after the payment of all taxes, charges and preferred dividends over 60 per cent.

DEFIANT PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

(From Panther Creek News, Labor.)

The issue between the Railroad Labor Board and the Pennsylvania Railroad will test whether decisions reached by due process of law but enforceable only by public opinion can prevail in the railroad world. If they do not prevail, sooner or later the demand for the use of Governmental power to enforce these decisions will become irresistible. Even now the President of the United States is reported to be in favor of the extremely dangerous experiment of putting the Government fix railroad wages and working conditions.

This is something that few Americans desire. But if it is to be avoided, the Pennsylvania Railroad now, a union at some other time, must learn to agree to voluntary settlements. The executives of the Pennsylvania Railroad may think they are fighting for "freedom" to run the railroad in their own way. They are in fact gambling with their own real freedom, and that of all other railroads, in order to insist upon a quite fictitious and arbitrary freedom.

Nobody has a greater interest in sustaining the Labor Board in this dispute than the other railroads. They will in the end suffer for the obstinacy of this one road. So will the stockholders of the Pennsylvania, so will its banking affiliations. They cannot too soon either change the minds of the management or change the management.

A WHITE HOUSE LUNCHEON.

(From Labor, Organ of Rail Unions.)

In the newspapers we read that there was a luncheon party at the White House last week. That is not news. There is a luncheon party at the White House almost every day. This particular luncheon party was news because of the men who gathered around the board. The President of the United States, E. T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia—next to Mr. Morgan the principal partner in the "House of Morgan"—W. R. Wrigley, chewing gum millionaire of Chicago; John T. Adams, the chairman of the Republican National Committee; Fred Upham, treasurer of the Republican National Committee; F. W. Stearns, "merchant prince" of Boston, the man who, heretofore, has financed Mr. Coolidge's political activities, and two or three others.

The newspapers say they considered the question of financing the next presidential campaign.

Who will put up the money and how much?

When Mr. Adams became chairman of the Republican National Committee a little more than two years ago he faced a deficit of $1,250,000. That has been "taken care of" and in addition Mr. Adams has been enabled to make most lavish expenditures.

Where did he get all this money? Mr. Adams knows, but refuses to tell, and the law governing political expenditures was so drawn by the politicians in Congress that he does not have to tell.

The "House of Morgan" financed the Harding campaign in 1920. Did Mr. Stotesbury promise to render a like service to President Coolidge in 1924? That is a blunt question, and it should receive a blunt reply.

The gentlemen who control the "House of Morgan" are not in politics for their health. They know that the way to make really big money—tens and even hundreds of millions—is to control the Government. When the "House of Morgan" invests money in a candidate it owns that man as absolutely as it owns the Steel Trust. No one but a child in politics will question that statement.

A public official may serve the people or he may serve Special Privilege, but he can't serve both.

RUMANIAN QUEEN TRYING TO PRESERVE GREEK THRONE

Would Keep Daughter and Son-in-Law in their Royal Seats.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Queen Marie of Rumania, maker of Kings and Queens, and known as the royal grandmother of the Balkans, is struggling to keep the Greek throne from collapse. She has appealed to her powerful cousin, George V of England, and other potent sources in Europe to use their influence to keep her daughter, Elisabeth, and her son-in-law, George, in their royal seats at Athens until the Greeks are better fitted for self-government.

She believes the substitution of a republic for the present monarchy, besides depriving King George and Queen Elizabeth of their crowns, would introduce a spirit of unrest in the Balkans which might extend to other thrones and lead to a widespread revolt among the people. Queen Marie is not unmindful of the fact that her friends say her safeguarded in her queenship of Jugo-Slavia, and that her own royal position in Rumania must be made invulnerable to any subversive influence.

Until the present Republican leaders in Greece began to clamor for a revival of the ancient Greek democracy, the friends of Marie felt she had chosen wisely for her numerous children in the matter of European thrones or future thrones. Marie is said to have considered her remaining daughter, Ilyeana, for the throne of Bulgaria, but she wants to be more certain. her friends say, that Boris' kingship will be more stable than it is at present.

Marie still has a 20-year-old son, Nicholas, to marry off, but as crowns in Europe are getting scarcer and scarcer, she may have to consent to Nicholas wedding one of the numerous nonreigning Princesses who are scattered all over the Old World, waiting for such a golden opportunity.

Kansas City Poultry Show.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 8.—More than 2000 feathered pure-Greater Kansas City Poultry Show in convention hall here Dec. 11-15. The Missouri State show this year for the first time is consolidated with the Heart of America show, which draws entries from several Middle Western states. The National Single-Comb White Leghorn Club and the National Pigeon Association will have exhibits in conjunction with the main show. Cash prizes total $2000. Ribbons, however, are more coveted than prizes. Approximately 200 exhibitors have made entries and most of the 160 poultry classes are expected to be represented. Ducks, geese, turkeys, guineas and pigeons will be on display, as well as chickens.

HELP KIDNEYS BY DRINKING MORE WATER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Help Neutralize Irritating Acids.

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame. The sufferer is in constant dread.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder, which then acts normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation. By all means have your physician examine you kidneys at least twice a year.

DAILY VAUDEVILLE SHOWS AT THE ZOO

Animals Know No "Off Season," Performing the Same the Year Around.

Winter vaudeville as well as summer opera may be seen in Forest Park.

The actors are animals and the stages are both indoors and outdoors in their cagy homes. There are performances daily, at most any hour spectators care to congregate, and sometimes without spectators, in rain, snow, sunlight or wind. Neither "vacation" nor "winter quarters" has much meaning for the hundreds of performers, for they live their lives and do their bits at the city's Zoo with little change from season to season, though the attitude, the clothing and the volume of the audiences may vary.

An Afternoon's Performance.

An Inquiring One chanced into the Zoo on a recent afternoon of melancholy drizzle and there follows an account of the impromptu vaudeville turns he saw:

Entering the grounds from the northeast, a compelling "quack-quack" filled the air. "Forsooth, a fine day indeed for ducks," quoth the visitor. He was right; scores of wild ducks were swimming in the reedy pond or fluttering close over head, to the great dejection of occasional sportsmen dropping in, who knew that was no place to unlimber a shotgun.

So much for the "opener;" next the bears, in their natural-looking rock habitats, behind hidden barriers. Some of the furry creatures ought to be fast asleep in their winter hibernation, and some of them would like to be, but the "stage managers" are not ready to have them retire to their fabricated crannies underground. It appeared that a good way to make a bear sit up and take notice was to toss it a chunk of whole-wheat bread.

Varying degrees of skill at catching bread were exhibited, sufficient to earn the amateur ball-players a good "hand" as vaudevilleans. The huge brown pair of Alaskans—"Chinkie" and "Kiddie"—seemed the most like pennant material, with fine ability to catch. They even plunged into a moat of cold water for bread that fell short in the mere human tossing.

No Plunging by Polar Bears.

Plunging was the sort of thing the polar bears should have been doing. What with their white coats, the semblance of ice in their habitat and the chill day, this would have been most appropriate—but the polars have come to dislike that sort of arctic sport in this zone, to say nothing of their standing heat as well as any grizzly.

Bobbie, Betty and Ruffles were the next to do their stuff; they're brown bears and quite cute. Let a spectator look as though he had a sandwich or other tidbit in his pocket and these scamps are on their hind legs waving for it. Bobbie and Betty give big, enthusiastic waves, but Ruffles has a manner all her own, consisting of a slow wiggle of the right paw.

'Twas no use to watch the black bears, they are so sluggish in their desire to hibernate. A turn to the three grizzlies revealed their sad (?) fate in winter, for they were being fed this menu, in the order given: Whole-wheat bread, lettuce, fish, apple, carrots and dog biscuit. Each bear nursed its own pile of food, nor did one break away for the occasional piece that missed all the piles.

"Henry Kiel" Headliner.

From time to time harsh roars were heard from the southern hillside, as of a prehistoric monster come to free his captive descendants. What could it be? Alas for a thrilling sight unrealized; it was only a steam shovel starting excavation for a new monkey house. A walk that way led to a place which is dressing room, gymnasium and castle for "Henry Kiel," the clever chimpanzee named for the Mayor. Little Henry has been there about three years and Keeper Max thinks there's no doubt about his having a fourth term.

Henry is the headliner of the Zoo variety show and a precocious temperamental little star he is. Running to the door at the sound of footsteps, he seized the visitor's hands and swung his three-foot brown body of about 40 pounds trapeze-fashion. Then he wanted to chew fingers to show his affectionate nature, but at a word he jumped to his velocipede and circled about. Three o'clock came, his military uniform was brought out and he helped get himself into it, then he gave his daily public act in a cage in the Lion House, howling after each "bit."

"Sam," the Orang-Outang.

The next cage housed another simian who might be the show's "wild man of Borneo"—a surly, scowling orang-outang, by name Sam, called by some "Spittin' Sam," because of a bad habit mischievous boys taught him. In a private room downstairs were three recent arrivals, a male and two female Galeda baboons from Africa, first specimens of a rare variety to reach America in years. Peculiar pinkish breasts, pugnacity and, in the male, a bushy mane, characterized them.

A pair of buff monks of a different kind, whose backs will turn into rainbow hues when they are a few years older, and who arrived a week ago, were becoming acclimated elsewhere. Rhesus monkeys, the comical, chattering, scrapping little fellows, were in an open-air cage, not at all concerned by Old Boreas. All these simians and more will go into the new $185,000 monkey house in about nine months, with glass instead of bars to restrain and reveal their antics.

But why continue? Birds and beasts on every hand provided amusement beyond telling; you can see for yourself. For example: The "skunkless skunk," whose skunkish nature has been deleted by the surgeon; the great ... can enjoy ready to ...

DANDRUFF SOON DESTROYS THE HAIR

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

INDIGNANT INDIANA SAYS SIR ARTHUR IS PREVARICATOR

Poet Riley Never Called Children "Brats," They Say, as Conan Doyle Quotes an Informant.

Special to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

INDIANAPOLIS. — Sir Arthur Conan Doyle can go about all he pleases declaring the shades of hemen smoke spiritual cigars and drink spiritual cocktails in the hereafter, but when he starts out to make the impression that James Whitcomb Riley, late Indiana poet, ever called children "brats," Indianapolis is here to tell the whole world that Sir Arthur is a base prevaricator—or something shorter.

Indiana has been greatly agitated by reading in a recent magazine article that Sir Arthur quotes the late Hoosier poet as referring to children as "brats." The famous Britisher made this reference in telling of a visit to Indianapolis during the poet's lifetime. Doyle remarked that Riley was a writer of "child's verse" and that it was strange that the poet himself had an aversion for children.

He said that an informant—"one who professed to know him (Riley) well"—told him that when Riley sighted a procession of children coming to visit him at his Lockerbie street home he would cry: "My God! There are a bunch of those brats after me again."

Indiana has always held Riley to be the most famous "child's poet" that ever lived and never did take much stock in such men as Eugene Field as singers of songs that the juvenile mind can grasp; as a matter of fact, Indiana has never admitted there ever was another "child's poet" or that there can be one. The State has reveled in the stories of Riley's personal love for children.

Swarms of Children.

They have photographs—yes, and movies—of him, surrounded by swarms of children on his front lawn. He was supposed to go about stopping little children on the streets and giving them candy and asking them their names so that he could write poetry about them.

And the State isn't going to let any foreigner come along and cast doubt on those traditions, even if he is Sherlock Holmes himself.

Meredith Nicholson, novelist, speaking for himself and the community at large, branded Doyle's charges as "preposterous" when he heard about them.

"I knew Riley as well if not better than any of Doyle's acquaintances could possibly have known him, and I would stake anything on the untruth of such a statement," he added. "In the first place, if it were a mere question of words, I would say that Riley never uttered them, for in all the years that I knew him I never heard him speak of a child as a 'brat.' More than that, he didn't think of them in such a way."

A Little Bored at Times.

Nicholson went on to cite instances of his own knowledge to prove that Riley liked children. He admitted that the poet may have been bored at times by having so many fond parents bring their children to see him and hear them recite his verses, but that was only natural, for he was pestered lots in his later years by such visits.

Marcus Dickey, Riley's boyhood friend and his official biographer, joined in denouncing Sir Arthur's charges. Such an idea could be nothing short of ridiculous, he declared. He admitted that Riley wasn't a man who liked to have children climb all over him and stuff taffy in his ears, but he was sure that the poet had the greatest affection for children of whom he sang his songs.

DSILY VAUDEVILLE SHOWS AT THE ZOO

patriotism; the nine big alligators and countless little ones lying dormant about an inside pool while winter passes, saving on food better than a camel conserves water; the gentle white llamas, American camels, prohibitionists by nature and not by law; goats of all varieties with a full quota of butters; two cape buffaloes, which in their youth don't know what havoc their horns can work; comparatively new arrivals; Prince, the Bengal tiger, who stares with languid regal eye but springs to thwarted action when a horse goes by outside; the moody black leopard, visible in his corner largely by his yellow eyes; always the elephants; the sea lions in their outdoor pool that is kept from freezing by a constant flow and the one in the hospital because visitors fed him too much, and the array of birds of all feathers that shame the artist's brush.

Supt. George Vierheller explains that the endeavor is to have the Zoo denizens accustomed to change of season without change of care, and they seem to remember that spring isn't far behind when winter comes. Plans are being made for the $400,000 aquarium, so that fish may join the birds and animals.

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL CHARITIES COST $74,203

$54,344 Spent on 2059 Needy Families — Congratulations From Archbishop.

The St. Vincent de Paul Society distributed $74,203 this year for charity, it is announced in the annual report made by the organization. Of this amount more than $49,000 was raised through church and meeting collections.

More than 10,000 visits were made to 2049 needy families, on whom $54,344 was expended, and $19,244 was given through the central office of the society. Patients were visited at City Hospital, and poor and sick of all classes and creeds were helped by visiting members and by the central office.

A letter received by the society from Archbishop Glennon congratulated the organization on the year's work and said, "I believe it is today one of the best expressions of the Church's charity and the best sedative to the gospel of hatred which is being preached in our midst; for through it we can show in a practical manner that we can love our enemies, return good for evil and help those who need our help, whatever the individual's opinion may be."

FORMER SOCIETY MAN APPEALS FOR PARDON

E. F. McDonald Serving Life Sentence for Killing Kentucky Insurance Agent.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Eugene F. McDonald, former society man of Lexington and a leading insurance agent of the State, is seeking a pardon from the life sentence he is serving in the State penitentiary at Eddyville, following his conviction of the murder of William R. Dabbs, one of his insurance subagents, June 16, 1916. At the request of McDonald, friends are circulating a petition asking Gov. E. P. Morrow to set him free before Morrow leaves office, Dec. 11, when William J. Fields becomes Governor.

Dabbs, 60 years old, was found dead on a railroad track above the tunnel at Frankfort. He had been shot through the back of the head and apparently the body had been placed where it was found in expectation that a train would strike it. McDonald was arrested four days later in his office at Lexington, where he was district manager for one of the largest insurance concerns in the country. He has always maintained his innocence.

McDonald's petition for clemency sets out that he was convicted on circumstantial evidence and incorrect testimony, due to inaccurate memory of several of his acquaintances. It was testified at the trial, the petition says, that McDonald was seen in Frankfort the afternoon of the murder and that he came here to meet a man whose name had been forgotten by the witnesses. Lexington business men, however, testified that McDonald had been in that city all the day of the murder. McDonald also has obtained letters addressed to this handwriting bearing Lexington postmarks of that date.

MORE POWER FOR PRESIDENT MAY BE ISSUE IN FRANCE

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—Separation of the legislative and executive powers to a greater degree in France, so as to make the Government more like that of the United States, is likely to become an issue in the spring elections. The issue has grown out of conflicts between Premier Poincare and the committee of Parliament, and President Millerand's assertion that the chief executive should be accorded greater independence.

Both Senate and Chamber are somewhat jealous of their rights and inclined to assert them, and latterly they have shown a disposition to insist upon more attention and more information from the administrative branches of the Government.

Millerand and Poincare both are of the opinion that the executive branch has some rights that Parliament should respect, among them liberty to attend to its purely executive work without continual interference from parliamentary committees. The Premier several times has flatly refused to appear before the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Senate and Chamber. The Senate Committee has announced that it will summon him again, and that if he does not appear, it will make his refusal an issue in the Senate.

The crisis is likely to come to a head when the Chamber takes its final vote on the repeal of the electoral reform law. President Millerand insists that the system of proportional representation of parties must be maintained and that if it is not, he will resign. Political prophets are backing the President in this fight, but believe that however it turns out, the relations between the two branches of Government will become an electoral issue, with the American Constitution serving as an example for the party favoring a stronger Government.

DISCOVERER OF INSULIN GIVES AWAY CASH PRIZE

Dr. F. G. Banting of Toronto Hands Half of $20,000 Nobel Award to Assistant and Half to University.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TORONTO.—Disregard, amounting almost to contempt, for the money value of the Noble prize, characterizes the attitude of Dr. F. G. Banting, discoverer of insulin, the new serum used in treatmeat for diabetes. Dr. Banting is the first Canadian to win the coveted award. With one hand he passed half the prize over to his associate, C. H. Best, and with the other hand presented half to the University of Toronto to be used in research. Such cavalier treatment of $20,000 is all the more dramatic in view of the fact that two years ago Banting was without financial resources, was in debt, and was without immediate prospect of an income sufficient to keep body and soul together.

Without detracting in the slightest from the instantaneous generosity of Banting's disposal of the Nobel prize money, it may be pointed out that the lack of income is no longer a source of worry to him. Rarely, if ever, has monetary recognition been so promptly accorded a discoverer or inventor. He has an annuity of $7500 a year from the Canadian Government and an appointment as professor of research, with a salary of $6000 from the Ontario Government.

Example Followed by Another.

Following Dr. Banting's example, Prof. J. J. R. Macleod, whose name was associated with Banting's in the Nobel award, has donated half of his prize to Prof. J. B. Collip of Alberta University, who acted as assistant professor to Macleod during a part of the time when the insulin experiments were being carried on.

It is understood that Best will also donate his $10,000 to the University of Toronto's research fund.

Division and re-division of the award of the Nobel Committee for the production of Insulin has lead to some confusion in the public mind as to who is primarily and chiefly responsible for the discovery. There is, however, no question as to Banting's priority either in conception of the idea or in the experiments which spelled success. By the standards which have governed many similar situations in the past, Banting and Banting alone would be hailed as the discoverer.

But Banting has always insisted that Best should be associated with him in credit and honor. He even went so far as to say he was "hurt" when Best's name was not included in the Nobel Committee's record. What Best's actual contribution to the insulin research was it is difficult for an outsider to determine, but what is obvious is that Best was a devoted colleague, whose loyalty never wavered, and who gave assistance and encouragement when both were sorely needed.

When, in the spring of 1921, Banting took his idea to the University of Toronto, it is not on record that he inspired any great sanguinity. He was told that "ten years' experimentation along your line has failed to produce results in England." However, it is on record that he was extended certain limited laboratory facilities during the summer vacation. Six weeks was the period mentioned, according to a recent statement of Dr. Banting. To Banting was also assigned two assistants, each to contribute three weeks' time. One of these assistants did not show up. The other was Best, who remained the full six weeks.

The story of the anxieties and discouragements of the period has not been told. It is said that on more than one occasion Banting, who has something of the temperament of a great artist, was almost submerged in pessimism.

RHEUMATISM

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had IT.

In the year of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Subacute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who are thus afflicted know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, but such relief as I obtained was only temporary. Finally, I found a treatment that cured me completely, and such a pitiful condition has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, even bedridden, some of them seventy to eighty years old, and the results were the same as in my own case.

I want every sufferer from any form of muscular and sub-acute (swelling at the joints) rheumatism, to try the great value of my improved "Home Treatment" for its remarkable healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of such forms of rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

$0,000 TOYS AND GIFTS PURCHASED IN CERTAINTY FUNDS WILL BE DONATED

Purchase of Supplies to Fill 3000 Yule Baskets Begun—Plans for Carnival for 12,000 Children at Coliseum.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS will be the goal this year, as it was last, of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund. The Executive Committee of the Festival Association, at its first meeting of the season last Wednesday, found the situation regarding work to be very similar to that of a year ago, and it was decided that at least the sum called for last year would be needed for the 19th annual festival in order to make sure that not one sick or needy man, woman or child is hungry or uncheered on Christmas Day.

The Christmas Festival is not to be considered in any sense as a charity. It is simply a one-day hospitality—an effort by wel-to-do St. Louisans to serve as Yuletide hosts to those less fortunate than themselves, preserving in grown-ups the sentiment of "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men" and keeping intact in the hearts of children their faith in Santa Claus. As for 23 years past, the Post-Dispatch and the committee are preparing for the Festival on faith, purchasing supplies and making all arrangements in the certain belief that the people of St. Louis will provide ample funds this year as they have so generously done before.

More than 40,000 toys and gifts for the 12,000 child guests at the banquet on Christmas day have been purchased, plans for an elaborate spectacle in the form of a Christmas Carnival for the amusement of the children are being perfected, and the purchasing of supplies to fill the 3000 Christmas Yuletide baskets has begun.

Best Value for Money Assured.

Last year the association distributed 2887 baskets which cost approximately $2.28, or a total of $6582, and it is estimated that each basket will cost about the same this year. The amount of food which goes into each basket varies in accordance with the size of the family which is to receive it, but the amount is more than enough for one meal. The chairman of the Basket Supply Committee and of the Gift Committee are both experienced in buying in large quantities the kind of supplies which they purchase for the association, and they have the co-operation of wholesale dealers and manufacturers of those supplies, so that the greatest possible value is obtained for the money expended.

Representatives of the leading charitable and benevolent associations co-operate with the chairman of the Basket List Checking Committee, and experienced social service workers make careful investigation of the merits of each family recommended for a basket gift. This method of procedure, together with cross-checking of the final list against the lists of other organizations which also distribute Christmas baskets, insures that every deserving person being reached and is a guarantee against duplication of giving and against indiscriminate giving. The money spent is used for the exact purpose for which it is contributed, and the charitably reaches those whom it should reach, instead of being scattered haphazard among unworthy as well as worthy.

3000 More Toys Bought Than in 1922.

Gifts for the children this year will include $415 toques or hockey caps purchased at a cost of $1489; 1000 balls, which cost $1453; 10,000 rubber balls, for which $637 was paid; 9924 horns, which cost $97, and 7300 books, purchased at a cost of $1004. This amounts to $5072, which is $787 more than the toy budget of last year, which totaled $4284. But more than 3000 additional toys have been purchased for this Christmas entertainment.

As in other years, the contributing lists of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund will be published in leading stores and offices. Distribution will begin tomorrow.

Festival Fund Has No Solicitors; Lists to Go Out as in Other Years

THE Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund has no collectors of contributions and persons soliciting cash donations are imposters and should be reported immediately to the Secretary of the Executive Committee, Post-Dispatch, Olive 6600.

As in former years, subscription lists will be distributed by young women, where that is practical, and elsewhere by mail. These lists are sent out with the request that they be so displayed that anyone wishing to subscribe any sum, large or small, to the fund, may do so. This request will be made by the young women when they distribute the lists, and these helpers will make further visits to see that the opportunity to contribute has not been mislaid or forgotten, but none of the workers is authorized to ask for or to receive money.

When a list has served its purpose it may be returned to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch by mail or messenger, or, if that be not entirely convenient, a telephone request will bring a representative of the Post-Dispatch with written authority to receive and receipt for the list and money.

Except through subscription lists, donations can be made only in cash or by mail to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch. Acknowledgment will be made in the Post-Dispatch of every contribution, accompanied by the donor's name, unless a request for anonymity is made.

Individual contributions may be made through one of these lists or direct to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch. All will be acknowledged in the Post-Dispatch.

During the 23 years of its stewardship, the Post-Dispatch has received and disbursed approximately $206,538, every cent of which was devoted to the work of Christmas hospitality. In addition to making an annual contribution of several hundred dollars to the Festival Fund, the Post-Dispatch pays all administration expenses of the festival, to the last detail.

Audit of Last Year's Festival.

The receipts and expenditures for the Festival Fund are audited every year by a committee of business men. The following report of the chairman of the Audit and Finance Committee shows clearly the purposes for which the 1922 fund was used:

Audit Committee report on the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund:

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 3, 1923.

To the Executive Committee, Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund:

As chairman of the Audit and Finance Committee of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund, I submit the following statement of receipts and disbursements for the festival for the year of 1922:

Receipts—
Balance from last year with interest	$ 1,947.23
Post-Dispatch contributions.	$03.00
Other contributions	14,778.45
Firms in Post-Dispatch to pay administration expenses	1962.78	19,188.46
Disbursements—
Baskets	$ 6,735.82
Pipes and tobacco	8.75
Festival expense	3,223.55
Toys and gifts	5,320.89
Administration expense paid by the Post-Dispatch	1,962.78
Balance on hand	1,936.66	19,188.46

I have examined the books and accounts of the treasurer of the fund, Mr. Dumont Jones, cashier of the Post-Dispatch, and find them correct. All contributions to the fund were received, entered on the books and acknowledged in the columns of the Post-Dispatch.

All supplies, labor and other necessaries for the festival were ordered on requisition of the chairmen of the committees and ordered by the chairman of the Supply Committee and on the approval of the Executive Committee.

All bills were approved by the chairmen of the committees and paid on vouchers signed for the Executive Committee and the Post-Dispatch by Miss Mabel Denison and Mr. George S. Johns.

Every dollar expended is accounted for by an approved bill and a signed and approved voucher.

Besides its contribution of $500, the Post-Dispatch paid the expenses of administration, including salaries of office help, solicitors, etc., typewriting, stationery, postage and committee expenses, which amounted to $1730.63. Thus all of the money expended from the fund was applied to the actual necessaries of the several divisions of the festival.

It gives me pleasure to state that, despite the increases of expenditures due to the greater cost of materials, there is a balance of $1936.66 deposited at interest to the credit of the fund.

J. R. COOKE,
Vice-President First National Bank, Chairman Audit and Finance Committee.

Applications for Basket Christmas Dinners Must Be Received by Dec. 21

THIS year, as last, the list of persons to whom Christmas dinners will be sent in baskets by the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association will be handled and checked by a committee of representatives of charitable organizations, assisted by a staff of investigators from the Board of Children's Guardians.

Applications for the basket dinners should be sent in writing, if possible, or given in person at the information desk, first floor, Post-Dispatch Building. All applications must be in the hands of the committee by 5 o'clock the evening of Friday, Dec. 21.

This time limit has been fixed because of the work required to cross-check lists of names to prevent duplication, and to make proper investigations to insure that all deserving families will be provided with Christmas cheer.

List Committee will receive applications either in person or in writing. Personal application may be made between the hours of 9 and 5 any day until Friday evening, Dec. 21, at the Information Desk, first floor, Post-Dispatch building, where Mrs. L. E. Mellck will be in charge. Written applications may be addressed to the chairman of the Basket List Committee in care of the Post-Dispatch.

NAMES OF FAMILIES IN NEED WANTED

All legitimate requests are certain of being cared for, and any person knowing of a family that is in need of a Christmas dinner basket is urged to advise the Post-Dispatch before Dec. 21, at which time the list must be closed to permit the purchasing of supplies and packing of the baskets. No one will be refused consideration.

The concensus of members of the Executive Committee at their meeting last week was that the homeless men of St. Louis are being efficiently cared for through the various missions and municipal lodging houses, so it was decided again to omit the dinner formerly provided by the Festival Association for homeless men. Pipes and tobacco will be sent by the association to homeless men cared for by the various benevolent agencies.

The Executive Committee members who have charge of all branches of the festival and direct the expenditures and work through their subcommittees, include: A. M. Roth, chairman; William L. Igoe, representing the St. Vincent de Paul Society; Emil Steger, representing the Provident Association; Miss Margaret Fleishman and Maurice Weil, representing the Jewish Community Center; Brigadier Davis E. Dunham, representing the Salvation Army; Louis Nolte, Fred W. Pape, William Yorger, Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Sippy, Robert D. Corlett, Nelson Cunliff, C. J. Kehoe, Henry J. Bube, Oscar Stifel, Samuel J. Russack, Herman Spoehrer, J. R. Cooke and Col. T. T. Perkins. The Post-Dispatch is represented on the committee by George S. Johns.

At Wednesday's luncheon meeting, the following committee chairmen were appointed:

Food Buying and Distribution—Louis Nolte.

Basket Packing—Mrs. A. H. Sippy.

Gift Buying and Distribution—Robert D. Corlett.

Entertainment—Fred W. Pape.

Ticket Distribution — William Yorger.

Transportation—A. T. Perkins.

Hall—H. J. Bube.

Door—Oscar Stifel.

Lost Children—S. J. Russack.

Finance—J. R. Cooke.

Pipes and Tobacco—C. J. Kehoe.

Medical—Dr. A. H. Sippy.

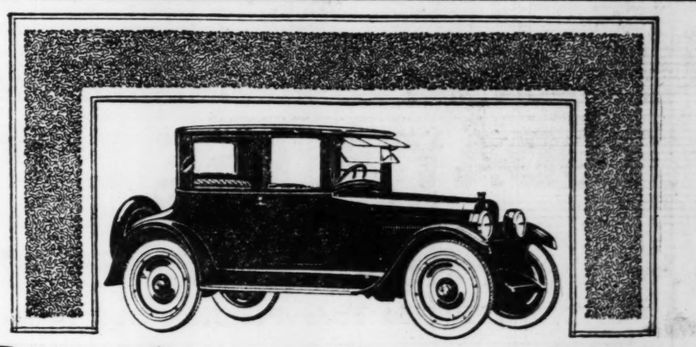
Police and Fire Protection—William L. Igoe.

Tree and Decorations—Nelson Cunliff.

Basket List—Herman Spoehrer.

Automobile Transportation — Maurice Weil.

Crippled Children—Miss Margaret Fleishman.



Rickenbacker

A · CAR · WORTHY · OF · ITS · NAME

Give her an old fashioned Christmas—with a new fashioned gift—a Rickenbacker

What gift could be more acceptable?

Do not give your wife just "a car" for Xmas. Why not give her a Rickenbacker? For just as it adds to her delight to have a beautiful strand of pearls from Dreiter; an exquisite dinner ring from Tiffany's or good looking leather luggage from Cross—so does she desire a smartly designed motor car—like the Rickenbacker!

This famous car appeals to women of refinement and good taste. It looks so down right well-bred—so carefully groomed.

The Rickenbacker has a trim, snappy, and almost jaunty air as it gracefully glides down the avenue noiselessly, vibrationlessly and, above all, comfortably.

Of course everyone knows the value, safety and economy of 4-wheel brakes—particularly the Rickenbacker type of internal 4-wheel brakes which are found on the costliest European cars.

And the motor! That thrills even the oldest veterans. It just seems to effervesce with vivacity and vigor. Truly to drive a Rickenbacker is a joy forever!

How about a demonstration—today?

N. A. D. A. MEMBERS MEET HERE MONDAY

Many Nationally Known Speakers on Program — All Dealers Welcome.

The various distributors will take charge of their respective territory dealers and will entertain them in various ways. Evening dinners have been arranged for visiting dealers by the Newell Motor Car Co., Paige and Jewett distributors; Mound City Automobile Co., Gardner and Auburn distributor; Weber Implement and Auto Co., Hupmobile distributor; Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., Hudson and Essex distributor; Southwest Nash Motor Co., Nash distributor; Vesper-Buick Automobile Co., Buick distributor and the Wilson Motor Car Co., Haynes and Dort distributor.

Between 800 and 1000 automobile dealers from Western Missouri, Southern Iowa and Eastern Illinois will gather in St. Louis Monday, December 10 for the St. Louis district convention of the National Automobile Dealers' Association at Moolah Temple, Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer avenue. The program will begin at 10 o'clock in the morning and continue until 5 o'clock in the afternoon and will be an educational gathering devoted to sales, service and management. The meeting is under the joint auspices of the National Association and the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association. R. E. Lee, Secretary of the St. Louis Association will preside.

Speakers for this meeting will include C. E. Gambill of Chicago, President Gambill Automobile Company, the largest distributor of Hupmobile cars in the United States; Percy E. Chamberlain, nationally known service authority, originator of the flat rate method of selling automobile service; J. S. Knox, Cleveland, Ohio, sales consultant; F. W. A. Vesper, St. Louis, one of the largest distributors of Buick Automobiles in the United States, and C. A. Vane, general manager of the National Automobile Dealers' Association.

The St. Louis meeting will be the sixth point in the United States at which this convention will be presented. District conventions have been held previously at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Olympia, Detroit and Columbus, Ohio. The program is a definit drive on the part of the dealer association for better selling and service methods and more efficient management to dealer establishments.

"Dealers are confronted with a serious problem in making the profits to which they have been entitled" declares an official announcement of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, and a definite drive is being made by the accredited association interests to eliminate the waste in the dealer establishment, improve the character of selling methods and provide better service for the owners of motor cars. The success of any dealer depends upon the good will that he has built up among his public and there is needed a greater understanding of the problem of how to build this good will and obtain that satisfaction.

"The speakers who will be on the program for this meeting will discuss better selling of both new and used cars and satisfying service customers."

E. H. F. Fahrenkrug, president of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association announces that all dealers handling any line of cars, whether a member of any association or not are welcome to attend the meeting. No admission will be charged, no solicitation will be made of any dealer to join any association or to buy any merchandise of any nature.

NASH BUSINES COUPE IN COUNTRY-WIDE DEMAND

The new Nash business coupe, in production now for the past six weeks, has struck a responsive chord, according to reports received by the Nash Motors Co. from distributers and dealers in practically all sections of the country.

"It is quate apparent that the public was eager for an inclosed four-cylinder car of this type," said E. H. McCarty, general sales manager of the Nash Motors Co. The new Nash business coupe was built by request of our dealer organization, which for some time past has encountered a demand for a good-looking, economical closed car of short turning radius."

The new Nash business coupe is built on the Nash standard 112-inch wheelbase four-cylinder car chassis; its perfected valve-in-head motor is powerful and at the same time is sparing of fuel consumption. Its interior appointments are of the same quality and nature as those which adorn the Nash carriole. The doors are wide and the seat is deep and comfortable.

Franklin's November Shipments Highest in Four Years.

Shipments from the Franklin Automobile Co. for November were the highest in the past four years. With a single exception, it was the biggest November in the matter of shipments in the company's history, according to Sales Manager S. E. Ackerman.

RIVER ROUGE FORD PLANT MAKES GLASS

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 1.—Glass is now being made at the Ford Motor Co.'s plant, at River Rouge and brings the company one step further in its program to control the manufacture of practically everything entering into its products.

With the new factory in operation, the third and largest glass producing unit of the company comes into being. One furnace is now operating in the Rouge factory, fires have been lighted under the second and the remaining two, it is expected, will be going shortly after the first of the year. When the factory gets in full operation it will have an annual capacity of more than 10,000,000 square feet of glass.

The company's glass plant at Glassmere, Pa., has an annual output of 7,000,000 square feet, while the smaller plant at Highland Park, started about four years ago as an experiment and where the Ford method of glass making was developed, daily produces 9500 square feet of glass.

83 Per Cent Rubber for Auto Tires.

Of the 195,097,797 pounds of crude rubber consumed in the United States during the first quarter of 1923, 83 per cent went into the manufacture of automobile tires. The total sales of rubber products during this quarter amounted to $235,640,347, of which 67 per cent went to tire manufacturers. The inventory of rubber in the United States at the end of that period, as reported by Miller tire officials, showed 200,000 long tons on hand and 100,000 tons afloat. The volume of tires and tubes made during the first quarter was 156,948,000.

High-Grade Renewed Cars
TODAY'S THE LAST DAY of the Marmon Distributors'
PRE-CHRISTMAS SALE
This Sale Ends Positively at 6 P. M. Tonight

You Can Have Delivery Christmas Morning

A high-grade car will be the finest present you can give your family. We will hold the car you buy until Christmas providing you pay a substantial deposit.

UNLIKE ANY OTHER SALE
HIGHER-GRADE CARS ALL READY TO RUN

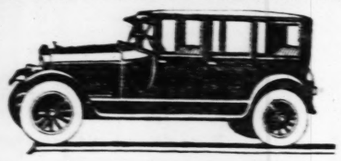
Absolutely this sale is unlike any other Used Car Sale ever held in St. Louis. The More Automobile Co.'s reputation is behind every machine. We put every ounce of our organization behind satisfying customers. That is why we are careful, not only in the type of cars we trade in, but we believe we put more care into renewing them than any other firm. Every car in this sale is first-class, ready to serve anyone.

Every Car Has Our Guarantee

No free gasoline or oil. No money back. No seven-day free trial. Yet we do guarantee every car to be exactly as represented—ready to give you the very best of service.

Many Good Cars Are Still Left
By Next Spring Like Values Will Advance 10% to 20%

Crowds have thronged our showroom, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Buyers have taken away many of the cars we placed on sale. Everyone who attended expressed his pleasure in seeing the type of Renewed Cars we have on sale. There are still a few left, among them the following wonderful values.



Marmon 1921 7-Pass. Touring
Renewed. Repainted. New tires. Wire wheels. Bumper. Shock absorbers. A car your whole family would just love.

Jordan '22 5-Pass. Tour.
Car has been carefully inspected by our mechanics, necessary repairs have been made to put it in first-class condition. Insulated Blue Devil blue; burnt orange wire wheels. Fully equipped. You would find it hard to tell this car from a new one. Get our low price on this.

Marmon Chummy Road.
Overhauled. Will repaint any color you select. This is a very popular model, one you will take great pride in owning.

Paige 6-55 7-Pass. Touring
We have overhauled and repainted this car. It has good tires, battery, underseat heater, wood rimmed and other equipment. You'll love this car. We'll give you excellent service and entire satisfaction.

Locomobile 6-48 Sport Touring
This 6-pass. car is in excellent condition throughout. Turned in by the original owner. Has always had the best of care. One of the classiest sport cars in the city. You will be astounded at how low we have priced it.

1920 STUDEBAKER SPECIAL SIX 5-PASS. TOURING
Overhauled and repainted maroon. New tires. We cannot describe this car well enough to do it justice. It must be seen to be appreciated. Our price for this sale only $850

Marmon 1919 Touring
Renewed, repainted a dark blue with dark red wire wheels; all tires practically new; fully equipped. A very exceptional value at our low price for this four days' sale only at $1250.

1921 Dixie Coupe
This 4-Passenger Coupe in A-1 mechanical condition. Repainted. Good tires. Just the car for Winter use. Our price for this sale only $495.

Marmon 1921 4-Pass. Coupe
Renewed, repainted, tires like new, wire wheels, shock absorbers, bumper, motometer and fenders. This car like new mechanically. We are selling for $1400 less than a new one.

1920 Revere Duesenberg
5-Passenger Sport Model. Repainted maroon. Fully equipped. Six wire wheels. A very classy, powerful and speedy car. Especially priced for this sale.

One of these high-grade cars is worth more than a new car at the same price.

In fact, any one of these cars is worth hundreds of dollars more than a new car at a similar price. It is higher grade, and that means more comfort, greater driving satisfaction, especially because of the way these cars have been rebuilt by us.

A 30 Minute Ride Will Win You

Essex closed car comforts now cost $170 less than ever before. Also with this lower price you get an even more attractive Coach body and a six cylinder motor built on the principle of the famous Hudson Super-Six.

It continues Essex qualities of economy and reliability, known to 135,000 owners. It adds a smoothness of performance which heretofore was exclusively Hudson's. Both cars are alike in all details that count for long satisfactory service at small operating cost.

You will like the new Essex in the nimble ease of its operation. Gears shift quietly. Steering is like guiding a bicycle, and care of the car calls for little more than keeping it lubricated. That, for the most part, is done with an oil can.

The chassis design lowers the center of gravity, giving greater comfort and safety, at all speeds, on all roads. You will be interested in seeing how this is accomplished.

Greater fuel economy is obtained. The car is lighter, longer and roomier. You will agree that from the standpoint of appearance, delightful performance, cost and reliability, the new Essex provides ideal transportation.

CLOSED CAR COMFORT

Equipped with a heater of exceptional capacity, and with doors and windows snugly weather-stripped, the Business Sedan is invitingly warm on the coldest days.

You discover, too, that the seat-backs are perfectly tilted for maximum ease; that the seats themselves are generously deep and upholstered in blue Spanish leather of the finest quality.

These impressions of interior comfort are further emphasized when the car gets under way, and you experience the admirable balance and buoyancy of the new spring suspension.

TO REMANUFACTURE USED AUTOMOBILES

Indianapolis Company Will Commence Operations Jan. 1 on Two Makes of Cars.

Indianapolis is now the home of the first complete manufacturing unit of a new division of the automobile industry which will conduct, on a wholesale scale, the remanufacturing of used cars. The new company, which is headed by B. W. Twyman, pioneer manufacturer and dealer, has taken over the property of the former Lafayette plant and will be in complete operation by January 1, 1924. The Twyman Remanufacturing Motors Co. marks a really serious attempt to relieve the used-car situation. For the time being, only two popular makes of cars, Nash and Buick, will be handled, but the company plans, according to Twyman, to include in the future development of the business other makes, and additional plants will be built or acquired over the country to give a complete major-wide remanufacturing service. The manufacturing plan of the Twyman company is based on an intensive survey of used-car conditions.

The Twyman Remanufacturing Motors Co. will operate on the same basis as an ordinary automobile factory, except the company will start with a used car instead of new materials.

The company will function with the owners of Nash and Buick cars through the regular dealer channels of these two companies. A corps of trained men from the Twyman company will cover the larger cities and drive the used cars to the factory. After they are completed these same men will drive them back to their destinations. This plan is designed to eliminate freight charges; and for this reason, only cars in condition to be driven will be handled unless the dealer wishes to bear the burden of shipping the car to the factory.

The remanufactured cars will carry the original nameplate, but will also be identified as a "remanufactured" car by a nameplate which will be placed on the lower right-hand corner of the body. This plate will carry the new company's nameplate and will state that the car has been remanufactured by the Twyman company and is guaranteed. The guarantee will be the same as the standard guarantee of the N. A. A. C.

Under the plan of the company a car will be completely torn down and remanufactured. All worn or defective parts will be replaced. The motors will undergo a block test after being rebuilt. A spacial painting department will completely refinish the chassis and body. An upholstery department will renew the trimming and make new tops.

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE BY WALTER CHRYSLER

Walter P. Chrysler, one of the biggest personalities in the motor car manufacturing business, makes an unusual double page announcement in this week's issue of one of the biggest magazines in the country.

On one of the pages are these words only: "Walter P. Chrysler Motor Car Manufacturer. See Preceding Page."

On the first page of the announcement is some information on Chrysler's experience as a motor car manufacturer. Chrysler has been in the business for fifteen years and any announcement placed by him attracts unusual attention. There are rumors that a new car bearing his name will be unusual.

Chrysler's present connection is that of general manager of Maxwell and Chalmers.

PECK IS NOW MANAGER, WARD IN DIESING FIRM

C. C. Peck Jr., who joined the Diesing Motor Sales Co. organization as general sales manager on Nov. 1, has been appointed general manager of the firm. Peck came from the Traffic Truck Corporation where he was manager of sales.

"Jim" Ward, who has been general manager of the Diesing organization, becomes junior member of the firm with title of secretary.

The Diesing Motor Sales Co. are distributors for the Rickenbacker car in this territory.

STUDEBAKER BIG SIX COVERS 475,000 MILES

On June 12, 1918, a Studebaker Big Six was delivered to its owner at Santa Paula, Cal. Next Tuesday that same Studebaker will be passing through St. Louis and will visit the Weber Motor Car Co., Studebaker distributors, en route from Los Angeles to New York. Since the day it was delivered this Studebaker distributors, en route 475 miles or more than 100,000 miles annually.

The first 14,000 miles were driven under its first owner. Then it was delivered to a newspaper hauling company who operated it carrying newspapers and averaging about 400 miles daily for three years.

It is now an exhibit of the Studebaker company. The original motor is still in the car, in spite of three wrecks, which have necessitated rebuilding the body.

Cole Makes Many Xmas Delivery Sales.

Jerome Benjamin, president of the Cole-Benjamin Motor Co., reports that business in cars for Christmas delivery is good, according to his observations on Auto Row. Benjamin states that business in Cole cars continues excellent. Two Cole master models were sold by him last week, including a coupe to Robert C. Newman of the Missouri State Life Insurance Co., and a seven-passenger sedan with balloon tires to Ben Altheimer, president of the Altheimer Real Estate Co.

LINCOLN

LINCOLN SMOOTHNESS

THE Lincoln is renowned for power and speed. But just as impressive is its marvelous smoothness. Speeding in the open, or throttled down in traffic, it travels without apparent effort, without vibration.

This flexibility is the necessary result of the 60-degree angle of its V-type, eight cylinder engine. Blending successive power impulses into a steady stream of power, the car has the ready ability to thread traffic, to get away quickly, to deliver whatever speed conditions may demand.

Splendidly built of finest steels—free from the racking of jolts and minor vibration—the Lincoln runs on year after year, always beautiful, always spirited, always supreme.

NEW ESSEX SIX TO BE SHOWN MONDAY

Many Changes in Hudson-Built Car — Coach Priced at $975.

The new Essex, a six-cylinder car built under Hudson super-six patents and featuring a larger, roomier coach at $975, has arrived in St. Louis and will be on display at the salesrooms of Hudson-Essex tomorrow.

The new coach is said to be the only six cylinder enclosed car on the market listing at less than $1000. It is announced that at least 75 per cent of this year's Essex output will be in this coach. There is a five-passenger open car which carries a list price of $850.

"If a nut-shell description of the new Essex is required," said R. C. Pennington, "the following sentence might fill the bill:

"The new Essex combines all the reliability and stamina of the previous car plus a smooth flow of power. The new Essex measures up in every respect to the traditional Hudson policy of providing a product of outstanding merit. In this new car may be found the results of all the lessons which Hudson has learned from the Essex and from the super-six.

"On this chassis are mounted: First, an open body, low-hung in appearance, and second, a finer, larger Essex coach which is an entirely new product in the motor field—namely, a six-cylinder, five passenger enclosed car selling at less than $1000.

NEW ESSEX SIX TO BE SHOWN MONDAY

Many Changes in Hudson-Built Car — Coach Priced at $975.

The new Essex, a six-cylinder car built under Hudson super-six patents and featuring a larger, roomier coach at $975, has arrived in St. Louis and will be on display at the salesrooms of Hudson-Frampton tomorrow.

The new coach is said to be the only six cylinder enclosed car on the market listing at less than $1000. It is announced that at least 75 per cent of this year's Essex output will be in this coach. There is a five-passenger open car which carries a list price of $850.

"If a nut-shell description of the new Essex is required," said R. C. Frampton, "the following sentence might fill the bill:

"The new Essex combines all the reliability and stamina of the previous car plus a smooth flow of power. The new Essex measures up in every respect to the traditional Hudson policy of providing a product of outstanding merit. In this new car may be found the results of all the lessons which Hudson has learned from the Essex and from the super-six.

"On this chassis are mounted: First, an open body, low-hung in appearance, and second, a finer, larger Essex coach which is an entirely new product in the motor field—namely, a six-cylinder, five passenger enclosed car selling at less than $1000.

"Both cars are handsome. The coach is remarkable in that there is over six inches more leg room between the front and rear seats than in the old Essex. This affords real sitting comfort on even the longest drives. There is two inches additional head room above the front seat. On the open car, the top is actually only 5 feet 10½ inches above the ground, at its highest point and the front of the top is so low that a man of average height can look directly over it. The coach is in proportion, and is a remarkably trim, low-hung smart appearing car.

"This lowness is obtained with no sacrifice in road clearance. A new principle in mounting bodies is involved. It is a highly important factor not only in bettering the general lines of the car, but also in lowering the center of gravity and greatly improving the riding qualities.

"The general lines of the coach have been somewhat revised. The compartment space at the rear has been transferred to an interior location at the upper half of the rear seat. This change in design has made possible a greater improvement in the general appearance."

USE AUTO ACCESSORIES AS CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Quite a number of window displays throughout the city on "Something for the car for Xmas" campaign are now finished. According to Joe Stiffelman, general manager of the Square Auto Supply Co., 1129 Locust, the demand for auto accessories as Xmas presents is becoming more noticeable. He stated that their windows are attracting unusual attention of passersby.

The movement of "Something for the car for Xmas" was started several weeks ago by the automotive accessory association.

H. C. S. HAS NEW MODEL SEDAN

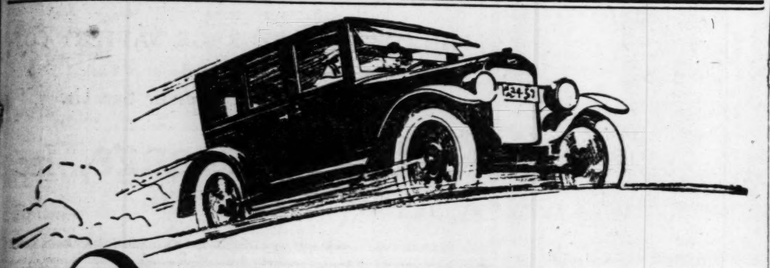
Among the first to show the new color styles for the year is the H. C. S. Motor Car Co., who have just announced their new sedan model. Back in the old King's time, the Egyptians had only four basic colors——red, yellow, blue and green—but from these four colors they obtained pleasing and harmonious effects in marvelous and varied combinations of the many tints or shades of each of these colors.

Several of these most attractive combinations have been adopted in painting this new H. C. S. sedan, with the result that the old somber, conservative colors are rapidly dying out.

Included in the improvements in this new sedan are new body lines, later styles in body hardware, new and late designs in trimming fabrics, heaters controlled by the operator, large tires, with balloon tire equipment on special order, and an option of either disc or wire wheels.

Runs Automobile on Abandoned Railway.

An enterprising native of the State of Maine has solved the problem of what to do with an abandoned railway. Some months ago the Bangor & Aroostook Railway discontinued service over its 12-mile branch, running from Brownsville to Kathadin Iron Works. Henry Green saw his opportunity. He started with a small automobile and an idea. The idea was to fit the car with flange wheels and make it run on the unused rails. He rented the whole branch line from the railroad company at $100 a month and started business. Now traffic is so brisk he is using a trailer behind his car.



Feel this Power!

Give yourself a treat! Get into an Overland Sedan and "step on it"! The sensation of power is wonderful. The bigger new engine makes you master of traffic and hills! WHICH TIRES WEAR OUT MOST AND WHY?

The fact that automobile tires on the right side of the car wear out more quickly than those on the left side is one which many motorists are unable to explain. A very popular misconception is that turning corners more frequently to the right than to the left is responsible for this wear. Such, however, is not the case.

The reason that tires on the right side of the car wear more quickly than those on the left is that they carry a greater load than their brothers on the other side. The natural slope of the street or road, causes more of the load to rest upon the right side of the car. In addition, the natural tendency of the car to slide sideways because of the road slope must be counteracted more by the tires on the right side than on the left.

Car owners sometimes wonder also why it is that under normal conditions of road and driving, the right rear tire wears out more quickly than the left rear. That, according to Miller tire experts, is due to the additional strain. Not only must it meet with the natural obstacles of the road, but it must also absorb the pulling and braking strain which is transmitted by the motor.

That is another argument against quick starting and stopping. The sudden start and the sudden stop cause undue wear of the tread surface as well as discomfort to the passengers.

MARMON STOCK TOURING CAR TRIUMPHS IN ALPS

Competing against many of America's and Europe's best racing cars, a Marmon stock touring car, carrying standard equipment, driven by Werner Risch of Zurich, won the 1923 International Mountain Race on the Klausen hill in the Swiss Alps, according to word just received by the More Automobile Co. of St. Louis, Marmon distributors. The race is known among European racing enthusiasts as the "Grand Prix of the Alps."

Before more than 40,000 spectators and in a driving rain which rendered the dangerous course even more perilous, the three Marmon entries, although competing with standard gearing, made the best time of any of the contestants. The race was officially sponsored by the Automobile Club of Switzerland "Sektion Bern."

Well-known foreign racing cars such as the French Ballot, Peugeot, Delage, the Hispano-Suiza, Bugatti, Lorraine-Dietrich, Aga, Fiat, Aureau, Benz, Presto and several prominent American-made automobiles, were entered. Many of the contestants had specially-designed and stripped racing cars with professional mountain race drivers.

Marmon not only won the mountain-climbing event, but also carried away the laurels for showing the best speed on the straightaway. The average on the steepest grade, attained by the three Marmons, was more than 40 miles an hour. The speed along the straightaway was more than double the grade speed.

PACKARD MOTOR HAS NOISELESS GEAR-SHIFT

Just a few years ago there was a grinding and clashing of tortured metal when the gear setting lever of an automobile was shifted into "first" at the start, or from one speed to another. It was accepted as necessary for a time. Engineers of the Packard Motor Car Co., however, conceived the idea that if all the teeth of each gear were rounded off, each time a change in speed was required the gears would slip quietly into mesh.

A new car was taken from the plant and given a long trip. After the return Col. J. G. Vincent and other engineers took the car all apart and studied the gears. It was found that the shifting from one speed to another had chipped and ground off the sharp edges of the gear teeth and that they had been rounded off until they resembled the top of the ordinary steam radiator.

An expert in the making of machines for the manufacturing of gears was called into work with company engineers to devise a machine which would accomplish this rounding off operation before the gears were put into a car. The simplest kind of a looking little machine, no bigger than a baby chair and with a cutter no larger than the tapered end of a lead pencil, has been taking the noise of clashing gears out of Packard cars ever since.

REIS TAKES LIGHTFOOT'S PLACE AS CHAIRMAN

Charles E. Lightfoot, manager of the Diamond T Truck Company, who has been chairman of the Commercial Car Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, which is the organization of the truck dealers of St. Louis, presented his resignation as chairman at a meeting of the Bureau held Monday. Lightfoot will leave St. Louis for California about Dec. 20.

J. P. Reis, president and general manager of the Eagle Motor Truck Corporation of St. Louis, was elected chairman of the Commercial Car Bureau to succeed Lightfoot.

I Spent $100,000

To find these ways to youth and beauty

By Edna Wallace Hopper

My mother was rich and ambitious. She went with me to search the world for the greatest beauty helps in existence. They cost us a fortune and many years of time. But they made me a famous beauty. I became the rage. And now, at the age of 62, they keep me a beauty still.

I have seen those same helps bring to many plain girls multiplied attractions. To some they brought careers of beauty. I have seen them bring to countless women decades of added youth. So now I have placed these matchless helps at every woman's call. And I am doing my best to urge women to employ them.

You need but four

I found 32 great beauty helps. But French experts combined them in four preparations. So these results came very easy to me.

One is a super-clay. Not like the crude and muddy clays you read about today. This clay is white, refined and dainty. It has been perfected by 20 years of scientific study. I call it my White Youth Clay. Before I found it, I never knew one-tenth what clay could do.

Clay is a beauty essential. It purges the skin of all that clogs or mars it. It creates a rosy glow. It firms the skin, combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores. It has brought to millions new complexions. But my White Youth Clay vastly excels the old types. The cost is 50 cents and $1.

My Youth Cream

My Youth Cream combines both lemon and strawberry. Also all the best French experts know to foster the fine texture of the skin.

I use it after the clay. Also as a night cream, also daytimes as a powder base. I am never without it, to whiten, soften, feed and smooth the skin. I have never known another cold cream to bring comparable results. My Youth Cream costs 50 cents.

My Facial Youth is a liquid cleanser which does what nothing else can do. The greatest beauty experts now employ this formula, but they charge for it a price which few can pay.

Facial Youth contains no animal, no vegetable fat. The skin cannot absorb it. It simply cleans to the depths, then departs. All the refuse, grime and dirt go with it. No other method cleans the skin like Facial Youth. The cost is 75c.

My wonderful hair

Millions of women envy my hair. It is thick, silky and luxuriant. I have never had dandruff or falling hair, never a touch of gray.

The reason lies in my Hair Youth. I apply it daily with an eye dropper, directly to the scalp. It removes the hardened oil and dandruff which stifle the hair root. It stimulates and fertilizes. You will be amazed to see how hair thrives when the scalp is kept in shape.

My Hair Youth costs 50 cents and $1 with eye dropper. The results come quickly. I hope you will learn what it means to your hair.

To those four products I owe my beauty and my youth. Now all druggists and toilet counters supply them to all who want like results. For the sake of all you prize most, do learn what they can do. Edna Wallace Hopper, Business address, Waukesha, Wis.

BRITISH RADIO HEARD IN ST. LOUIS DISTRICT

Many Listeners Report Results of International Tests in Which K S D Took Part.

Results of the international tests of radio communication as between America and England during the week from Nov. 25 to Dec. 1 are being made known in letters to Post-Dispatch Station KSD which took a prominent part in the experiments.

Those letters show that radio fans in various parts of the St. Louis territory heard the English and Scotch stations clearly enough to identify them. In some cases the reception was remarkable in its audibility and clearness—so much so that the hearers were able to keep a record of the actual messages broadcast from across the ocean and to identify the musical numbers sent out on the air.

It also is established by some of these letters that on the last night of the test period, Dec. 1, the attempt to establish two-way communication by radio between America and England was successful to the extent that some of the questions put by American stations, including KSD, which was one of seven stations selected to make this inter-communication test.

As a part of this test, Station KSD, speaking to Station 5IT, Birmingham, England, broadcast this message: "The sky is cloudy here. What weather have you?"

L. S. Tibals of Signal Hill, Ill., writes that he heard the Birmingham station call KSD and answer: "The weather is unsettled in England."

On the same night KSD also made an effort to reach Station 2LO, London and Station 5SC, Glasgow. Several St. Louis listeners reported that they heard 2LO endeavoring to communicate with KSD.

The best results, however, were attained by listeners in small towns where conditions for reception were better than in the large cities.

One of the remarkable feats of reception was that of Mrs. Harry Spooner of Wheeling, Mo., the night of Tuesday, Nov. 27. She writes that she heard Station 5SC, Glasgow, Scotland, clearly and distinctly from 9:15 p. m. until it signed off at 9:36, and that there was no interference during that period. "The program," she says, "was in part as follows: 'London Bridge Is Falling Down,' a dialogue on Hawaii, concluding with 'Aloha Oe.' Then they said 'We'll tell them we won't go home till morning,' concluding with 'Three o'Clock in the Morning.' There was a recitation by two men, 'The House That Jack Built.' Then one said: 'We have a few minutes left, and after a little joking they played 'Nearer, My God, to Thee,' one of them apologizing for his poor playing. The signing off call was 'Goodnight, Friends of Radio Land.'"

Striking verification of this comes from Emma Morgan of Maunie, Ill., who writes that on the same night she heard a station whose call she did not get, but part of whose program she thus describes:

"There seemed to be two men talking, and one said: 'Boys, we have but a few minutes left. Let's play something they all know.' The other man suggested 'Nearer, My God, to Thee,' and they started playing it, but it became so weak I could hear no more."

Daniel A. Dowling of Glencoe, Mo., writes of having heard a foreign station the call number of which he did not catch. "The program," he says, "was as follows: Music. 'Old Black Joe,' and 'Nearer, My God, to Thee,' recitation. 'The House That Jack Built.' They signed off 'Goodnight, Lads and Lassies of Radio Land.'"

Mrs. Edward H. Franz of Springfield, Ill., writes that on the night of Nov. 25, first night of the international test, she heard the London station announce that it had heard a program from Havana, Cuba, music from Wisconsin and a sermon from Ohio.

Christy C. McGrath Jr. of 2317 Randolph street writes that on the night of Dec. 1 he heard 5WA, Cardiff, Wales, 5SC, Glasgow, Scotland; 2IP, Aberdeen, Scotland, and 5IT, Birmingham, England. Among the calls he heard was: "Station 5WA calling KSD, St. Louis, U. S. A. Please answer." On the night of Nov. 27 he heard 2LO, London, playing "Yankee Doodle" and "Dixie," and held that station 45 minutes.

George Hall of St. Louis writes that on the night of Nov. 29 he heard an English station from 9:15 to 10:15 p. m. He heard "Yankee Doodle" and other American airs played on a piano and heard a voice say: "We hope many of our American friends are listening in and we want to say that our idea of international friendship is the League of Nations."

Following the effort of Post-Dispatch Station K S D to establish two-way communication with stations in London, Birmingham and Glasgow the night of Dec. 1, Vincent Lopiccolo, of 5917 DeGiverville avenue, St. Louis, wrote: "I am very glad to say that you got across as we heard 5IT calling K S D at 9:22 o'clock and also heard 2LO, but could not make out if they were calling K S D." On that night also Fred. Becker of 611 Jackson street, St. Louis, heard London and Manchester and H. F. Hoch of Webster Groves heard London. N. C. Baechler of Louisville, Ky., wired the Post-Dispatch that on the night of Dec. 1 he heard London and Glasgow sending out a request that anyone hearing them in America notify Station K S D, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Eldon Hole of North Branch, Minn., heard Birmingham, England.

W. S. Burke, of 2755 Bacon street heard the call: "2LO, hello, St. Louis." Other St. Louisans who reported that they heard English and Scotch stations the night of Dec. 1 were Edward Hooker, 5473 Waterman avenue; Miss Schramm, 4918 Fountain avenue; Roy Dreyer, 2543 Virginia avenue; W. F. Byrden, 5029 Maple avenue, and Gilbert G. Early, 2954 Hartford street.

The week of international radio tests was arranged on the American side by Radio Broadcast, Garden City, New York, which is compiling the results of the tests and which has verified many of the reports received from radio listeners who told of hearing English and Scotch stations.

Radiograms.

Mississippi is the only state in the Union without a broadcasting station.

To promote the use of radiophone in China, it is reported that a radio society has recently been formed in Hongkong.

Cafes, hotels and other places in Paris have radio pay stations. Slots with ear phones are installed through which a broadcast concert can be heard after a coin has been deposited.

A 24-story skyscraper is to be built in Chicago, equipped with a single receiving station for the purpose of receiving stock market reports to be conveyed by wire to each of the offices.

-:- RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT -:-

For the Notebook.

A single circuit set will not cut out interference as efficiently as a two-circuit set.

Avoid unnecessary apparatus in the receiving set. Simplicity is a feature of many of the most efficient installations.

The word "kilocycle" is taking the place of a "wave length" is a radio term used to designate the operating conditions of a station.

The use of a horn in connection with the telephone receivers generally does not give good results, unless the signal can be heard well at least one or two feet from the telephones without using the horn.

Radio Simplicity.

The simplest form of receiving circuit is a crystal detector in series with the antenna and ground with the phones shunted around the detector. This hook-up, however, is not satisfactory, because it does not permit the operator to tune out undesired signals, and therefore interference is at a maximum. Either a single or a double circuit tuner is preferable. The latter allows more selective tuning.

LOCAL SIGNALS FOR CALIBRATION OF SETS

Waves of Standard Frequency to Be Transmitted for Amateurs.

Beginning at 3 p. m. this afternoon, the St. Louis Radio Traffic Committee will transmit a series of signals of scheduled frequencies to enable local amateurs to accurately calibrate their receivers for amateur wave lengths. The time of transmission and wave lengths used will be as follows:

3:00 to 3:06 p. m.	240 meters
3:10 to 3:16 p. m.	230 meters
3:20 to 3:26 p. m.	220 meters
3:30 to 3:36 p. m.	215 meters

The station which has been selected for transmitting will sign twice to comply with the law, but the signal for calibrating purposes will be "QST de STC," (initials of the St. Louis Traffic Committee), repeated with very long dashes intervening, together with the wave length being used. Straight continuous wave only will be used.

For best results it is suggested that a tickler or plate variometer adjustment be selected which will allow the set to oscillate throughout the entire range of wave lengths and this adjustment be permitted to remain constant. Then use the grid variometer or secondary condenser for tuning the set. It might be advisable to calibrate the set wit hboth the old and a new detector tube so that when the new one is placed in operation no inconvenience will be experienced in "hunting" for desired stations.

A good plan is to rule a sheet of paper with vertical columns, the left column to be used for wave lengths and the others to show receiver dial settings.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

The Eelectirc Storage Battery Company have recently placed on the market three new types of batteries, namely, 1-KZR-5 designed for the 1.5 volt tubes consuming 25 ampere, type 2-KZR-3, designed for use with tubes operating on 3 to 3.6 volts at .06 of an ampere, and Type 12-RB-2, a 24-volt "B" battery. The first referred to, (for 1.5 volt tubes) consists of a single hard-rubber cell in which are assembled the five plates—two positive and three negative—The plates are of sufficient thickness to insure long life and a steady flow of current, and the wooden separators are supplemented with perforated rubber separators of the best quality obtainable. The second, (Type 2-KZR-3) for 3 to 3.6 volt tubes is similar in construction to the preceding type with the exception that it has two cells, each containing three plates instead of one cell with five. The plates are of the same weight, and the separators are similar. The charging rate is one ampere instead of one cell with five. The plates are of the same weight, and the separators are similar. The charging rate is one ampere instead of two, as supplied to the first mentioned. The case of the "B" battery is made of solid rubber, divided into 12 compartments or cells, each containing one positive and one negative plate one-quarter of an inch thick and two inches square. Each cell is covered with a soft rubber cover, and a specially designed vent is provided through which the gas escapes when the battery is being charged.

The new model Brandes Navy Type headphones are now available in St. Louis. They are listed at a minimum figure and the results they give, compare favorably with the best of American made receivers.

Connecticut loud speakers have an adjustable diaphragm and are completely equipped with connecting cord and attachment plug.

The Philco charger is a new type of electrolytic rectifier for charging B batteries and all makes of A batteries. It is furnished with an eight-foot cord and plug to screw into the lamp socket and with leads to attach to the battery terminals. The charger itself has two sockets for electric lamps to be used for regulation of the charging rate. It is built around the idea of slow charging at current rates so low that the battery cannot be overheated or injured in any way no matter how long or how often it is charged. It is said to eliminate all danger of gassing and of any acid spray coming out of the vents, thus making it safe to charge them in the living room. The manufacturers say that batteries thus charged need water added to them only once or twice a year. The price is moderate.

The Philadelphia Storage Battery Co. which makes the Philco product is also out with a complete new line of storage batteries designed especially for radio use. These include compact A batteries for use with peanut tubes. A feature of these batteries is that they have a visible charge indicator and a visible water gauge built into them. They are also equipped with a new type noncorrodible snap terminal which grasps and releases the wire with a slight pressure from one finger.

Pfanstiel nonmicrophonic sockets for UV-199 tubes are excellent devices. They may be had individually or in "gangs" of two or three, and this particular type is designed for panel mounting. The cost is about the same as other UV-199 sockets.

The National Carbon Co., Inc., are now manufacturing an upright 22½-volt "B" battery especially adapted for cabinet or table use where space is limited. The base is the same size as the smallest of their "B" batteries but is twice as high and the life is claimed to be more than twice as long. It is equipped with Fahnestock connectors. Everready storage "A" batteries are especially designed for radio use and are guaranteed for one year. They are encased in hardwood boxes, finished in mahogany. Connections between cells are covered with a special insulating compound, the terminals being covered with hard rubber knurled nuts, which makes it impossible to accidentally short-circuit the battery. The vent caps are packed with a special material to prevent the electrolyte from spilling should the battery be tipped, and to prevent the escape of the electrolyte while it is on charge. They are made in three sizes—of 50, 90 and 110 ampere hour capacities. Each type has a four-volt tap for tubes operating on less than six volts.

The Melco Supreme Receiving Set, a product of the Mortimer Radio Corporation, is a "new arrival." It has two stages of tuned radio frequency amplification. Tuning is accomplished by a novel form of variometer and by two new instruments called vario-transformers—a highly improved type of radio frequency transformer replacing those ordinarily used. Another feature of this set is the Ward-Leonard Vitrohm Register of 10 0ohms incorporated to protect the tubes. It is connected between the A plus and B minus posts and makes burning out due to accidental overloads improbable. The Melco Supreme is adapted for use with any of the four different types of aerials most practical for the reception of broadcast programs, viz.: outdoor antenna, loop antenna, indoor or lighting plug antenna.

Concerning Wave Lengths.

By inserting a 50-turn honeycomb coil in series with the antenna, the wave length possibilities of a receiving set can be increased. A switch should be provided to short-circuit this loaded coil when the operator desires to tune for lower wave length stations. If stations on low wave lengths cannot be tuned in, a variable condenser in series in the antenna or ground circuit will usually be sufficient to get them.

The Latest Up-to-the-Minute Radio

Radio development within the past year has been so rapid that apparatus designed for conditions existing a year ago are not suitable for those of today. Don't buy an old, obsolete set. This Acmedyne has been built to meet these new conditions. It is positively the latest thing in radio and gives results not obtainable with other sets. London, Mexico City, Havana, Cuba, are heard through loud speaker. Local broadcasters are tuned out. Features improved 4-tube Acmedyne Circuit with 2 stages tuned radio frequency amplification using neutralizing condensers for tubes which prevents all howling noises and sound interference so common in many sets. A record of dial readings can be kept of each station. Cabinet of mahogany with bakelite panel and engraved dials. Easy operating instructions furnished. An Open Letter from a Radio Fan to his relatives who are now buying Christmas Presents

Dear Folks:

If you really want to make me happy this Christmas please give me something for my radio set.

In the first place I need a Loud Speaker. Please get me a Manhattan. It has the Concert Modulator that enables anyone to adjust the Loud Speaker to existing conditions. It is just the kind of an instrument I have always wanted.

I also need a Headset. Please be sure to buy a Red Seal because I have heard that they are exceptionally sensitive to distant signals.

And while you are at it don't forget the Variometers and Variocouplers. Yes, Manhattan of course.

And don't forget a Red Seal Radio Sparker. My batteries are getting weak and the two-cell Red Seal Radio Sparker lasts three times as long as two ordinary dry cells.

And finally (if you have any more money left) won't you get me two or three Manhattan dials and knobs for the experimental set I am building?

Sincerely

a Radio Fan

P. S. I forgot to mention that if you buy a Manhattan Loud Speaker we can all enjoy the radio programs.

Steinite The Marvelous New Crystal Gives Distance On Crystal Sets!

Underwriters Fire Patrol

KANSAS CITY MO.

Steinite Laboratories
Rad Floor, Radio Bldg.
Atchison, Kansas.

Gentlemen:

You certainly have the greatest crystal I have ever used—and I have used them all. Your STEINITE is the greatest for volume and distance I have ever tried.

Just for example let me tell you what I did with STEINITE last night. I picked up the St. Louis Post Dispatch. Also heard Omaha and Davenport. Now that's remarkable.

When W D A F, The Kansas City Star is in the air, I attach a small tin horn to one receiver, shunt the other and throw the entertainment out into two large rooms. STEINITE is a REAL crystal. You can refer any doubters to me.

Sincerely yours,
W. E. Gardner
Insp. U. S. Fire Patrol Dept.
Kansas City, Mo.

RESULTS truly amazing. Like Mr. W. E. Gardner tells in his letter, Everyone astonished by STEINITE. W. J. Hess, E. St. Louis, writes: "Many of my friends are using STEINITE. I placed one in a set I made up and the local stations came in so strong as to hurt the ear drums. I have received 28 stations clearly: K D K A, W O A W, K S D, W J A Z, W O C and K Y W, which I consider wonderful. Six others have ordered Crystals from our office." A. Leyden Leavenworth, Kans., writes: "So far have caught Omaha, Dallas, St. Louis."

You can't doubt what you hear with your own ears. Listen in on STEINITE at my risk. Read my guarantee and offer—then act.

-:- RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT -:-

UNITED STATES LEADS THE WORLD IN RADIO

Amateur and Broadcasting Stations Greatly Outnumber Those in Any Other Country.

Radio broadcasting continues to hold the interest of the public in this country and is to a limited extent gaining recognition in other countries. The United States had 573 broadcasting stations on June 30 as compared with 382 a year ago. In foreign countries there are but 91, Canada having 30 of these.

The permanency of this means of disseminating to the public, news, entertainment, and instruction seems assured, according to officials, is not unreasonable to expect a continuation of the rapid growth of broadcasting stations, improved apparatus, greater care in providing high class programs, and closer supervision by the radio inspection service, minimize the interference should, however, guarantee a continued growth in the audience.

There is no abatement in amateur activity, according to the Secretary's report. The number of licensed amateur transmitting stations increased from 15,504 in 1922 to 16,970 on June 30, 1923. Serious effort is being made by the amateurs to improve their apparatus so as to reduce interference and increase the efficiency of their stations. Annually these experimenters conduct trans-Atlantic tests with European amateurs. The last test was in December, 1922, when 215 were successful in getting their signals across to Great Britain, France and Switzerland.

"Few realize the importance of our amateur auxiliary communication system which can be put into immediate operation and temporarily provide a means for dispatching trains, giving flood warnings, and transmitting emergency messages to and from sections temporarily deprived of wire facilities," it is stated.

Radio communication is assuming a place of the first importance in the electrical field, and naturally a large part of the time of the Bureau of Standards Electrical Division has been devoted to radio subjects. The Bureau is endeavoring to aid in the commercial standardization of radio equipment, a progressive step of great importance and for which an excellent opportunity exists in this field owing to the newness of the entire subject. Progress has been made in the development of precise frequency measurements and other investigations connected with the reduction of radio interference. The work on electron tubes and insulating materials will have a most important industrial application. Estimates of expenses for radio work at the Bureau next year call for $81,040, an increase of $15,000 over the 1924 appropriations.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Writer

Q. (1) Will a UV-201-A-tube serve as a transmitting tube for a small set? (2) Would a license be necessary to transmit with such a set? If so, where and how can it be obtained? (3) Would the wire of the "B" battery leading to the negative terminal of the "A" battery be positive. J. Z.

A. (1) Yes, over a very short range. (2) Yes. Apply to the radio supervisor, Federal Building, Chicago, Ill., for amateur transmitting license blanks. (3) No, negative.

Q. (1) My regenerative set was extremely sensitive to body capacity. After lining the back of the panel with tin foil and "grounding" it, the set became inoperative. (I did not allow the foil to touch any metal part except the ground binding post.) When the foil was removed, the set functioned. What can be done to overcome the trouble? (2) Would a fixed condenser in parallel with a variable condenser increase the wave length? E. A.

A. (1) In spite of your efforts to prevent the tin foil from coming in contact with metal other than the "ground" there is little doubt that it created a short-circuit somewhere in the set. Replace the shield, taking great care to see that it clears all shafts or other current-carrying parts of the set. (2) Yes.

Q. What would be the effect of increasing the number of turns on the primary of a vario-coupler from 63 to 120? J. A. P.

A. It would increase the wavelength range of the instrument. The turns on the secondary coil, however, should be proportionately increased.

Q. I tuned in a station in Mexico and think the call was KYZ. Where is this station? H. K.

A. The only Mexican stations of which we have record are CYL and CYB, both in Mexico City.

Q. I wish to purchase a local and long distance radio set which will work a loud speaker without using an outside aerial. How much should it cost? P. J. N.

A. Any dealer whose advertisement appears in this newspaper can give you the desired information. Some of them give demonstrations in the home before purchase.

Q. What station has the call LLO? I heard it last Saturday night. L. A. E.

A. We know of no such station. London has the call ILO and it was making a special effort to reach America the night of Dec. 1.

Q. What sort of hook-up is necessary to receive 500 miles on a crystal? E. C. F.

A. It is not so much a matter of hook-up as of good aerial and ground. With the simplest 10-cent store set Post-Dispatch operators using the aerial and ground at Station KSD have heard Atlantic coast stations and ships at sea.

Q. What are the requirements for obtaining a license for broadcasting phonograph records and musical programs? E. S.

A. Write to the Radio Supervisor, Federal Building, Chicago, requesting an application blank for broadcasting license.

Q. I bought the parts for a set and have lost the directions and cannot hook it up. What shall I do? L. W. S.

A. Write to the dealer or manufacturer for a new set of directions.

Q. What is the call of the station in Havana, Cuba? E. L.

A. The Cuban Telephone Co. operates PWX.

Q. Please advise what kind of an inexpensive set I could get to hear broadcasting stations in St. Louis, Atlanta and Washington? S. E. B. (Cullen, Ala.).

A. Either a single-circuit or spider-web three-circuit one-tube set should serve the purpose very satisfactorily.

Radiograms.

The most powerful group of radio stations in the world, at a cost of $13,000,000, is to be located in the five provinces of China.

Station KDKA, Pittsburg, Pa., is the pioneer of broadcasting. This station has been broadcasting since Nov. 2, 1920.

A 1,000,000-watt radio station is to be constructed at Shanghai, China, with seven steel towers 1000 feet high. This station will engage in direct communication with Hawaii, and even San Francisco.

In an effort to keep stations on their exact wave length, daily measurements of the waves radiated from various broadcasting stations are now being made by the Bureau of Standards in Washington.

The largest apartment building in Brooklyn, N. Y., now under construction, containing 159 suites, will have a radio loop concealed behind the picture molding with a baseboard socket for attaching a radio instrument in each living room.

Concerning Regeneration.

A non-regenerative receiver is, as a rule, quiet in operation, but it will not cover the range with the same number of tubes that a regenerative set will. When the former is not working properly it sounds "dead," about the same as when listening over an ordinary telephone and the operator pulls the plug out. A regenerative set develops noises such as hissing and howling of the tube. This is usually caused by the filament burning too brightly or over-regeneration. This can be overcome by turning back on the variometer or turning back the tickler, or better still, by reducing the filament current. By using the latter method the tube will last longer.

Causes of Failure of Audio-frequency Amplifier to Amplify:
Poor tubes.
Improper grid biasing voltage.
Ineffective or poor transformers.
Improper grid return connection.
Run down "A" or "B" battery.
Improper polarity of transformer connections.

RADIODYNE—

The Latest Development in Radio

Radiodyne is a new radio receiver that has revolutionized long distance reception.

Note These Features—

No outside aerial wires
No cumbersome loops to revolve
Brings in terrific signals
Puts all stations on the loud speaker
Uses only a wire laid on the floor

The Radiodyne WC-10 is so sensitive it will pick up telephone speech and music when practically all other types of equipment FAIL.

Mr. Sapp of the Newall Motor Car Co., St. Louis, receives Glasgow, Scotland, clearly and word for word on his Radiodyne Receiver. Others (names on file) receive clearly Los Angeles, Havana, Cuba and Canadian stations.

The WC-10 with an inside balancing wire only 30 to 50 feet long, gives signals of tremendous volume from distant stations. The Radiodyne is a six-tube tuned radio frequency receiver and is the latest development known to the radio art.

TYPE V Armstrong Regenerative Receiver
1,000 Miles
The Precision Equipment Company
Cincinnati, Ohio

Gentlemen: You should be congratulated for your Ace Receiver. It was wonderful. Type V regenerative receiver. Last night I listened in from 8 to 12 o'clock and without a moment's interruption I heard the following stations: WSAI, in Cincinnati; WJZ, in Newark; WEAF, in New York, as clear as a bell. And to crown all, I was using two pairs of head phones. I think this is a wonderful record, as I am distant from Akron about 1,000 miles. My station equipment and aerial will be up in the air soon, and I will be glad to hear from you again.

RADIO FORGERY AND THE M'MILLAN EXPEDITION

Three Cases Where Amateurs Use Their Radiophones to Impersonate Arctic Explorer.

Since MacMillan, the well-known arctic explorer, went north on his present expedition there have been three instances of radio forgery where some amateur with a radio telephone transmitter has gone on the air and impersonated MacMillan. For instance, the Philadelphia Public Ledger recently published an account to the effect that one of the officers of a Philadelphia company had, at his summer home in the Pocono Mountains, distinctly heard MacMillan broadcast a message by voice. RADIO FORGERY AND THE M'MILLAN EXPEDITION

Three Cases Where Amateurs Use Their Radiophones to Impersonate Arctic Explorer.

Since MacMillan, the well-known arctic explorer, went north on his present expedition there have been three instances of radio forgery where some amateur with a radio telephone transmitter has gone on the air and impersonated MacMillan. For instance, the Philadelphia Public Ledger recently published an account to the effect that one of the officers of a Philadelphia company had, at his summer home in the Pocono Mountains, distinctly heard MacMillan broadcast a message by voice. In truth and in fact, MacMillan has no voice transmitter and uses nothing but code in sending back his messages. MacMillan has been coming through right along with the radio telegraph transmitter used for this present expedition. The American Radio Relay League members are straining every effort to keep in touch with MacMillan, despite the great distances involved.—Scientific American.

Causes of Crackling, Hissing and Frying Sounds in Receivers.

Noisy grid leak resistances.
Run down "B" battery.
Michophonic noises from tube.
Broken down grid condenser.
Poor contacts in tube sockets.
Loose connections in grid, filament, or plate circuits.
Outside sources: Static X-rays, trolleys, arc lights.
Too much current on detector filament. (Especially if a gas tube.)

HOOVER URGES RADIO POLICY AND NEW LAWS

Inadequate Personnel to Enforce Present Laws, He Says in Report.

Reiterating his plea for radio legislation made last year, Secretary of Commerce Hoover explains the present radio situation in his annual report and urges Congress to designate someone to handle radio regulation.

"The rapid growth of radio communication makes necessary an affirmative declaration by Congress of a governmental policy in accordance with which the art is to be conducted, and the empowering of some agency to carry that policy into effect," the Secretary states. "This can only be done through an officer with discretionary powers and under the regulations which will be made by him in conformity with the general terms of the law."

Work of revising and simplifying the White bill, which passed the House last session, is known to be under way, and Secretary Hoover believes no opposition will be found when the new bill is presented.

The report states that facilities for the enforcement of the present law are wholly inadequate. There are some 25,000 stations now sending radio messages within our country or along our coasts. The law requires the inspection of all these stations, and if this inspection is to be sufficiently efficient to accomplish results in the character of equipment and prevention of interference it must be performed with reasonable frequency. To inspect these 25,000 stations the department now has a total of 29 men, all that can be employed within the limit of the appropriation. Manifestly, under such a condition, effective inspection is impossible.

"To perform satisfactorily the constantly increasing duties in this branch of the service it is essential that a larger appropriation be provided." Mr. Hoover points out. "Such work as the inspection of ship stations for the safety of life, the inspection of broadcasting stations to prevent interference and permit simultaneous operation, and the inspection of amateur stations to prevent interference with the broadcast listeners and with commercial and ship stations are some of the important duties which should not be neglected."

Of the many services performed by radio, unquestionably the marine service is the most valuable, where it is employed as a life saving device to summon aid in the event of an accident at sea. The radio inspectors of the Department of Commerce are required to give first consideration to the inspection of radio installations on American and foreign vessels clearing from our ports. During the fiscal year 1923, there were 11,295 such clearances and 6936 inspections, as compared with 10,240 clearances and 6071 inspections in 1922. The number of inspections should be increased, it is shown, but to do this, additional men are needed at ports not now covered.

FIVE NEW BROADCASTERS

The following five Class "A" broadcasting stations were licensed by the Department of Commerce last week. They are as follows:

Call.	Station.	Frequency Kcs.	Wave Length. Meters	Power. Watts
KFLX	George Roy Clough, Galveston, Tex.	1250	240	10
WABS	Essex Mfg. Co., Newark, N. J.	1230	244	50
KFLY	Fargo Radio Supply Co., Fargo, N. D.	1300	231	20
WABQ	Haverford College Radio Club, Haverford, Pa.	1150	261	50
WABR	Scott High School, N. W. B. Foley, Toledo, O.	1110	270	50

One Station Transferred From Class C to A.

WLAQ	Arthur S. Schilling, Kalamazoo, Mich.	1060	283	10

For the Notebook.

A dry cell, exposed to heat, loses its electrical energy.

Spaghetti tubing placed over bare wire used in wiring a set will improve the appearance and remove the danger of short circuits.

Always test a coil for continuity after the winding has been completed. This will preclude any possibility of wiring a coil with broken leads into the circuit.

A variable condenser is at maximum capacity when the movable plates are completely within the stationary plates. When the movable plates are not meshed into the fixed plates, the condenser is at minimum capacity.

One Cause of Leakage.

Never let soldering flux get on the terminals of a telephone jack. As soon as this material gets hot, it will run in through the fibre insulation and will make serious leakage at this point. Most soldering flux is more or less of a conductor of high frequency electricity.

Cutting and Washington

Choose your program. Tune out your local station and hunt the air at will. Know the thrill that comes when a slight turn of the dial gives you Atlanta—New York—San Francisco. Enjoy radio.

And you can enjoy radio with a C & W Receiver. No ordinary sets, these, but the product of years of experience—designed by men who have spent their lives building the highest type of professional equipment.

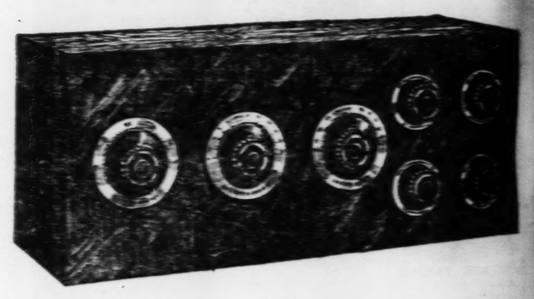
Selective—Dr. Cutting and Mr. Washington tested 132 designs and circuits even on the lowest priced, one-tube set, before they were satisfied with its ability to tune out interfering stations. Owners of C & W Sets state they make their choice of programs—tune out local stations with ease.

Convenient—just test a C & W—operate it. See how the control of the famous Armstrong Regenerative circuit has been simplified. How the "Town and Country" model is instantly changeable from single to double circuit. How simple, sturdy construction insures correct operation.

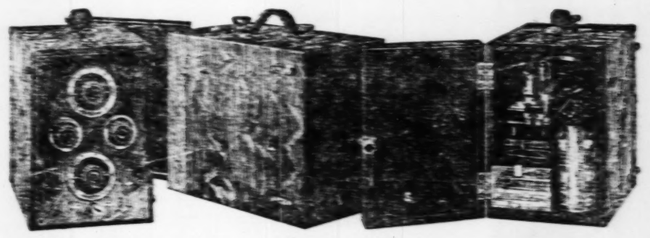
You will never be satisfied with any but the best radio set—the receiver that will GET YOUR STATION if the station is to be had. Choose the best set first—for satisfaction—for economy—for years of pleasure, entertainment and instruction for all the family.

Four Remarkable New Sets for Christmas

The C & W 11B —Standard Model



C & W Standard Model. A 3-tube, double circuit receiver of special C & W design—the model used in C & W selectivity test. Shock-absorbing tube mounts; automatic rheostat switches; handsome cabinet; a receiver of remarkably long range and clear reception; easily operated. Price, complete with dry-cell A Batteries, B Batteries, and 3 UV-199 tubes, all in Cabinet ready to operate.....$160

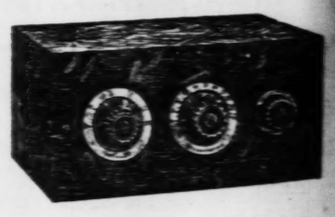


The C & W 12A— Town and Country Receiver

At last Dr. Cutting and Mr. Washington have perfected the complete all-purpose set. "Town & Country" is instantly changeable from a highly selective double circuit receiver for use in your home, to a single circuit set that will operate on any sort of temporary antennae—a wire along the top of your car—across the room of a friend. Portable in type—you can take it with you anywhere. Really two sets in one. Price (complete with 2 UV-199 tubes, 3 LARGE A batteries, B batteries and headphones, ready to operate).....$97.50

The C & W Type 15— Single Tube Receiver

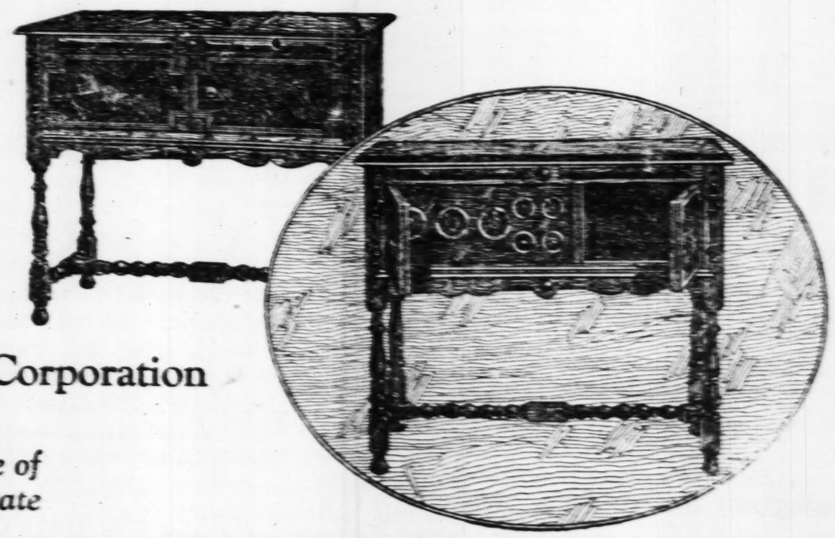
Operates as highly selective, double circuit set on permanent antennae in your home. Instantly changeable to single circuit for temporary antennae—a wire along the top of your car or across a room. A set you can take with you wherever you go. Shock-absorbing tube mount; protects tube and prevents vibration howls. Complete, with 1 UV-199 tube, A battery, B battery, ready to operate.....$50



Special Features of C & W Construction

No vibration howls from C & W Receivers—all tubes are on shock-absorbing mounts. All panels are screened, stopping the squeaks and variations caused by body capacity. Dials are inset under silver finish rings—as exact in their operation as the combination knobs on a safe.

Automatic rheostat switches turn off the batteries with one operation—no battery switches—no jacks—no fan switches. Vernier adjustments wherever necessary—to give you the sharpest, clearest signals from the keen, sharp-tuning circuits. Every set licensed under the famous Armstrong Patent—fully regenerative—admittedly best for radiophone reception.



The New C & W 11D— Console Model

A 4-tube, special C & W double circuit set. Higher selectivity than any other set in its class by actual test. You can choose your program. Completely self-contained—all batteries and Magnavox loud speaker in cabinet. A beautiful furnishing—a really fine instrument that will give you years of pleasure and entertainment. Price, complete with 4 UV-199 tubes; 3-dry-cell A Battery, B Batteries, and Magnavox loud speaker, ready for antenna and ground attachment.....$325

BIG DOWNTOWN TRANSACTIONS AS NEW YEAR

Travelers' Protective As Within Few Days or ding to Cost

By Barry Moore.

The current year from present indications, will close with the execution of a number of noteworthy transactions embracing property in downtown St. Louis, with the prospect in this district for developments on a broad scale in 1926.

The Travelers' Protective Association, with a membership of 20,000, it is understood, will decide within a few days on a site for a distinctive building for this organization.

The southeast corner of Twelfth and Pine streets, owned by the Meyer Real Estate and Investment Co. is the most prominently mentioned in this connection. This site has a frontage on Twelfth street of 48 feet by a depth of 150 feet.

Should this site be selected a conspicuous tower structure, with both hotel accommodations and offices for the association, is contemplated. The cost of the proposed building is estimated at $000,000.

Several other sites in the downtown district are also being given serious consideration for this project.

The business district is already reflecting the stimulus of negotiations for several downtown tracts for business building purposes, notwithstanding the fact that comparatively few of them have taken definite form, but the indications are that the majority of them will culmer or later materialize.

Downtown Station Discussed.

As a constructive proposition, the advantages that would accrue to the city, especially to the retail interests, from a downtown station for suburban trains are again being discussed. During the last 10 years various locations have been suggested as feasible for this project.

The custom house block, extending from Eighth to Ninth and from Olive to Locust streets, according to Henry L. Cornet of the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, forms the most logical location for a downtown suburban station. As has been pointed out before, the availability of this block and commodious building for this enterprise is at once obvious, in view of the Eads Bridge tunnel under Eighth street, with which it could be connected.

The basement of the custom house extends well below the railway tracks of the tunnel, which traverse Eighth street and Washington avenue underground from the Mill Creek Valley to the Eads Bridge. Before the main post-office was established at Eighth and Walnut streets, mail was taken from the Central branch postoffice (formerly the main postoffice) in the custom house at Eighth and Olive streets.

This building, which has a basement of unusual depth and which is constructed of granite, would lend itself to easy conversion for this purpose.

This block would be especially available in connection with [illegible]

BIG DOWNTOWN REALTY TRANSACTIONS IN PROSPECT AS NEW YEAR APPROACHES

Travelers' Protective Association to Decide Within Few Days on Site for Building to Cost $800,000.

By Berry Moore.

The current year from present indications, will close with the execution of a number of noteworthy transactions embracing property in downtown St. Louis, with the prospect in this district for developments on a broad scale in 1924.

The Travelers' Protective Association, with a membership of 120,000, it is understood, will decide within a few days on a site for a distinctive building for this organization.

The southeast corner of Twelfth and Pine streets, owned by the Meyer Real Estate and Investment Co. is the most prominently mentioned in this connection .This site has a frontage on Twelfth street of 61 feet by a depth of 150 feet.

Should this site be selected a conspicuous tower structure, with both hotel accommodations and offices for the association, is contemplated. The cost of the proposed building is estimated at $800,000.

Several other sites in the downtown district are also being given serious consideration for this project.

The business district is already reflecting the stimulus of negotiations for several downtown tracts for business building purposes, notwithstanding the fact that comparatively few of them have taken definite form, but the indications are that the majority of them will sooner or later materialize.

Downtown Station Discussed.

As a constructive proposition, the advantages that would accrue to the city, especially to the retail interests, from a downtown station for suburban trains are again being discussed. During the last 10 years various locations have been exploited as feasible for this project.

The custom house block, extending from Eighth to Ninth and from Olive to Locust streets, according to Henry L. Cornet of the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, forms the most logical location for a downtown suburban station. As has been pointed out before, the availability of this block and commodious building for this enterprise is at once obvious, in view of the Eads bridge tunnel under Eighth street, on which it could be connected. The basement of the custom house extends well below the railway tracks of the tunnel, which passes Eighth street and Washington avenue underground from the Mill Creek Valley to the Eads bridge. Before the main postoffice was established at Eighth and Walnut streets, mail was taken from the Central branch postoffice (formerly the main postoffice) in the custom house at Eighth and Olive streets.

This building, which has a basement of unusual depth and which is constructed of granite, would lend itself to easy conversion for such purposes.

This block would be especially available in connection with trains from the East Side, suburban and otherwise.

Once Considered as Store Site.

Negotiations were pending a year or so ago with the United States Government for the Custom House block, which was desired as a site for a mammoth department store building, projected by clients of Isaac T. Cook & Co. The deal, involving an exchange of properties, however, fell through, owing to the wide diversity of opinion as to values.

The Arcade Building and the Chemical building, occupying, respectively, the southwest and the northeast corners of Eighth and Olive streets, according to Cornet, would be appreciably enhanced in value by a station for suburban trains in the Custom House block, both of which could have subway entrances. The Arcade building was originally planned by the T. P. Barnett Co., architects, with a subway entrance, in anticipation of the incorporation of the Eads bridge tunnel in a big subway system.

TWO DOWNTOWN LEASES MADE BY MARTIN & BREITT

Martin & Breitt report having leased the fifth floor of the building at 709-11 Washington avenue to George N. McKay, proprietor of the Alexandria Studio, which is now located at the southwest corner of Sixth street and Washington avenue. The studio will be opened at the new location about Jan. 1. The lease was made for the Shoe Mart Co. Martin & Breitt represented both parties.

Martin & Breitt also have leased the fifth floor of the building at 803-05 Washington avenue, to Louis Silverman, who is now located at 616-18 Washington avenue. Silverman manufactures ladies' house dresses and bungalow aprons. This floor will give Silverman about three times the floor space he is now using. He will take possession about Jan. 1. The lease was made for the Weil Realty Co. Martin & Breitt represented both parties.

BURROUGHS ADDING MACHINE LEASES NEW QUARTERS

The Burroughs Adding Machine Co., now in the Reserve Bank building, has acquired a lease for 10 years of the entire fifth floor of the Collier building and will take possession Jan. 1. It will combine its office and service departments in this location. John F. Cogswell of the Cornet & Zeibig Trust represented the owners of the property and Martin-Breitt the lessee.

MASON REALTY CO. SELLS PLAZA DISTRICT BUILDING

The new Plaza district reflected activity during the week in the sale of the building at 1516 Pine street by the C. Homer Mason Realty Co. to Henry H. Humphrey, an electrical engineer, who bought for investment. The property was owned by Ida H. Gauss, and the St. Louis Union Trust Co., trustees under the will of Charles F. Gauss. It is occupied by the Peters Eichler Heating Co. The Mason Realty Co. was appointed agent.

JEFFERSON AND FRANKLIN CORNER BUILDING IS SOLD

Abe and Lena Cohen have purchased through John Grether & Co. the store and office building on the northwest corner of Jefferson and Franklin avenues, fronting 78 feet on Franklin with a depth of 149 feet on Jefferson avenue, comprising seven stores and seven offices. The consideration was $50,000. The purchaser was represented by Morris Silverstein.

This property was purchased through John Grether & Co. about a year ago and improved and leased at a large increase in rental and their client now realizes a handsome profit on the investment. The corner and space above the corner was formerly occupied by the Jefferson Bank, which removed from the property, upon the completion of their new building at the northeast corner of Jefferson and Franklin avenues. J. L. Boggiano of John Grether & Co. assisted in the sale.

BULL-SMITH FIRM ACTIVE IN BUILDING OPERATIONS

The construction department of Bull-Smith Realty & Construction Co. has been building continuously for more than a year without interruption. Notable among the more recent projects are the 100-car garage building at Tower Grove and McRee avenues which was completed about three months ago and leased to C. D. Toler for five years. The company sold this building last week. It also announces the completion of a building at 5630 Gravois leased to Hallenberg-Wagner Motor Co., Ford-Lincoln dealers, for five years. This building was put up in less than 90 days. This company uses the truss roof extensively in garage buildings as it eliminates all posts inside of buildings. The Hallenberg-Wagner Co. will formally open its new building this month. The Bull-Smith company recently acquired a lot in the 4400 block on Manchester avenue, which is to be improved with five stores and an automobile sales room, to cost about $60,000.

LOCUST STREET BUILDING LEASED TO AUTO CONCERN

The Gus M. Arendes Realty Co. has affected a lease of 2224 Locust street to the Franklin Motor Car Co. for F. L. Cornwell. The automobile company has needed additional space to care for increased business. Its used car department will be located in this building temporarily.

The building is of fireproof construction and is equipped with ramps instead of elevators, making it one of the most modern auto salesrooms and service stations in the city. It contains 24,000 square feet.

The Gus M. Arendes Realty Co. reports 11 sales during the past week and loans aggregating $40,000.

SALE OF APARTMENT AMONG WEEK'S DEALS

Purchase of Portland Place Residence Another Noteworthy Deal.

Noteworthy sales of the week included the six-story Romayne apartment building at the northwest corner of Union and Delmar boulevards, 19 Portland place and 7312 Westmoreland drive.

The Romayne apartment was sold by Sadie Gibstine, wife of Sam Gibstine, to the Roselyn Investment Co. of which Lillian M. Dye is president, through the Singer-Klein Real Estate Co.

A two-story building at 5920 and 5928 Delmar boulevard, comprising five stores and offices, and a 10-room residence at 6903 Pershing avenue, were transferred in this connection to Mrs. Gibstine, presumably in part payment of the apartment building.

The deal aggregating $400,000, was the most conspicuous of the week. While the amount was not disclosed, the basis of the trade, according to realty circles, represents a large profit on the apartment building, which was purchased only three months ago by Mrs. Gibstine, who returned post haste from Europe in this connection.

This is not the first time Mrs. Gibstine's operations in the real estate field have been vindicated by large profits. Less than a year ago she realized a profit of $50,000 through the sale of a seven-story building at 1511 Washington avenue, to the McElroy-Sloan Shoe Co. for $115,000.

She had purchased the building only a year previously for $65,000 from professional operators who had offered it to the McElroy-Sloan Shoe Co. for $60,000, and who had just acquired it from the Seventeenth Street Realty Co. at a price slightly under these figures. The building in this instance is erected on leased ground, 50x182 feet, which was not included in the transaction.

The Romayne apartment building comprises 10 apartments, each having eight rooms with two baths, and is of steel skeleton concrete construction. It is equipped with two elevators, one an automatic passenger and the other a freight elevator, and is up-to-date in all its appointments. It was sought recently for conversion for an office building for physicians.

George K. Conant purchased 19 Portland place, the home of the late August B. Hart, through the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, representing John A. Hart. The house has 15 rooms and four baths and is sumptuously equipped throughout. The lot is 100x200 feet, including a side drive in connection with a garage for four cars.

The sale of 7312 Westmoreland drive to R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Co., is announced by the Francis-Perry-Ruth Realty Co.

The house, designed by Maritz-Young, architects, is of the Tuscan-Italian style of architecture. The first floor opens on an arcade hall, with living room with timbered ceiling on one side, flagstone floor and large stone fireplace. The breakfast room at the end of the arcade hall is finished after the Italian peasant style. The second floor consists of four large bedrooms with two tile baths, and the third floor forms the servants' quarters. The house occupies a lot of 100 feet on the south side of Westmoreland drive by a depth of 217 feet.

Gurney Court, situated on the north side of Magnolia avenue, east of King's highway and opposite Tower Grove Park, forms an attractive feature of that part of the city.

All the houses in the court proper have been completed except one, and it is nearly done. Each house has seven rooms exclusive of sun room, and front and rear porches, and is set off with a roof of glazed tile, while construction is of matt brick.

The center of the court has a grass plot, beautified with trees and shrubbery. Around this plot the wide street of the court forms a loop.

The land and improvements are valued at more than $400,000, according to the Remmert Construction Co., which laid the court out and built the houses.

M'KERNAN JOINS SALES FORCE OF FRANCISCUS CO.

J. M. McKernan, who has been in the real estate business for more than 20 years, has joined the sales force of the Franciscus Realty Co. He is well known in realty and general business circles.

SITE IN WEST END IS SOLD FOR $45,000

Two-Story Business Structure to Be Erected at King's Highway and Waterman.

A notable purchase of the week was that of the northwest corner of King's highway and Waterman avenue, by the George T. Burdeau Real Estate Co., for $45,000. The lot has 50 feet on King's highway and 185 feet on Waterman, and is occupied by a two-story dwelling which is to be replaced with a two-story building of stores and apartments. Under the Zoning Ordinance the corner was restricted to residences, for which it was not considered desirable.

The price paid by the Burdeau Co. was more than twice that which could have been obtained for the lot under the Zoning law restrictions, according to Burdeau.

The lot opposite on the southwest corner of King's highway and McPherson avenue selected by F. L. Cornwell, attorney, for a ten-story hotel, for which a permit was refused as in violation of the zoning ordinance. This site adjoins that of the Racquet Club and forms one of the most attractive in the West End for a hotel or apartment building on a large scale.

NEW CLOTHING CO. TAKES LEASE ON OLIVE ST. SITE

The Durning-Guthrie, Inc., a new clothing company, specializing in young men's ready-made clothing, has leased the entire second floor at 610 Olive street with show windows at the entrance on the first floor. This firm is composed of Tom Durning and "Jim" Guthrie, who have been in the clothing business for many years, and for the last eight years have managed the Monroe Clothing Co. The company will open for business about Jan. 15. The lease was made for the Manhattan Real Estate Co. Martin & Breitt represented both parties.

DICKMANN COMPANY FINDS REALTY MARKET BRISK

"The activity in all sections," Bernard F. Dickmann, vice-president of the Dickmann Real Estate Co., says "has been surprisingly brisk, and the demand for property of all classes, both for homes and investments, very keen. Usually in the latter part of November and in December there is some falling off on account of the holidays, but this year it has been a healthy, steady market and the 1924 outlook will be better than any years in the history of the business."

The firm reports the following sales: 1013-15 Walton avenue, four-family flat, for Lawrence Maher to Emil Sakowski; 2743 Russell avenue, nine-room residence, for Blanche Bickel to Frank Wetzorff; 2507 Williams place, five-room cottage, for Eleanore Duff to George F. Radell; 52 feet west side of Oregon avenue, to Bertha and Robert G. Darr, who will erect three single flats; 6261 Terry avenue, five-room cottage, for Lon O. Hocker, trustee, to James F. Cody; s. e. corner Thirteenth and Hickory, store and flat building, for Katherine and Lillian Horan to Mary Simon; 3679 De Tonty street, nine-room home, to Edward Winde; 2644 Hickory street, single flat, for Gertrude Meiners to James Mustain; 4142 Glasgow avenue, five-room bungalow, for W. E. Ricketts to William Kralemann; 2366 Lawrence avenue, single flat, for Clarence McCarthy to Florence Wilson; 4215 Hartford street, single flat, for Max Swardlik to Vincent Wolf.

The firm reports loans the past week totaling $92,500.

Corner at Euclid and West Pine Sold.

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. report the sale of 5484 West Pine boulevard, the southeast corner of West Pine and Euclid, for the account of U. H. Downman to Mrs. E. Atlemeier. The residence contains 14 rooms, four baths, hot-water heat and hardwood floors, on a lot 100x213, with brick garage.

The company also sold property, 5126 Cates avenue, 2-family flat, containing six rooms, on lot 30x188, for the account of Jeffe Realty & Investment Co. to Albert M. Yampolsky.

Sale of Mullanphy Lots Proposed.

Sale of eight lots in the 2400 block on Dickson street by the board of commissioners of the Bryan Mullanphy Emigrant and Travelers' Relief Fund to Henry Schlueter for $34,500 is authorized in a bill introduced in the Board of Aldermen yesterday. Action of the Aldermen is necessary before the commissioners can dispose of property under provisions creating the fund.

NOVEMBER BUILDING 19 PCT. ABOVE 1922

F. W. Dodge Corporation's Review of Construction Activity Last Month.

The country's building activities continued their lead over last year through November, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation.

November building contracts in the Central West (Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma) amounted to $67,163,000. This was a decrease of 20 per cent from October, and of 19 per cent from November of last year. Last month's record included: $28,900,000, or 42 per cent, for residential buildings; $14,531,000, or 21 per cent, for public works and utilities; $9,717,000, or 14 per cent for business buildings; $4,634,000, or 7 per cent for industrial plants; and $3,347,000, or 5 per cent, for educational buildings.

Total construction started in this district during the first eleven months of this year has amounted to $945,553,000, a decline of 6 per cent from the corresponding period of last year.

Contemplated new work reported in November amounted to $134,208,000, a decrease of 7 per cent from the amount reported in October.

TALCOTT AND BENEDICT—N. W. COR.

The new Terminal Round House is being built within 10 blocks of this property. This is sure to be desirable railroad property. Let's finish that something that has to be done with. You would be surprised to hear what this speculative property can be bought for, and we can trade for income property. This is your opportunity.

190 FT. FOR DOUBLE FLATS

Just east of Gravois on south side of Loughborough avenue, which is one-half square south of King's highway. This is a very choice location for double flats or modern bungalows and has a very good highway, Loughborough avenue, is a very good street, running from Carondelet Park to Gravois avenue.

NORTH BROADWAY STORES AND FLATS

Affording Broker Bank, 3604-06. Two stores with two 5-room flats above, also two 4-room flats in rear. Altogether rented for $105 per month. Will sell with $2500 cash, and the price is low.

Six North Side Flats

2708-1710-1712 N. 20th street. Five flats of 3 rooms, and one flat of 5 rooms, rentable for $1440 per month and all in first-class condition. All improvements made and paid for. Will sell this on terms. Property reasonable.

BUSINESS INVESTMENT PROPERTY
Fairview and Giles Avs., S. E. Cor.

Opposite New Fanning School, 1½ block west of Grand, 2 blocks north of Gravois. A choice location. Extra wide, built-to-order brick flat above. Everything in first-class condition. Entire building leased for $2,000 per year, and the price will surprise you. This building is well financed and with a few thousand dollars can be handled. Make your idle money work out on this building.

$100 CASH FOR DOUBLE FLAT GROUND

One block west of Tyson, Gove Park, Bell location, S. E. Lot for flat-to-flat. Lot 50x185. Will take back balance of price for the balance, South side of Odell avenue between King's highway and Cleveland street. Our sign is on this lot.

Meramec River Front Property at Valley Park

At Meramec River front, about 60 miles, the best investment possible in this section of real estate. Highly restricted. Five miles. Located on Lackey, Williams Gravel Rock Road to Fenton. Part of property is level, suitable for building, the balance high bluff land. Just the location for club sites. Big demand for lots for week-end cottages. Will make a wonderful subdivision. Price at office.

Ask us about property at Valley Park or on the Meramec River.

ARTISTS' GUILD PRIZE WINNERS ANNOUNCED

Mrs. Katheryn Cherry, Tom P. Barnett, C. A. Gleeson in Group.

The Chamber of Commerce prize of $350 for the best painting of a scene in or near St. Louis was awarded to Mrs. Katheryn Cherry at the annual competition of the St. Louis Artists' Guild, the awards in which were announced at a dinner at the guild hall last night.

Her picture was entitled "The Railroad Yards From the Grand Avenue Bridge," being an impression of the view from the viaduct looking east toward Union Station.

Tom P. Barnett, who is both architect and artist, won the Artists' Guild prize of $300 with his landscape entitled "The Close of Day." The Carl Wimer prize of $100 for the best portrayal of the figure went to C. A. Gleeson. His picture, "The Big Ladle at Scullin," was a study of workmen manipulating a "pour" of molten metal at the plant of the Scullin Steel Co.

Other awards were: Biggest Spot Memorial Prize to Mildred Bolk Carpenter for seven water colors; Edward Mallinckrodt Prize to C. F. Quest for water color, $75; prize of $50 by the same donor for best portrait to William Chesley Nocnan Kociar prize to William Bauer for landscape, $50; Frederick Oakes Sylvester prize, donated by W. K. Bixby, to Victor S. Hom for sculptured tablet, $50; Halsey C. Ives prize, by same donor, to J. J. Eppesteiner for landscape, $100; Tom P. Barnett prize for best work by artist not yet a winner of Artists' Guild award, to Philip A. Gronemeyer for a landscape, $50; Thomas W. Fry prize, to George Magnuolo for a landscape, $50. Honorable mention was given Heinz Warneckke's "Salide" and Faun" entered in the competition for sculpture.

The judges were Miss Alice Schille, a painter of Columbus, O.; Leopold Seyfert, painter, and Albin Polasek, a sculptor, both of Chicago.

PAVLOWA DRAWS THREE BIG CROWDS AT ODEON

Dance Performances Notable for Imagination, Taste and Technical Skill.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

THEATER managers who complain of public indifference might derive a lesson from the three remarkably large audiences which attended the Odeon Friday night and yesterday afternoon and evening. Those with an eye for the fine points of production found incessant refreshment in the performances of Mme. Anna Pavlowa and her corps of mimes and dancers. More intelligence was employed in these productions than will be used in all the musical comedies and revues to be seen here in the next five years.

There are costumes which say the last word in sumptuous color and design, but never have an air of being displayed for their own sake. They keep their place as embellishments of ideas. There are settings astonishingly inventive in pattern and hue, but they are never permitted to overwhelm the action. These productions have approached perfection in polish, elaboration of detail and technical art.

The principal defect was a small and mediocre orchestra. Another flaw was the inartistic penchant, afflicting the whole troupe from Mme. Pavlowa down, for interrupting the action to bow a response to applause. Nevertheless, the performances had the high merits of worthy subject matter, imagination, spirit and an extraordinary general virtuosity.

It is possible that Mme. Pavlowa no longer can command the perfection of technique signalizing her younger years. Yesterday afternoon, at least, she was observed to hold certain bravura poses, in pivoting and balancing, for only a moment, in a way to make one think of a coloratura soprano who just touches high E and drops it like a hot coal. But she is still the most exquisitely graceful creature imaginable; her lovely hands are lyric, and her arms are melodious.

Beauty of "Autumn Leaves."

The feature of last night's program was a ballet, new to this city, called "Autumn Leaves." It was devised by Mme. Pavlowa, and set to music of Chopin. The scene was a garden, bathed in the mellow golden light of fall. Leaves sifted down from the trees. A band of girls, their tresses sere and russet with autumn, fluttered like leaves on their stems.

Then came the savage North Wind, and with his blast tore them away and sent them swirling through the air, flying here and there, until they fell in a line upon the earth. A chrysanthemum (Mme. Pavlowa) was rudely stripped of its petals and cast to the ground. A pitying poet raised the dying flower for a moment, but abandoned it for a bloom which had escaped the wind. The audience delighted in the little piece for its poetic conception and impeccable taste of execution.

Another new bit was a pas seul danced by Mme. Pavlowa, under the title of "California Poppy." The ballerina's waist was encircled by petals of gold and scarlet, which she closed like a cup over her face when night fell. The idea was simple, but its expression was a masterpiece of fragrant art.

The Bird-Princess.

The star also appeared as the Enchanted Bird Princess in a new ballet, "Old Russian Folklore." It told the story of a bored old King who could not be amused until a sorcerer invoked a creature half bird and half-woman, bound by a magic spell. This was performed with uncommon grace, and with touches of delicate comedy. The costumes were resplendent.

Among the seven divertissements concluding the evening may be mentioned Laurent Novikoff's "Bow and Arrow Dance," "Scene Dansante," to Boccherini's Minuet, by Mlle. Butsova and M. Pianowski; and a new version, enlisting the entire company, of the "Dance of the Hours," in Ponchielli's "La Gioconda."

MRS. RAYMOND KOCH SUES

Mrs. Anita Doyle Koch yesterday filed suit to divorce Raymond Koch, a professional musician. They were married April 9, 1917, and separated Oct. 3, last. The petition states Koch told his wife that their marriage interfered with his ambition and success as a musician. She asks for custody of a child and alimony.

A. C. — The President of the United States can serve as many terms as the people elect him to be president. (2) Mrs. Maxine Dempsey is divorced from Jack Dempsey. She was Maxine Wayne before her marriage.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

MADAM X.—If you own the policy and have paid the premiums on it you can collect under the policy even though you have now been divorced from your husband.

THANKS.—You can get complete information by inquiring in the office, in the Old Custom House, Third and Olive streets.

H. J. C.—Whether a company would pay the agent's renewal would depend upon the agent's contract with the insurance company. We know of no law in this state which would affect it.

STEADY READER. — You can sue them on the note and get judgment, but you cannot then garnish their wages and levy on their property as far as it exceeds the state exemptions.

JAS. M. 4.—As the law provides that he cannot be naturalized unless he can speak English, he might try going to night schools. You might take him down to the Naturalization office now, and ask them to advise you further.

SMITH.—If both parties died without wills, and if the land in Illinois was owned by the first wife alone, and not jointly with her husband, the second wife would be entitled to a one-third share of the property, on the death of the husband.

L. LANG.—In Illinois you can now terminate the tenancy by 30 days' notice in writing, and you can collect rent for all the time that they remain in possession, and double rent for the time that they remain after the end of the notice period.

VINCENT.—There is no particular form required for a notice of an increase in rent, but the tenant does not have to pay the increased rent, unless he agrees to do so. If the tenant refuses to pay, then the landlord can give him notice to vacate, if he wishes to do so.

INQUISITIVE. — Your information apparently is incorrect. Driving lessons during the rush time cannot be destroyed. If she moved from the place it would cease to be her homestead. It would be desirable for her, or someone in her interest to consult a lawyer before anything is done.

HOME OWNER. — The original abstract of title is not a part of the property and does not go with the property unless it is specifically agreed to furnish it. The only way for you to get the abstract from the title company will be to buy it, or a copy of it from them. This would be less expensive than having a new abstract made.

A. N. S.—The beneficiary under the policy must be some one who has what is called an "insurable interest" in your life. If the employee is a creditor of yours, or if he would suffer any loss directly or indirectly as a result of your death, he can be made the beneficiary, even though he is not related to you.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

ROSE. — No intelligent answer could be given in such a case without an examination. Evidently the condition has no relation to the pneumonia.

M. G.—(1) By blood pressure is meant the amount of resistance offered to the passage of the blood through the arteries. (2) Blood pressure is measured by degrees. (3) See number 1. (4) It is caused (abnormal pressure) by some disturbance of functional or organic nature. (5) The remedy is the correction, if possible, of the cause. Blood pressure may be caused by chronic or organic trouble. (7) It does not affect the age. (8) The symptoms are the symptoms of the cause. Read "Determination of Blood Pressure Simplified," published by Medical Department, Taylor Co., Rochester, N. Y.

YOUNG MOTHER.—Your baby at birth, if the weight you give is correct, was exceptionally large and fine. It should gain if it has been satisfactory. Constipation is rare in breast-fed infants if the milk is good. When it is low in fat and high in proteids, constipation is not uncommon. Very often it is caused by insufficient muscular contraction in the intestines, or it may be caused by a diminished secretion of the intestinal glands, or of the liver. We advise you, if you are unable to pay, to take the baby to one of the child welfare clinics and be advised. Once a week will be all the time necessary unless some exceptional condition is present.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our relatives and friends for the kindness and sympathy shown us during the illness and death of our dear mother, Mrs. Hennrietta Wehmeier. We especially wish to thank the Rev. Jahn for words of consolation spoken at the funeral and the Beiderwieden undertaker for services rendered.

THE BEREAVED CHILDREN.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our relatives, friends and acquaintances for their sympathy and beautiful floral offerings during our recent bereavement by the death of my beloved husband, our dear father, father-in-law, and grandfather, Edward F. C. Bewig. Special thanks to Rev. H. Walser and the pallbearers and Ziegenhein Bro. Undertaking Co. for the efficient service.

BEWIG FAMILY.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our relatives and friends for the sympathy and kindness shown in the sad bereavement in the loss of our dear husband, our brother, brother-in-law, father-in-law and uncle, Wm. F. Leist; we wish to thank Rev. Leibner for his consoling words in his sermon; also Rising Sun Council No. 32, J. of P. American Lodge No. 186, K of P.; American Lodge No. 8, O. M. P.; also the employes of the Home Cotton Mills, also the beautiful floral offerings. Also Mr. E. Wacker for his kind and efficient service.

—TO—

Those who want a certain make car—but are not financially able to buy it new—we suggest that they look over the fine assortment we have.

These cars are on display in our heated used car showroom, protected from the weather—and not on vacant lots, left standing out day and night in all kinds of weather, so the tops, upholstery and paint are ruined. Our used cars are too good for that.

When the Daughter of Boreas Gets Out Her Powder Puff, Then the Snow Flakes Fall

—From a Drawing by W. A. Byrnes

They Faced Death For 30 Hours in Sunken Submarine

Then—a blinding flash of eerie, blue light and a frightful crash and boom. The steel vault trembled. The batteries in the next compartment had exploded. But the heavy glass pane in the door was not broken.

Without food or water, menaced by an explosion and fire in adjoining compartment and tormented by air pressure, Henry Breault and Lawrence Brown missed death by the narrowest margin when a steamer rammed the U. S. Navy's underwater craft, O-5—Even more spectacular was the escape of Charles R. Butler, although he was shot out of the water, head foremost, only nine minutes after boat went to the bottom :: ::

FOR big thrills, and strangely garbed tragedy, no recent tale of disaster surpasses the ramming and sinking of the U. S. Navy's submarine, O-5, off Panama a few weeks ago. Most of her crew escaped without great difficulty and merely at the price of swimming about until they were picked up by lifeboats.

But there were men who went down with the disabled craft—down, down, through 40 feet of the swirling, pitiless water until she came to rest on the bottom. Trapped like rats they were, and they knew that hours must elapse before the O-5 could be raised to the sunlight, fresh air and safety of the surface.

As it turned out, almost a day and a half was to pass with leaden feet ere the helpless submarine, with her stove-in side, could be rescued. Some of the men died—trapped like rats they may have been, but they met their end like men. Others, with more luck, showed a cool courage and an undaunted resourcefulness in their desperate plight which deserve to be remembered.

Here is the story of the disaster, the perils which thronged about those undaunted navy men, and the outcome of it all.

At sunrise the O-5, running with her deck awash, slid out into Limon Bay, which lies east of the Atlantic opening of the Panama Canal. She was bound for diving maneuvers. A heavy fog hung upon the water.

Suddenly, a dark mass loomed up through the haze. A ship, and almost upon the comparatively little submarine! It was the steamer Abangarez of the United Fruit Co. The officer on the O-5's deck shouted hasty commands. Men rushed up from below. The submarine changed her course, but the oncoming merchantman was moving too swiftly. The O-5 could not avoid the crash.

"Close the torpedo room door!" was the next command, as the officer ordered the compartments shut. With these air chambers sealed the craft might float, even with a hole in her side.

A figure darted to the forward hatch—Henry Breault, the torpedo dispatcher. Down the hatch he flung himself, to the torpedo room. In the dim light he could see a man sleeping on a cot. It was Lawrence Brown, electrician's mate. Breault quickly aroused the slumberer.

Just then came a heavy impact against the submarine, and both men went sprawling to the floor. The boat staggered, lurched and swung over onto one side. Water was pouring down the hatchway and into the torpedo room.

The two men struggled to the door. They would not be able to make their way up against the downrush of water. But they could force shut the door in front of them, and at least postpone their drowning. They did so. Already a foot of water lay at the lower slope of the floor. They scrambled to the upper slope and, by clinging to a stanchion, kept out of the water.

The bow of the towering merchantman had rammed the submarine amidships. Her plates had been wrenched apart, and water was flooding in through large gaps. Listing still farther, the O-5 began to settle. From the slanting deck 24 officers and men leaped into the sea and swam. The steamer lowered lifeboats to rescue them.

That leaves six men to be accounted for, the total crew having numbered 30. Breault and Brown were in the torpedo room, as stated above. What of the other four? Somewhere in the intricate vitals of the submarine were Clyde Hughes, motor machinist's mate; Thomas Hetzler, fireman, and Fred Smith, mess attendant and Panamanian by birth. They struggled bravely against the water which flooded through the gaping holes and down the hatchways. But there wasn't a chance for them, and they died.

The sixth of these men who went down with their ship was Charles R. Butler, chief machinist's mate. When the crash came he was at the throttle, in the engine room, and the impact threw him to the floor. His battle for life was on the steep, spiral stairway to the aft hatch.

Running to the gangway, he scampered up and was near the top when a torrent of water through the pipelike hatchway knocked him tumbling back. He regained his feet and climbed up again, but once more the rush of water beating on the narrow iron stairway flung him back, and now into the rising water. Another attempt, and for the third time he was thrown back.

The surging water engulfed Butler. He struck out with frantic swimming strokes, bumping against metal bars and walls. In a moment his head was clear of the water, and he could breathe again. This portion of the craft had filled with water, but a pocket had formed at the top. Gasping, he groped for support and sustained himself on iron beams.

Butler knew the O-5 well. She had listed, he saw, in such a way that the air pocket had formed just beside the hatchway. The pressure in the pocket was increasingly oppressive, as the craft slowly sank. Now there was a slight shock, as she settled on the bottom. Butler's head seemed to be bursting, his thoughts were confused. He could not live in this strangely provided nook for more than a few minutes. Delirium and death had come very near. He summoned all his strength for a last effort.

With the air pocket located just beside the hatchway, a dive into the water beneath him and a few under-water strokes might enable him to rise through the hatchway and then fight his way to the surface. How deep the water might be—here he could not even guess. The weight of the water might crush him, squeeze out the last spark of life, but it was his only chance.

Quickly Butler threw off his clothes and mapped out in his mind the exact position of the hatch opening, with the desperate intensity of a man who stakes his life on his guess. Letting himself down into the water, he beat his way still farther down and in the direction where he believed the hatch to be. Then he swam upward—and his head struck sharply against an obstacle!

Groping wildly with his hands, in a moment he knew that he had struck the hatch cover. The hatch was only half open. Trapped in a sunken boat at the bottom of the sea, this hardy sailorman made one more supreme effort. Desperately in need of breath, there in the darkness and the water, with a mad wrench he slid the hatch cover fully open.

But now a weird force, something which he had not foreseen, took a hand in the game. The margin of the air pocket had been near the edge of the half-open hatch cover. With the cover pushed quite open, a great mass of the heavily compressed air was released. It shot upward. It caught Butler's body in its fantastic grip and swirled him, shot him like a missile toward the surface. He was twisted by the blast, straightened out and propelled upward head foremost.

Nine minutes after the O-5 had gone down the survivors in boats and people on the steamer Abangarez beheld a vast bubbling of the water and then a man rose out of the turmoil, upright and as though flung out of the sea by some demoniac power. Up he went until his feet were out of the water. Then he fell back, swimming. By his own courage, and a strange chain of circumstances, Butler had been saved from death.

Meanwhile, what was happening in the torpedo room of the O-5, now motionless on the ocean bed? The two youths, Breault and Brown, clung to their places at the upper slope of the floor—and waited. After 30 seconds the light went out. The water had gotten into the battery. But Breault had in his pocket a flash lamp and now and then he would send a narrow white beam through the utter darkness.

They thought of the torpedo tube. They had heard of men shooting themselves out of torpedo tubes and rising to the surface of the water. It was said that prisoners in the holds of battleships had released themselves in that way. A torpedo is merely pushed out into the water by compressed air. A man could lie in the tube and, by hunching up his knees, fill it sufficiently for the pressure of the packed air to thrust him into the water.

Breault inspected the torpedo-discharging apparatus. Everything was workable. Boats would be lying on the surface to make rescues, and there was only a small chance of their striking their heads against a boat bottom, being stunned and drowning. Breault, the torpedo dispatcher, could propel his comrade out and then, with his practiced knowledge, do the same for himself.

But the gauge in the torpedo room showed that

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.

A SCIENTIFICALLY planned effort to teach two young chimpanzees to talk will be made at Washington, D. C., by Dr. Robert M. Yerkes, the distinguished psychologist and expert on animal behavior, who is associated with the National Research Council. There is nothing faddish or sensational about the attempt. It is a serious professional experiment, and important results are hoped from it.

Among the significant problems which Dr. Yerkes desires to illuminate are the following:

Can apes be taught to talk? At what point do they cease imitating and begin reasoning? How extensive is their ability to draw a conclusion from a set of circumstances? What similarity exists between the motives of children and apes? What undiscovered incentives are latent in the minds of apes and children? Can the results of training be transmitted to offspring?

To be sure, he does not expect his pets to solve all these scientific puzzles, but he hopes they may shed light on some of them.

The apes were presented to Dr. Yerkes about four months ago. At first he named them "Adam" and "Eve," but, as this seemed rather romantic nomenclature for anthropological specimens, he changed it to "Chim" and "Panzee." "Chim" is a black-face from the Belgian Congo, weighs 20 pounds and is about 14 months old. "Panzee" came from British West Africa, and although she is about 20 months old, is somewhat smaller than her mate. Moreover, she is noticeably less intelligent, although this does not indicate as a rule that the female of the species is more stupid than the male. She is merely the occasional dumbbell, the inevitable "Daicy" common to all species, the human included.

While chimpanzees imitate many human actions with marvelous aptitude, nobody has ever been able to teach one to imitate a human sound. Dr. Yerkes will try not merely to induce them to imitate a sound, but to associate it with a particular idea. In short, to teach them to talk. He explained his method as follows:

"Because food is one of the primary concerns of animals, I shall begin by trying to teach these apes to associate a certain sound with a certain food. I know of nothing which a chimpanzee likes better than bananas. They are his favorite dish. Therefore, every day at a certain time, and under uniform conditions, I shall make a certain simple sound in their presence, repeating it many times, and follow that by giving them bananas.

"I hope that, eventually, one of them will volunteer the sound in an effort to make the bananas appear. In other words, I hope they will 'ask' for the bananas.

"If one of them ever learns to do that, the chances are that it will quickly learn to 'ask' for other things. Once an ape gets an idea he works it hard. Furthermore, if one learns to do this, it is quite likely that others will follow suit. They are quick to perceive the advantages that flow from a certain line of conduct.

"If they do learn to make certain sounds for the purpose of getting certain things associated with those sounds, then, in a very primitive sense, they will have learned to talk. From that we would be able to determine, with approximate accuracy, to what extent their actions resulted from 'reflection.'"

"What you are trying to do, then," suggested the writer, "is to teach them to say: 'Yes, we have no bananas.'"

"That's about it," laughed the scientist. "The language, of course, will be very simple. As a matter of fact, I have not finally decided what sound to use in connection with the bananas. It must be a sound which we know apes capable of making, and probably will consist of one consonant and one vowel. Chimpansees make most of our vowel sounds."

"Do they have a language of their own already?"

Dr. Robert M. Yerkes and his two chimpanzees, in a recent photograph made at Washington. "Panzee" is at the left. —Copyrighted by National Photo.

"It has been pretty conclusively shown," replied Dr. Yerkes, "that they make certain sounds under certain conditions, and that they make them for the purpose of conveying specific meanings to other chimpansees. Garner declared that their vocabulary included a dozen distinct sounds, and even said he could talk to them in their own language and make himself understood by them.

"Information on that subject is rather uncertain and inconclusive. I believe, however, that they do make some half-dozen sounds which convey specific meanings."

"If it were found possible to teach these apes to talk, and to prolong the teaching through several generations, would there be a marked development of intelligence in the strain?" asked the writer. "Is it likely that succeeding generations would acquire larger vocabularies, and that the strain could be brought, eventually, to something approaching primitive human intelligence?"

"That," said Dr. Yerkes, "involves one of the largest unsettled questions in the whole science of evolution. It never has been conclusively proven that acquired traits of behavior can be transmitted. To establish that would clear up a lot of unsettled questions. Because of the difficulty of keeping and breeding them, and because of the slowness with which they mature, apes are rather poor specimens with which to make that experiment.

"But you may be sure that if one of these chimpansees learns to talk, every effort will be made to discover whether any trace of the training is transmitted."

In this connection he mentioned the experiment now being conducted in Petrograd by the distinguished Russian physiologist, Ivan Pawlow. Pawlow taught mice to answer a bell. The first generation to receive training responded to the bell after 300 lessons. Succeeding generations required fewer lessons, and Pawlow recently announced that the fifth generation had responded after five lessons.

"Unless there is some serious flaw in the method, the results certainly indicate that implanted behavior can be transmitted to offspring," said Dr. Yerkes. "Pawlow's standing is above suspicion, and his announcement is nothing less than sensational. If, within a few more generations, this strain of mice responds to the bell without any training, or even after one lesson, it will have to be taken as rather conclusive proof that implanted behavior has been transmitted. Of course, before the results are finally accepted there must be a careful check for possible errors in the method."

In his present experiment Dr. Yerkes is not moved by a mere kindly impulse to teach chimpanzees to lead more cultured lives, nor to improve the mental state of their posterity. His concern is for human education. By observing the actions of apes under calculated conditions, he hopes to discover hidden recesses in the minds of human children. He said:

"I am convinced that experimentation of this sort can throw much light upon the value of the educational systems now employed in the lower grades in our schools. Because of the close relationship between anthropoids and man, it is more than likely that a considerable similarity exists between the incentives of young apes and young children. I do not think much can be learned from mature apes.

"Our present educational system for children is

New Tricks of Merchants Who

In this fire-setting device the candle had been lighted at 6 p. m., when the proprietor of a New York City store closed his door and went home. The base was the shallow, round top from a butter tub, filled with cotton wool soaked in oil. When the candle set off the cotton wool there would be a considerable flame, which would heat the gasoline in the little bladders of thin rubber, attached to the uprights. Presently the bladders would burst, and throw the flaming gasoline to all parts of the room. The explosion would have come between 3 and 4 a. m., but a nightwatchman made an unexpected call and exposed the plot.

Shopkeepers, setting fire to their own stores so as to cheat insurance companies or creditors, use great ingenuity in combating the warfare against arson —It requires cleverness, in these days — Incendiary devices which will leave no evidence of crime are their goal—Narrow escape of a family in building which grocer attempted to burn—The firing apparatus employed by a New York City tradesman — And the man who trained cats to start conflagrations :: :: :: ::

THE near approach of the Christmas season is just the time to divulge certain little-known information about fires, says an investigator. He does not mean the leaping flames of the Yule log, nor the sparks which now and then ruin a Christmas tree or ignite the white cotton whiskers and red costume of a luckless Santa Claus.

The fires to which the investigator alludes are those set by secret hands so that a fraud may be perpetrated—in short, arson. The merry Christmastide and incendiarism — what connection can exist between two such opposite poles of morality?

Why the days or weeks just after the greatest anniversary in the Christian calendar are the favorite season for "profitable" fires in stores can be told in few words, as follows:

The holiday trade is over. The best goods have been turned into cash. On the shelves stand many empty boxes. Just a little fixing of the books, a little gasoline, a little arson bomb—and woe to the hoodwinked, swindled and victimized creditors and insurers of that merchant.

The law, of course, provides severe penalties for persons convicted of arson. To carry out their crimes in such a manner that there will be no evidence against them is the chief concern of fire setters. Either the means employed for starting the fire must be entirely consumed in the subsequent blaze, or they must consist of articles and arrangements not necessarily of criminal aspect, should fire fighters or other persons come upon the scene prematurely. And the persons interested in the insurance must be demonstrably far away when the blaze breaks out.

The ingenuities of means and methods used by these "dealers in blazes" are described by Edward H. Smith in the December number of the Scientific American. Most readers will agree that so much cleverness, if directed into proper channels, would have brought large profits to the men who found crookedness the easiest way.

It should be remembered, though, that dishonest fires form only a minority in the annual total. For a merchant to have a fire subjects him to mistrust only if there is something suspicious in his financial circumstances, or in his past. As everybody knows, fires occur not only in stores but in residences where there is no insurance—carelessness, forgetfulness, stupidity, defective wiring or any of a hundred different things may cause a fire.

Before going into a description of some of the most interesting means which "dealers in blazes" actually have employed, often in reckless disregard of the lives and property of others, it should be noted in passing that America is worse afflicted with fire losses than any other Western land.

Considering the steps which have been taken for safety, such as new buildings with little or no inflammable material, automatic alarm systems and sprinkler systems, special insulation for electric wires, steel, glass and porcelain office furniture, very efficient fire departments and salvage organizations, this is rather remarkable. And especially when one brings to mind the old cities of Europe, with their narrow, cluttered streets, their lack of fire-fighting apparatus and their ancient structures.

As to why fires are so prevalent in America, authorities disagree. But there is a tremendous struggle in progress, between destructive fire and the agencies of defense and preservation. In this effort to reduce the loss, fire insurance companies naturally have taken a leading part.

The firebug is no new figure in crime, nor is the device of overinsuring property or removing goods upon which money is owed and then applying the match. Arson must be almost as old as insuring, which is not much younger than trading. Leaving out the services of the ancient guilds, it can be stated that commercialised fire insurance sprang up in England after the great London fire, 1666. Often and often has an old ship been sunk at sea, so that her owners might collect the insurance.

A device used recently by fire setters in a New York City store was found intact when a night watchman made an unexpected call and found the apparatus before it had had time to do its work. But it was on the job and would have started the intended fire, if left alone.

The shallow round top from a butter tub, with its inch-deep saucer, had been filled with cotton wool that was thoroughly soaked in oil. At the center of this inflammable material stood a short piece of candle, steadily burning when the discovery was made.

To the outer edge of the butter-tub's top had been tacked a dozen little upright pieces of wood, the top of each supporting a small bladder of very thin rubber. Every bladder was filled with five or six ounces of gasoline, and tied securely. (Similar fire machines have been found in which one or two cow's bladders were used, each containing three or four quarts of gasoline.)

The candle had been cut to a length which would burn for nine or ten hours before reaching the oil-soaked cotton wool. It had been lighted at 6 p. m., when the proprietor of the shop closed his door and went home for the night. Then the flame of the candle was due to ignite the cotton wool between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning.

The theory of this arson mechanism is simple enough. As soon as the candle flame set off the cotton wool, there would be a considerable flame. This would heat the gasoline in the little bladders. Presently the expanding gasoline would burst the bladders and be thrown, flaming, to all parts of the room. Fire would thus break up in a dozen places at once, and the explosion and fire surely would destroy all traces of the mechanism.

But to make sure of success, the floor had been soaked with gasoline at various points, and the part of the room where the fire-setting device had been draped with kimonos, lace curtains and other material which would be easily ignited.

In this single case the firebug failed. But in how many other attempts of the same kind have fire setters succeeded?

An even more carefully planned attempt, and one which imperiled the lives of an innocent family, occurred not long ago in an upstate town of New York. There an Italian grocer and general merchant had his store in the ground floor of a frame building. An outside stairway ran to the second floor, where a Syrian artist lived with his wife and children.

In the basement was an old-fashioned hot-air furnace, the pipes from which ran to registers on the first and the second floors, serving both the grocery store and the living quarters of the Italian family.

Shortly after 11 p. m., on a cold night last winter, the Syrian's wife awoke from sound sleep and smelled a strong odor of gasoline. For a few minutes she hesitated, but as the odor grew stronger she quickly dressed and started out to find her husband, who was at a lodge meeting two or three blocks away.

Just as the woman opened the door, her husband came in, and recoiled at the strong odor of gasoline which smote his nostrils. Going downstairs immediately, and not without some suspicion, he found his way into the grocery store. As he did so, he saw a shadowy figure retreat to the alley and drive away in an auto, which had been parked close by with its lamps unlighted.

Inside the store the Syrian found a five-gallon water cooler standing on a shelf, with the spigot turned slightly open, so that the contents trickled out, drop by drop. Underneath were piled two cases of parlor matches, with a gross of large boxes in each. The matches already swam in the gasoline dripping from the water cooler. In the center of the floor stood two galvanized tubs, half filled with gasoline.

The Syrian, tense at the thought of what his family had escaped, turned off the faucet of the water cooler, opened doors and windows to allow the fumes of the gas and hastened to the Italian's home, some distance away. There he found a celebration in progress. The Italian's baby son was being christened, and guests at the party included the Chief of Police, some other city officials and several politicians among whom the grocer ranked himself.

are Really "Dealers in Blazes"

With emotions which can easily be imagined, the Syrian informed the grocer of what he had seen in the store. But there were no apologies forthcoming. Instead, the grocer tried to put him off. At first the Italian said that the thing could be of no importance, and that he would not leave his baby's christening party just because a little oil was leaking. Then he said the keys to the store had been given to a small child to play with and that they had been lost. So somebody must have found the keys, and entered the store.

Finally, the angry Syrian appealed to the Chief of Police, and the official decided that his public duty was of more importance than his social obligations. Leaving the festivities at which he was a guest, the Chief went to the store and saw the saturated matches, the water cooler still half full of gasoline, the tubs of gasoline on the floor.

All these arrangements had been made in the expectation that the furnace in the basement would cause a conflagration as soon as enough gasoline from the water cooler had dripped through the floor and formed a gas. But to make doubly sure, the grocer had sent his brother to throw some bits of burning stuff into the store. This was the man who had slunk away as the Syrian forced his way inside. Undoubtedly, if the family upstairs had been in their beds when the crash came they would have been blown to kingdom come. The plotters now are in the penitentiary.

Among the most ingenious schemes which have been used to start fires without leaving evidence of a planned conflagration is one which involved the training of animals.

For many of the facts relating to this and other types of arson and credit frauds the law-abiding public are indebted to C. D. West, now chief investigator for the National Association of Credit Men, and formerly investigator for the St. Louis Association of Credit Men. Mr. West, an energetic and fearless man of medium size, possessing keen intelligence and untiring persistence, has many friends in St. Louis.

Not many years ago a shoe dealer on the boardwalk at Atlantic City disappeared, and with him a large stock of costly merchandise. West was sent to do what he could toward finding the man and his wares. Of the intent to defraud creditors there was no doubt. Among the few papers which had been left behind by the vanished merchant was a bill for a dozen animal satchels.

West could not imagine what place there was in a smart shoe shop for animal satchels. Such articles usually are carried by a sporting goods store. Presently he discovered that the satchels had been reshipped to a man of the same name as that of the shoe merchant, in a small Pennsylvania town. Hurrying thither, West ascertained that the recipient of the animal satchels was in fact the father of the Atlantic City shoe man.

The elder Schwartz—that was not the real name, but will serve here as well as any—had himself been a merchant, had undergone several fires which were disastrous to the insurance companies and finally had retired. Then the son had entered the mercantile field, and his disappearance from Atlantic City followed.

At once, West made up his mind that both father and son were rogues. Hence the old man must be approached with caution, and West began his work by asking prudent questions among the elder Schwartz's neighbors. Thus he learned that Schwartz was supposed to be an animal trainer. The man's past disputed such a supposition, the shipment of animal satchels confirmed it.

Here was a mystery, and West determined to get at the bottom of it.

The investigator went away from the town, and stayed away for a time. Then he returned, in the guise of a circus man, in which character he called on old Schwartz and was very coldly received. But West managed to force his way into the house—a thing rendered possible only by the feebleness of the old man.

In the kitchen of Schwartz's house West found a specially fitted gas jet over a small table, and on the table two cats were dozing. As West entered the room, one of the cats got up, arched her back lazily, lifted a paw and pulled the short chain of the gas tap, lighting the mantle from a small pilot. This kind of gas-lighting apparatus is familiar to almost everyone.

"West needed to know no more," relates Smith. "He understood that old Schwartz was training cats for arson. A merchant who wanted a fire bought one of the cats and had a gas jet rigged in his shop, preferably in the basement. A little pilot, which burned day and night, set off an ordinary gas tip. The cat had her table just under this device and amused herself by playing with the chain, turning the flame up and down as old Schwartz had taught her.

"Then came the night of disaster. The merchant removed the tip from the gas jet and when pussy pulled the chain a great flame sprang up, igniting inflammables which had been arranged above it and quickly bringing about a conflagration in which the innocent cat herself was destroyed.

The proprietor took the merchandise out of the shipping cases received at his store in one town of Wyoming, repacked the boxes with oil-soaked excelsior and large stones, and then shipped these boxes and their worthless contents to his store in another town.

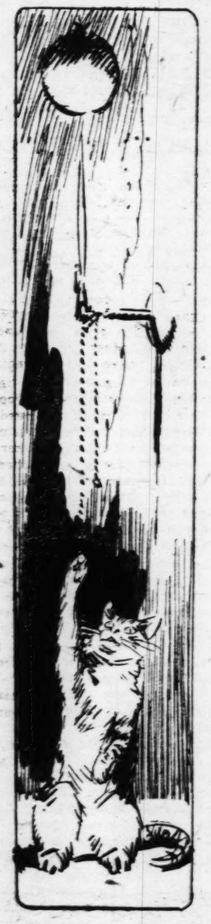
"It is pleasant to relate that Schwartz and his son were both sent to prison for long terms. But other times, other cats and other trainers."

In the contest between the agencies of society—the defenders of law—on the one hand, and the lawbreakers on the other hand, there has developed a regular technique of fire setting. This is illustrated by the case of Hyman Marks, general merchant and adventurer in blazes.

A year ago Marks opened up a dry goods and notions store at Blank, Wyo. Writing to Eastern jobbers, and telling them what an honest man he was, he inclosed an order for goods in each letter. He promised payment at a certain time, if the goods were shipped to him. Many of the firms were glad to get a little new business and their credit men decided to take a chance, especially as the orders were small.

Altogether, he had obtained a considerable amount of merchandise on credit and for it, at the end of 30 days, he paid promptly. With the checks he sent larger orders for goods, and the Eastern firms did not hesitate to fill them. His second payments were made with equal promptness, and at the same time he ordered still larger amounts of goods. It is an old, old way of working up a line of credit.

But Marks had varied the old game by opening up a second store at Where, Wyo. He wrote to the jobbers, explaining that while business was good at his original store, the second establishment would provide a new outlet and enable him to reach a new body of buyers. However, he would continue to do all his buying through the first and original store. And herewith he inclosed the largest orders yet. The jobbers put him down as an intelligent and progressive man and sent him the goods.



"The merchant had removed the tip from the gas jet, and when pussy pulled the chain a great flame sprang up, igniting inflammables which had been arranged above it and quickly bringing about a conflagration in which the innocent cat herself was destroyed."

Then the plot began to thicken. Marks took the merchandise out of the shipping cases received at his Blank store, repacked the boxes with oil-soaked excelsior and large stones and shipped these worthless boxes to his store at Where. Now he made a display, of all his real merchandise and of the boxes stuffed with excelsior and stones, in the store at Where and obtained $15,000 worth of fire insurance. As soon as the premium had been paid, he was ready for the next move.

Then Marks shipped back to his store at Blank whatever valuable stuff there had been in his Where establishment. Secretly, he stripped the store at Blank by removing his goods a little at a time and storing them in Denver. Just before Christmas, both stores were practically empty, except for odds and ends of poor merchandise, showcases and many empty boxes.

On a bitter night in winter, when weather conditions would permit the firemen to work only with the greatest difficulty, Marks' store at Where suddenly burst into flames and was reduced to an ash heap before the fire fighters could even get into action. In fact, the firemen had all they could do to prevent the conflagration from spreading and perhaps destroying the whole town.

As all this happened, Marks was, of course, at Blank. He collected his insurance, weeping over the fact that it would not cover half his loss, fixed the books in his Blank store to show the disbursement of the insurance money to relatives and friends who had loaned him money on notes, and then closed the doors of the store at Blank. He had failed, he said, as a result of that calamitous fire. Stern creditors swooped down, but could find neither goods nor any fault in Marks' story.

And then this unfortunate merchant disappeared.

But two weeks later a suave and well-dressed man, giving the name of Simon Poor, rented a store on one of the principal business streets in Denver and opened up a shop which dealt in dry goods and notions. Gradually, the plausible Mr. Poor built up a credit until he owed $31,000 to easy-going jobbers in the East. Then he closed his doors and offered a settlement of about 10 cents on the dollar.

Investigators went to work with a vengeance. This sort of thing must be stopped. One of the investigators got into the confidence of a jealous relative of Poor, and learned that Poor had once been in Blank and in Where, Wyo. A hurried trip to Wyoming made it certain that Poor and Marks were the same person. The investigator said nothing, on his return, but a few nights later went to the residence of Poor with a search warrant obtained under the pretext that Poor was suspected of bootlegging.

A barricade of the stairs leading to the garret was smashed and there, safe and clean, were found

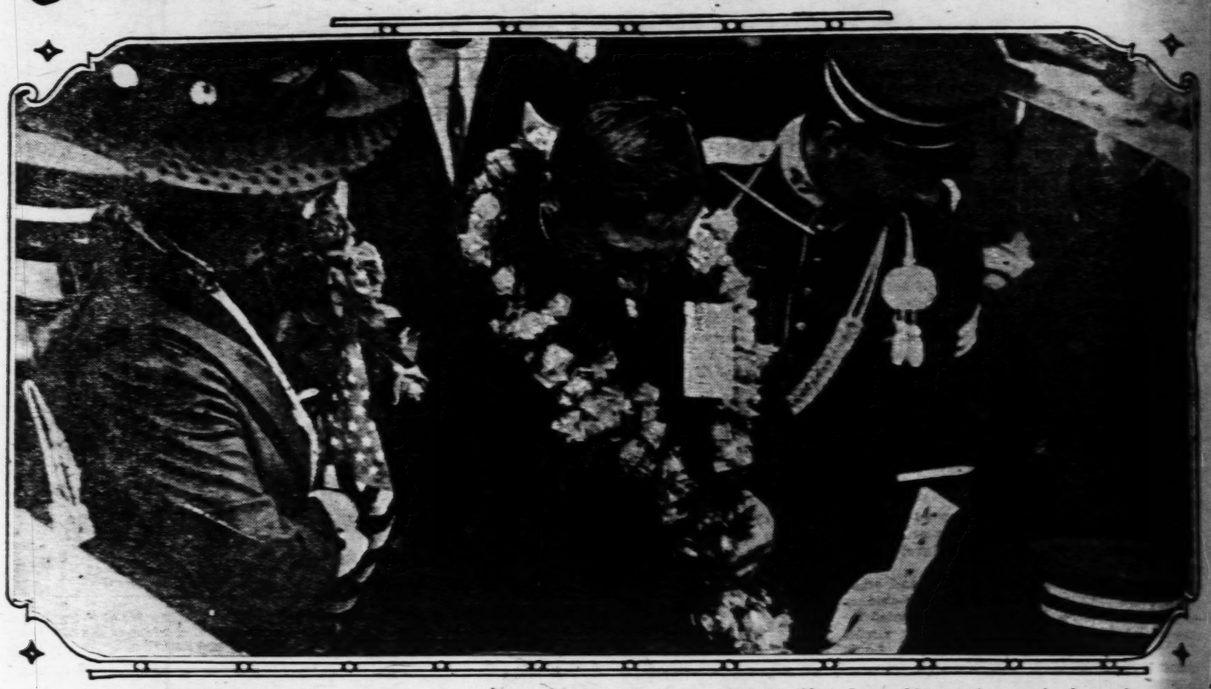
From a Very Imaginary Pole



Dr. Cook arriving in New York from Copenhagen, after announcing he had reached the North Pole. Observe the wreath of roses!
—Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

Dr. Frederick A. Cook's career as history's champion faker leads him up against a milestone he cannot face—After claiming the ascent of Mount McKinley and the attainment of the North Pole, both of which claims were proved false, the adventurous Doctor opened an oil clinic in Texas and again cashed in, finding it easy to collect from widows and orphans—Imposter who robbed the resolute Peary of much of his glory was wreathed in roses for a part of his way, but now he faces 14 years in a roseless Federal prison

"ROSES, roses all the way!" sang a British poet who himself missed most of the roses of life through certain weaknesses of character. It really does seem that if we are to keep our roses blooming all the way, we must be honest about tending the garden where we grow them.

Take, for a quite modern instance, the case of the renowned Frederick Albert Cook, M. D. Dr. Cook used to wear roses wreathed about his neck and shoulders, perfuming his puffed-out bosom—would that one might say manly bosom. He didn't deserve the roses, not even for a part of the way; and so now around his neck he wears, speaking figuratively, a halter. That halter, with tardy but inevitable Justice tugging at the loose end, is going to lead the rose-loving doctor straight through the gates of a Federal prison, wherein he is to remain unwreathed for a matter of 14 years and nine months—unless Mercy tempers Justice, or unless he dies before he attains the mature age of 73.

But in any event old Doc Cook is destined to a deathless renown. It is a renown of infamy, to be sure, but of such colossal infamy that the world cannot forget his name. There is a superabundance of evidence to support the thesis that this extraordinary individual is the most shameless faker in the annals of recorded time. As such, he is entitled to his statue in the Rogues' Gallery. Some shreds of this evidence are to be placed before you now. The verdict of guilt was returned recently by a jury in the United States Court at Fort Worth, Tex. The Judge concurred. From the bench he delivered a verbal castigation at the head of the defendant which is reasonably sure of becoming a court classic.

"Stand up, Cook!" commanded Judge John L. Killits.

Cook stood up.

"Have you anything to say?"

Cook said nothing—for once.

"So you can say nothing!" snapped the Judge. "You have come to the point where your peculiar personality fails you. You have come to a milestone in your career which you cannot face. The twentieth century should be proud of Dr. Cook. History gave us Ananias and Sapphira. They are forgotten: but we still have Dr. Cook.

"Cook, this deal of yours is so damnably rotten that it seems to me your attorneys must have been forced to hold their handkerchiefs to their noses to have represented you. It stinks to high heaven. You should not be allowed to run at large.

"I know that you have your ill-gotten goods put away, but your wife and daughter should not be allowed to touch them. You have stolen this money from widows and orphans. You should start another company and distribute it back to them.

"Oh, God! Cook, have you no decency at all? Are you not haunted at night by these pitiable figures? How can you sleep? I am not going to do justice in this case, for I think that you will get it somewhere else. You ought to be paraded as a practical warning in every state where you have sold stock."

Then Judge Killits sentenced Dr. Cook to pay a fine of $12,000 and to serve three months less than 15 years in prison.

And still Cook said nothing.

There was a time—a long, long time—when Dr. Cook was a vociferous talker and also a voluminous writer. His imagination was fertile. He envisioned great things which he had not done but pretended to have done, and he told the world about them through pen and tongue. Yes, and the world listened—and applauded. That was in the rose-time of the renowned physician, and Dr. Cook collected large fees whilst he talked and wrote. This doctor's bill against the world at large, not to speak of what he collected from those widows and orphans mentioned by Judge Killits in his later practice as a pretender, all of which in each instance he found quite easy to collect, runs up into the millions. The Government alleged that he collected about $1,600,000 from the widows and orphans and such other patients as he practiced upon when he conducted his crooked oil clinic from Fort Worth—the swift-foot career of the past three years which has run him up at last against the milestone that he cannot face.

As yet nobody has written Dr. Cook's biography save in isolated sections here and there, though the raw material is at hand for a tremendous tome telling the tales of his trickeries. He was born in a New York town in 1865. Son of a country doctor, he went through New York University and was graduated in medicine.

Cook got his medical diploma in 1890. A year later we find the young physician as surgeon aboard the ship that bore the then Lieut. Robert Edwin Peary to the Arctic in search of the North Pole.

Already, for several years, Peary, then a young civil engineer in the United States Navy, had been seeking the pole. Expedition after expedition he led into the frozen wilderness of the Arctic. It was the life dream of Peary to reach the pole; and being of a most persistent sort, he was determined to turn the dream into the deed.

The world watched and waited. Sometimes it scoffed. At other times it cheered. Always it wondered why any man should prefer the perils and the pains of ice and snow and cold salt water and subzero temperatures to the comfort of basking at the fireside glow of an easy berth in a congenial climate. But Peary never wavered in his resolution. Before him loomed ever the greatest geographical prize of 300 years of adventure. Hardy men of other nations and of his own had tried for it and failed, many of them leaving their bones to bleach on the ice floes or to disintegrate in the unplumbed, chilly depths below.

But Peary kept a-going. The Government paid him his quite modest salary as a naval officer. On that he lived and supported his family. Money was raised here and there to keep his expeditions active. Sometimes it was even more difficult to raise the funds than it was to push his stout ships through the crowding ice. No matter! The pole was Peary's goal, and so this grim crusader of our own time pushed forward, undaunted.

As a young man he was of kindly aspect, his friendliness shining through his physiognomy. But as the weary years of unrewarded effort passed, Peary's face seemed to take unto itself something of the harshness of the untracked wilds through which he strove. This gave him, in time, a somewhat forbidding aspect; and his voice likewise hardened, became snappish, so that after a score of years of being baffled and beaten back, and yet of going forward again and again, there were occasions when the explorer virtually barked his words, hurled them catapultlike against his auditors.

The man was obsessed. He would have the pole, or perish somewhere in the unknown cold spaces. Christopher Columbus encountered some difficulties in voyaging for the first time from Europe to the continent that became America, but he won out on his first try. Robert E. Peary experienced obstacles and dangers far more formidable than were those Columbus met and conquered. But he would attain the pole, and no man should rob him of its reward of honor for that achievement, since no other man on earth possessed the bulldog persistency to pursue the goal as Peary pursued it.

Then, at last, after 23 years of this unexampled devotion to a task all others had failed to accomplish, came to the comfortable world, from Indian Harbor, far up in the Arctic, on Sept. 6, 1909, this wireless message:

"Pole reached. Roosevelt safe. PEARY."

The Roosevelt was his ship. Peary had been sent on that expedition at the command of Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, who, being considerably adventurous himself, believed in Peary and had instructed the Secretary of the Navy to give him all the rope he needed.

led to the North Pole" to a Most Real Penitentiary

Dr. Cook when he appeared smilingly at Washington, early in 1916, to demand that Congress "vindicate" him in the matter of the North Pole discovery, nearly a year after Congressman Fess had presented proofs that Cook never got near the pole.

Cartoon by Harding, in the Brooklyn Eagle, late in 1909, under which ran the exclamation, "Confound that Cook!" The University of Copenhagen, after examining Dr. Cook's "proofs," was disgusted to discover that a bad egg had been served.

Judge John M. Killits, who delivered, in sentencing Dr. Cook, the most terrific verbal castigation in the history of the Federal bench.

ship's surgeon, Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who had served later as surgeon to a Belgian expedition to the Antarctic region, and who, according to his own written and published words, had been, in 1906, the first man to climb to the peak of America's highest mountain, Mount McKinley, in Alaska—that this other intrepid explorer had beaten Peary to it and "had the pole" for himself! Yes, beaten the unbaffled Peary by a whole year!

For five days and nights the wires of the world and the mapless paths of the ether had been transmitting the news that at last the North Pole had been attained—and by an American, too, thank God for that! Hurrah for Dr. Cook! Lo, the conquering hero comes! Acclaim him, all ye peoples!

Oh, those roses! On the very night that Peary's "I have the pole" message reached Copenhagen, Dr. Cook sat as honor guest at a banquet in the Danish capital, accepting all the honors that came his way. Distinguished men of art and letters and science acclaimed the successful explorer. And—a matter of authentic history—around his neck was a girdle of pink roses!

Peary's "I have the pole" message was read to the banqueters.

"I am glad," breathed the magnanimous Cook; and thereat broke out anew the applause, not for Peary, but for Cook, for the knightly gentleman, the conquering crusader, the go-getter who got there first and yet was great enough to be glad that his rival also had the pole at second hand! Ah! oh, those roses!

Ya! ho! the roses! "Roses, roses all the way"—up to a certain point. Wreathed in roses red, the conquering hero came home to the United States and proceeded to begin cashing in on his conquest of the pole. He came even to St. Louis, as some readers of this page must recall, and he was motored out Olive street to the Coliseum at the head of a long procession of lauders, with lanes of lauders whooping it up for Cook all along the route; and—another bit of authentic history—around the neck of Dr. Cook as he sat in the automobile bowing to the applauding populace was a glorious girdle of red roses. At the Coliseum he delivered, to the presence of a jammed assembly that hung upon his every word, his lecture on "The Conquest of the Pole."

Throughout America did he deliver this lecture, and later in European cities. And simultaneously was running in many newspapers his serial story of the splendid achievement, which later was remade into a big book and sold to the tune of many thousands. Cook was cashing in! The doctor's bill was being paid cheerfully. And all the time was raging throughout the world the controversy as to whether Cook or Peary had reached the pole first.

At last the facts came out of hiding. Dr. Cook, after a long delay, presented his "proofs" to the University of Copenhagen. The savants up there surveyed the evidence, scientifically, and they proved scientifically that Cook never got anywhere near the North Pole. One expert mathematician swore, incidentally, that Cook had hired him to draw up a set of latitudinal and longitudinal observations tending to prove that the doctor really got there. Negatives of photographs which Cook claimed to have taken at the pole were shown to carry a shadow that proved a sun-slant impossible at the apex of the earth.

Peary's proofs were submitted, underwent scientific scrutiny, and were allowed by various learned bodies. For instance, President Darwin of the Royal Geographical Society, at a public meeting in the Albert Hall in London, thus addressed Peary:

"I stand here tonight as the representative of the Royal Geographical Society, and armed with the full authority of its council to welcome you, Commander Peary, as the first and only human being who has ever led a party of his fellow creatures to a pole of the earth."

The Explorers' Club, of which Cook had served as president, met and rejected his claim to having scaled Mount McKinley. The club expelled Cook from membership. But Cook kept on claiming both honors, and he actually had the nerve to petition Congress to restore his "right." As late as the spring of 1915, nearly six years after the great polar fake was put over, Congressman Simeon D. Fess of Ohio found it advisable to rise in the house and deliver an address which put the quietus at last upon Cook's claims so far as concerned any official recognition.

Peary was recognized without reserve, was advanced to the rank of Rear Admiral in the navy, retired upon full pay; and when he died he was accepted throughout the world as the one and only man who had reached the North Pole. Cook, however, had taken away a lot of Peary's heart glory, and the season of the great explorer's triumph was embittered by the dispute involved.

As to the Mount McKinley matter, Cook's big book on that subject contained reproductions of photographs he claimed to have taken at the summit of the mountain, 20,390 feet above sea level. Proof was advanced that they were faked pictures; that were taken on the southeast ridge, whereas the northeast ridge was the one Cook claimed to have scaled. One picture showed a member of his party supposed to be standing on the very peak of the highest ridge, beside the American flag. "Up to the heaven-scraped granite at the top"—so ran the Cook description of the end of the climb.

The Rev. Dr. Hudson Stuck, Episcopal Archdeacon of the Yukon, did climb to the heaven-scraped granite in 1913, and his report proved that Cook didn't get there at all.

As to the pole proposition, Cook was proved by testimony of Eskimos and others to have spent the long winter prior to his announcement of success, in quarters hundreds of miles from the pole. His Eskimos said he never got out of sight of land.

Now we come to the milestone Cook cannot face. Along back in 1919 certain discoveries of oil were made in Texas. There was a grand rush. Fort Worth became the Texan oil headquarters. This place was an unpretentious town then, hardly a building that was even third cousin to a skyscraper. But skyscraping office buildings went up rapidly, being peopled by promoters of fly-by-night oil companies. That despicable riffraff of the human race which always gathers in the vicinity of a new oil development poured into Fort Worth. More than a thousand concerns claiming to be in the business of producing oil, or of dealing in oil-land leases,

Young Love and Younger Crime

By Booth Tarkington

(Fourth of the series of six short stories, each complete in itself, wherein Muriel and Renfrew appear and reappear.)

A FEW years ago an international society of scientific men assembled in Turin to read intricate essays, make technical speeches and discuss matters so perplexing to the rest of us that we do not even know the names of them.

However, there was one professor who made a speech that anybody could understand, and although what he said was horrifying, the scientific gentlemen nevertheless considered it worthy of their profound attention.

"It is necessary to recognize a fundamental truth," he said, opening his discourse on a spinal shock: "All men are naturally criminal."

Developing this theme, he went on to make the reasonable deductions. Since all men are subject alike to the criminal impulses, the only difference between actual criminals and other men is that the other men have learned to fear the consequences of following these impulses. Certainly the case of fat Master Robert Eliot would go far to incline the open-minded to vote with the professor.

At 10 years of age Robert had stopped short of murder, but only through good fortune. When little Laurence Coy one day snatched a doughnut that Robert was eating, the brick thrown by Robert at a distance of 10 feet moved Master Coy's hair with the wind of its close passing; and if Laurence had stooped an inch less, there would have been no Laurence.

But the fat boy held his course straight up the street, and the banana man, no doubt thinking him the easiest to catch, because of his fatness, followed him, bellowing.

Moreover, in snatching the doughnut, Laurence had but returned robbery for robbery. Fat Master Eliot, except when sluggish with too much eating, was the most expert food snatcher of his circle. No child with candy, even with candy partly devoured, was safe within a block of him; he robbed passing fruit wagons, grocers' wagons, ice cream carts, popcorn hoppers, peanut roasters; he had robbed a baby in a perambulator of its milk bottle.

Master Eliot's plump young face had a look of innocence; so much is certain, whether his innocence was of right or wrong, or of both; and there is no doubt that he considered anything inocent that he wished to do. Punishment failed to shake this conviction. Thus, on the whole, the adults of the neighborhood in which he lived considered him a gourmand, but not characteristically a bad boy; and the children thought of him simply as "that ole fat Robert Eliot."

There was one person in the neighborhood, however, who saw Robert in a light wholly different; and to this person's view there was a glamour about the fat boy's head. Robert had a pretty sister. On a silent August afternoon the person who saw Robert in this favorable way was walking up the shady street on which they both lived, and he was thinking of Robert's sister, who had rejected him twice that week.

He might have been more unhappy had she not also rejected him several times the week before, and somewhat frequently during the previous course of the summer; the blow was softened, in fact, by being but one of a series.

Therefore, this young Mr. Renfrew Mears was not so lost in gloom as to be unable to take note of what went on about him; and at a corner not far from his place of residence, he halted and looked back, interested in a sudden outbreak of clamors behind him. Halfway down the block a pushcart, laden with bananas and other fruit, stood deserted, for the moment, close by the gutter.

The owner, a Sicilian of ardent appearance, uproariously pursued three pillagers, the chief of them a fat boy bearing off with him a large cluster of yellow bananas.

The other boys jumped a low hedge, ran across yards and disappeared, but the fat boy held his course straight up the street; and the banana man, no doubt thinking him the easiest to catch, because of his fatness, followed him, bellowing. But the boy was as fleet as he was fat, and knew it; he was so sure of his escape, indeed, that as he ran he looked back over his shoulder, flourished the ravished bananas at their raving owner, taunted him, and called him "Wop" and "Dago."

But the fat boy should have kept his eyes ahead; for while he looked behind him, a large policeman was coming along the cross street. The fat boy ran into him at the corner. The Sicilian caught up.

The policeman shook the boy; hot invective scalded him and his ancestors; he had a sense of suffocation and beheld his future as mere chaos.

Then among the ruins of Master Eliot's young life appeared the neat figure of Mr. Renfrew Mears, but Robert regarded this advent as an additional calamity. Mr. Mears, he supposed, would be the bearer of evil tidings to the Eliot household; and the dimmed mind of the captive was but further darkened; it seemed to him dismally probable that Mr. Eliot would call at the penitentiary for the purpose of giving him a whipping. Then a dull hope began to smoke, and presently to flicker, in the breast of the fat boy. Renfrew, speaking in a low tone, was trying to open negotiations in his behalf.

The hope smoldered down and went out, for the policeman spoke loudly. "Let this here kid go, nothin'! Why, this here kid, he's got all these here rich North End kids so't they make life jest a burden to these here peddlers! This here kid, he's worse'n any kid downtown! He's on his way now, mister. Cut it out!"

"Dees keed," the Sicilian thought proper to add, "he's worse-dam stealer in a worse-dam town. I weesh to keel 'im!"

"Well, but see here a minute," Renfrew persisted. "Why, this boy's father's one of the most prominent"——

"Cut it out!" the policeman repeated. "This here push-cart man, he'll appear in court against him, won't he? Where'd I be if I didn't do my duty?"

"Oh!" said young Mr. Mears, enlightened, and took the push-cart man aside for a short private conference. A green bill passed unostentatiously from Renfrew's hand to the hand of the push-cart man, who at once became more amiable; then the policeman also had a word aside with the young gentleman, and they shook hands; after which the policeman coughed in a mollified way and allowed the hand that had shaken Renfrew's to remain closed for a moment; then he put it into his pocket and murmured affably: "Well, I reckon so."

"You come with me, Robert," said Renfrew.

Robert's dismal conclusion was that he would be handed over to his parents for punishment, that Mr. Mears would give them an account of the recent horrible affair and make a demand for money expended. Robert began to sniffle.

"What's the matter?" Renfrew inquired.

"It—it ain't right," the fat boy said, with a broken utterance. "It ain't right; that what it's the—oh!—matter."

"What isn't right?"

"Why, I wasn't doin' anything," Robert explained, miserably. "Anyways, I was'nt doin' anything more'n the rest of the boys were. If I'd gone an' sneaked off through that ole Mrs. Thompson's yard the way they did, why, all this wouldn't 'a' happened to me. It ain't right. I got to be punished an' them not, just because I kep' on down the sidewalk instead of jumpin' ole Mrs. Thompson's hedge. I'd like to know where there's any rightness about that!"

"Well, well!" Renfrew said, absently, and made

Beautify Your Skin and Complexion the Natural Way — eat Yeast Foam Tablets

Are there roses ON your cheeks or IN them?

The only real beauty of skin and complexion is that which a healthy, vigorous body reflects. With internal health there comes naturally a clear, radiant complexion and firm, fresh skin.

Most bodily ills are traceable to deficient foods and wrong eating habits; and one of the most potent correctives of such conditions is Yeast Foam Tablets.

These tablets supply a food ingredient your body needs—an ingredient, unfortunately, that most common foods entirely lack.

The addition of this vital substance may quickly balance your diet, build up and invigorate your body and put roses IN your cheeks instead of ON them!

Get Yeast Foam Tablets from your druggist. Eat them regularly for a while and see the difference they make, not only in your skin, but in your general condition.

These tablets are pure, palatable, easy to eat and they do not cause gas. They are made and guaranteed by the makers of the famous baking yeasts, Yeast Foam and Magic Yeast.

Be sure to ask for them by their full name.

Be sure to order these tablets by their full name. If your druggist can't supply you, send us $1.00 for regular bottle; satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

A veritable boon to thin, sickly, undernourished children. Yeast Foam Tablets are a pure, corrective food—not a drug or medicine. They're easy and agreeable to eat and they don't cause gas!

This yeast is a wonderful aid in building up the strength and vigor necessary for physical feats and for success in other pursuits of life. It helps your system make full use of your food.

Appetite and digestion troubles often vanish as though by magic when Yeast Foam Tablets are added to the diet. They supply a vital element which many common foods entirely lack.

Delicious Health Drink

Powdered Yeast Foam Tablets

At most soda fountains you can now get this powdered yeast on your ice cream, in malted milk drinks and other beverages. It lends a delicious, unique flavor, and, of course, it has all the tonic benefits of the regular Yeast Foam Tablet. YOUNG LOVE AND YOUNGER CRIME no further comment, not comprehending that Master Eliot was apprehensive of a punishment to come. He supposed that when Robert spoke of punishment he meant the humiliation just undergone, his seizure and exposure upon the public highway by an officer of the peace.

"If I'd sneaked into that ole Mrs. Thompson's yard," the boy continued, interrupting himself at intervals with a sob, "I wouldn't 'a' been in the fix I got in. He—he said I was worse'n the other boys. The only reason is I got caught an' they didn't!" Here he looked up at his tall companion with the watery gleam of a wretched hope. "You're goin' to tell on them, too, ain't you?"

It was unfortunate that the absent-minded Renfrew failed to note the word "too." "I didn't recognize them," he said.

"They—they ought to suffer if—if I do," Robert whimpered. "I got no more right to suffer'n they have. What business I got to stand everything and them not have anything happen to 'em at all?"

"Well, I don't know," Mr. Mears responded vaguely, not realizing that pleading and argument were being addressed to him. "I think I saw your mother shopping downtown awhile ago," he added. "But is—is your sister at home this afternoon, do you know, Robert?"

This inquiry was delivered with some hesitation, almost with timidity; but Robert was in no state of mind to comprehend any other person's state of mind.

"She ain't," said Robert. "Nobody's home: She ain't there."

"Why, yes she is!" the young man exclaimed, mildly surprised, for already they were not far from the house, and at that moment a vista through intervening shrubberies disclosed Miss Muriel Eliot in a wicker chair upon the broad veranda. "There she is now."

"Doggone it!" Robert said, thickly, and hung back.

"What did you say, Robert?"

"Never mind!" the fat boy muttered, halting outright; for the pretty white figure on the veranda was sheer doom to him, and he would advance no nearer to it of his own will.

"He said he didn't like you and he was goin' to marry you to get even!"

Renfrew made an unfortunate gesture. He had brought Robert with him lest by some chance, remote but possible, the push-cart man or the fat boy, one or the other, or both, should receive hostile demonstrations after the departure of the policeman.

Having reached the corner of the Eliots' spacious yard, Renfrew felt that his charge could be dismissed in safety; and what he had in mind to say to him was this: "Now, Robert, you're all right; so run along." At the same time, with an affectionate impulse, probably connected with his just then perceiving the graceful figure on the veranda, the young man put his hand on the fat boy's shoulder.

"Now, Robert," he said, but was unable to conclude his little speech of dismissal.

Robert really struck out against the injustice of life as he found it. Those two other boys were to suffer nothing, and he everything. They were lean boys, far better equipped for martyrdom than he. He was of a delicate surface, yet plump in every part; there was thus the more of him to be switched; each stroke would sting inches and inches of him that did not even exist upon a lean boy.

He twisted away, his resentment for wrongs endured and wrongs prospective concentrating upon young Mr. Mears. "You lea' me alone, doggone you!" he said, hoarsely.

"Why, Robert!"

"You shut up!"

"Why, Robert," Renfrew began, and stepped toward the fat boy, placatively. "Why, Robert, what"——

But Robert's emotion had reached a climax: he wept in the berserk manner that comes upon boys in extremity. "I'll show you!"

With that he stooped, found a stone the size of a walnut, threw it with all his strength at his dumfounded protector's head, squawked, scrambled over the fence, and fled among the shrubberies of his own yard, disappearing there.

"Why, what"—— said Renfrew, and stared vacantly down at the missile, which had come in sharp contact with his collar and then fallen at his feet. "Why, what in the world!"

Miss Eliot, hurriedly abandoning her book and the veranda, seemed to echo his thought. "What on earth is the matter?" she cried as she came running down to the fence.

"That's what I'm wondering!"

"But I thought I saw Robert throw a stone at you."

"I thought so, too!"

"What made him do such a thing?" she asked, much disturbed.

"I haven't an idea."

"It seemed to me," said Muriel, "that he gave a kind of scream. Then I looked up and saw him throw a stone at you and run away. He was crying. But what happened?"

"Nothing at all," said Renfrew. "We were just walking along together, and he seemed all at once to go a little crazy."

"But what made him?"

"That's what I can't understand. He just broke out without any reason at all."

"Was he playing out here?"

"No," said Renfrew. "I met him a little way down the street, and we walked along together; that was all."

"How strange!" she murmured, and her frown of perplexity deepened. "What was he doing when you met him?"

"When I met him?" Renfrew repeated, and to her surprise he looked rather embarrassed; a little additional color came into his cheeks. "Oh, nothing," he said. "Nothing at all, in fact. Ah—I believe he was playing with some other boys, but he decided to come with me."

There was a disingenuousness in his voice; his embarrassment was slight but evident, though she did not consciously think about this at the moment, being too much occupied with the problem of the strange assault itself.

"I never knew him to do anything so queer before," she said. "You say he left the other boys because he preferred to come and walk with you, and then, as you were just quietly walking along, he turned all at once into a little demon and threw a stone at you?"

"Oh, not quite that: he didn't exactly seem to be a little demon. He seemed—he seemed to be upset with me over something, but I don't know what it could have been. About the only thing I said to him was to ask him if he knew whether you were at home this afternoon. He said you weren't, and the next minute he—well, that was when he got so upset."

"I never knew him to behave so outrageously!" Muriel exclaimed. "I'll see that he's properly disciplined for it."

"Oh, I don't believe I would," said the good-natured Renfrew. "We were just walking along together, but his nerves may have been on a strain for some reason or other—you never can tell. If I were you I wouldn't say anything to your father about it, or to Robert, either."

"Indeed, I shall!"

"I don't believe I would," Renfrew urged, gently, and then abandoning the puzzle of the fat boy's outbreak as insoluble, the young man brightened with the renewal of a thought that had been in his mind before the assault. "Well," he said, "since you are at home, Muriel, would you mind if I came in for a little while?"

She shook her head. "I'm afraid I have a great many things to do."

"Couldn't you talk with me a little while first, Muriel? I wanted to tell you something I thought of after I went home last night."

But again she shook her head. "It seemed to me that you did tell me everything you could possibly think of, before you left."

"No, I didn't, Muriel," he insisted. "No, I didn't. After I went home, I decided to do something radical."

"Radical?" she laughed, incredulously.

"Yes. Do you remember the last thing I said before I went home?"

"I think so," she replied, coldly. "I think you said you intended to go away and stay until you felt differently about me."

"Yes," he acquiesced. "I told you I thought I better travel until I got so I didn't care so much about you. Well, after I went home and thought it over, I decided I wouldn't. I decided to stay and keep on feeling the way I do."

"Good gracious!" she cried. "Do you call that 'radical'?"

"Yes," he replied promptly. "Considering how I do feel, I think it was a pretty radical decision. I like you to understand how I feel, Muriel. When I look at you in that pretty dress and with that little hat over your eyes—your beautiful eyes, Muriel"——

"Good-by," she said. "I really can't hear all that again today!"

Straightway she walked decisively across the lawn and went back to her chair on the veranda, but did not sit down. Instead she stood and with a cold side glance observed the disconsolate passage of Renfrew Mears to his own house across the street.

His air was a drooping one, expressive of a gloominess which she found not at all to her taste.

"If I were a man," she thought, "I wouldn't keep poking around day after day, trying to make love to a girl who snubbed me every time she saw me. I'd do something to make her like me—I'd just carry her off her feet!"

However, Muriel did not go into details or ascribe to herself just how this was to be done; her musing skipped to the sequel, which consisted not of words, but of less-than-instantaneous imagining in pictures: a laughing cavalier leaned from a galloping horse and wafted her to his saddle-bow.

"What could have been the matter with Robert," she thought. Had Renfrew been altogether frank? Had he told her everything? She decided to search for Robert and solve the mystery. She found him hiding in the attic.

Muriel spoke sternly: "I saw you throw the stone at Mr. Mears. What did you do it for?"

"When?"

"Robert," she said, dangerously, "answer me!"

"I am answering," he responded, in a voice full with apprehension. "You lea' me alone."

"What did you do it for?"

"Well, he told you," Robert whimpered. "Didn't he?"

"No, he didn't."

"Honest?" said Robert.

"He said you and he were just walking along together, and you threw a stone at him without any reason at all. For that matter, I've already told you I saw you myself. Why did you do it?"

"Where'd he say—where'd he say I was?"

"'Where'? Don't you understand that I saw it myself? Right by our fence."

"No," said Robert, gulping painfully, "I mean before that. Where'd he say I was when——when we began to walk along together?"

"He didn't say just where. He said you were playing with some boys, but came and joined him and walked home with him."

A gleam came into the fat boy's eyes; hope touched his bosom with a new warmth. "Honest, is that all?" he asked.

"Certainly. What's that got to do with your behaving as you did?"

"Well," said Robert, and paused, tears drying as hope grew. This fat boy's mind could do only one thing at a time, and had no proper foresight.

Occupied entirely with securing his safety from moment to moment, like a mountain climber finding one foothold at a time on perilous ice, Robert merely perceived that Renfrew Mears had not yet given testimony against him, and tried to get what advantage he could out of the postponement.

He felt no gratitude to Renfrew; for his resentment had found time to crystallize, so to speak; he was now too busy to survey the facts in the case with a cool head.

"Well—it wasn't my fault," he said.

"Then what made you do such a wicked thing?"

Robert's sniffling began again, though light and not inspired by sincere feeling, for it was now a gesture to create sympathy.

"I guess you'd 'a' done just what I did if you'd been me."

"You must tell me why," Muriel insisted. "No repeating that I 'would' doesn't mean anything, and it doesn't excuse you. When papa comes"——

Stung by this ominous mention of his parent, he interrupted her loudly: "He would, too! If it'd been papa, he'd 'a' done just what I did!"

"Shame on you, Robert, to say papa would have thrown a stone at"——

"He would!" the fat boy insisted, doggedly; and then, feeling the pressure for greater plausibility, he added: "He would, if that ole Renfrew Mears had 'a' done to papa what he did to me."

"Robert!" she exclaimed. "Don't you dare to tell such stories! I saw you, and Mr. Mears didn't do anything to you at all."

IT IS curious that one of the most outstanding cases of socialized industry does not come from Germany, where various workmen's reforms were attempted many years ago, nor from the United States, where Henry Ford's system has been proclaimed of late with many a fanfare, but from industrially backward Mexico. It is equally curious that nobody in this country has heard anything about a Mexican experiment, now a proven success, but which is due largely to the modesty of its author, J. Brittingham of Gomez Palacio. His fame is known throughout Mexico, but few in the United States have ever heard of him, though he is an American.

Juan Brittingham, without any knowledge of the German theories and long before Henry Ford was heard of, established a system which has worked mutual benefit of his companies and of his employes and has cured nine-tenths of the Mexican labor difficulties as far as his factories go. It has been operating since 1898, so that in the company schools there is the third generation, and in the company offices and shops the second generation of workers and clerks.

The Mexican revolutionary leaders, even the bombastic Pancho Villa, were one in asserting that if all Mexican industries adopted Brittingham's method there would have been no revolution. Mr. Brittingham himself does not make such curious claims. He only professes to know that the system has worked, and worked well, with his industry and it is in most ways the largest and most important manufacturing industry in Mexico.

The Brittingham factories make things out of cotton seed. He operate a cotton-seed oil plant, a glycerine factory, a soap factory, one of the largest in Mexico; a lard factory and a dynamite factory, the latter capable of supplying all mines in the republic. The plants are located at Gomez Palacio, in the State of Durango, but really a suburb of Torreon, Coahuila.

The factories employ about 800 men except at rush seasons, when more than a thousand are hired. The 800 men form a workingmen's aristocracy, somewhat like similar aristocracies in industrial England. The Brittingham method has done away with the flux of labor which is its curse in Mexico. His office workers and his peons elect to remain; they do not work a week and, then take off a week. They have never struck or planned to strike. They are prosperous, and their prosperity has not made for vicious habits.

On the other hand, the employer has had no labor difficulties to contend with; he has had a steady supply of skilled workmen. The revolutionary governments have not molested him. In the battles of Torreon the factories suffered from shell fire but not at all from looting.

This was because the soldiers of Villa's army had heard of Juan Brittingham and respected him. Other factories in Mexico were burned, dynamited, looted or levied for ransom. Brittingham's factories kept in operation grinding out dynamite to blast out rocks in mines and soap to wash off Mexico's dirt.

These 800-odd men get wages about equal to similar workmen in the States. They thus get the best wages in all Mexico. They may buy their clothing and food and fuel at cost, which makes their pay go farther. Besides the company stores, there is a bank where 4 per cent on savings is paid, and each employe may borrow money without interest to buy a lot and a house. A bonus system, based on the company's earnings, was established long before bonus system became the fashion in the United States.

When a visitor is shown the Brittingham factories, particularly the Jabonero, he is loath to believe them factories at all. "Jabonero" to the folk around Torreon has come to mean something more like garden than soap factory. It is set in a grove of trees, with gardens on every side. The factory entrances are ornamental. And this in what was a desert, for the country thereabout is barren. There are more than 1600 shade trees, all irrigated. Between the rows of peons' houses are parks 400 feet in width. There are many tennis courts, two baseball diamonds of big league dimensions and each with a grand stand, and playgrounds for children. As will be seen, this equipment is not, as so often it is in American factories, more ornamental than useful. There are five baseball teams and the best of them has held the championship in the district for four years. On the tennis courts the peons, the office employes and two of Brittingham's boys, associated with their father, play together in the most natural democracy.

It is not to be supposed that the factory employes took to the Anglo-Saxon sports without some education. They, especially the peons, were of the class that was more interested in bullfights than anything else, with an occasional devotee of pelota, a native handball. Brittingham was not so foolish as to build bath tubs and tennis courts for people who did not want them. By a process of careful education, but never any forcing, he has taught the peon to like his bath tub, and, of course, the office workers were of the Mexican middle class, which is cleanly.

And this is how the love of athletics is instilled. The workmen at the Brittingham factories are paid for eight hours of work a day. But they are not allowed to work eight hours. In the summer they must spend two hours of that eight at athletic play; in the winter, an hour and a half of it at exercise. They are not forced to play tennis or baseball. But if they do not use the athletic fields they are not paid for that two hours or hour and a half.

In that way Brittingham solved the problem of health, which comes before education. His workmen exercised and they bathed. He established a hospital which now has an American physician in charge, and a graduate nurse with an assistant nurse. There is a refrigerator with always thousands of dollars' worth of serums in it. Every employe is vaccinated twice a year, and every workingman's home is fumigated twice a year. There never has been an epidemic on the place. The worst that the dread smallpox ever did was to edge in one case within the factory walls.

The plant includes a large swimming pool, concrete lined, with eight shower baths and 22 dressing rooms. And the pool is used regularly by a great majority of the employes. Each one of the workingmen's houses has running water, toilet equipment, a marvel for a laborer's home in Mexico, a laundry and a bath.

To complete the facilities for the employes themselves and their wives there is a clubhouse with a library, indoor games and a bowling alley, and there is a night school for adults.

Eight hundred Mexican workmen and clerks have a lot of children. There is no race suicide in Mexico yet. Like all Latins, the Mexican loves his children to distraction, and his children are so well bred as to pretty, respectful manners that a peon's son of 6 often would put an American boy of 9 to shame.

The institutions of Gomez Palacio include an elaborate but distinctly practical school all financed and run by Brittingham's company. There is a grammar school with six grades whose graduates get diplomas from the State of Durango after inspection by the State examiners, and they then may enter what corresponds to our high schools or go to commercial schools or to work. the company schools are paid much more than in the public schools, and, what is more, get their money when it is due. Besides the usual studies the sons and daughters of the company employes are taught English. If they are apt upon graduation the company sends them to commercial schools, where they continue the study of English. If the boys are mechanically inclined, the company sends them to a manual training school or to the machinists' school adjoining the company machine shops. The graduates of the latter may remain with the company or they may leave; often the best of them are sent by Brittingham to manufacturing plants in the states where the capacity of the Gomez graduates is appreciated.

There is a military academy, where a full course under the Mexican manual is given, including sham battles nd simple maneuvers. In the revolution the school buglers were used to instruct the rebel buglers in the regulation calls. The pupils of the military academy wear the American Boy Scouts' uniform.

There is a school of music which has turned out enough graduates to form a girls' orchestra and a boys' brass band of 39 pieces.

Then there is a domestic science school, where the little girls learn to make their own dresses and to do fancy work, for which the Mexican woman is noted.

It is all operated under a workable plan, as the third generation of the employes evidences. A more mannerly, contented, healthy and respectable class of workmen is not to be found in all Mexico. Brittingham has been careful not to carry the paternal theory to excess, to the injury of the Mexican's amour propre and distinctive individualism.

Juan Brittingham is an American. The Juan instead of John, after so many years of residence in Mexico, has become as natural to his American friends as to the Mexicans, until it has become in effect his name. But he has not failed to keep up his American citizenship from year to year, although he went to Mexico a young man, just out of college.

Brittingham is a native of Missouri. Upon a physician's advice he sought a change, and having made some Mexican friends in college at St. Louis he went to visit them at Torreon. Then there was no railroad. The young American saw the wonderful opportunities of the country and he remained and went into business, first selling machinery but always with the view of establishing some manufacturing business. The nearby cotton district of the Laguna offered the chance; nobody was doing much with cotton seed. Brittingham now owns the vast factories and controls a bank which is a clearing house between the factories and the growers. He never has operated in land, preferring to stick to his manufacturing.

"I sometimes think I am the most selfish man in Mexico. I have been so greatly repaid for my efforts in behalf of my employes," Brittingham said, recently to a friend. "It has paid me materially and in the satisfaction of helping my employes, and if I had my life to live over again I would do the same thing."

Young Love and Younger Crime

Robert returned, hard pushed. "I mean it was somep'n he said to me. If a person calls you names an' everything, it's just the same as doin' somep'n to you, isn't it?"

"Shame!" Muriel said. "To think anyone could believe that Mr. Mears called you names! If you go on making up stories"——

"I didn't!" Robert shouted. "I didn't say he called me names; I said if he did! I only said it was somep'n he said to me; I didn't say it was names."

"What did he say to you?"

"He said—he said—he said"——

"I don't think he said anything."

"He did, too!" Robert cried, and to his darkened and desperate mind there came just then a feeble gleam. "He said somep'n about you."

"I don't believe it," Muriel replied.

"He did!" And now an idea exploded in the fat boy's brain. "He said he didn't like you and he was goin' to marry you to get even!"

"What!" Muriel cried.

Robert amplified it. "He did! He said nobody else liked you, either, and he hated you so much he was goin' to marry you so he could make you do whatever he wanted to, and make you wash his clo'es. He said every word I"——

"That's enough of such nonsense!" Muriel interrupted, sharply. Yet she spoke not altogether with conviction and felt a queer disquietude. Robert made his assertion with an earnestness not far short of passion; and there was that singular scene by the fence, still fresh in her mind's eye; the boy's outburst against Renfrew without any cause—unless the cause was indeed something that Renfrew had said; and there was also Renfrew's odd embarrassment afterward.

What had he said? Robert might easily have mistaken his meaning; and no doubt whatever Renfrew said to so juvenile a listener had been intended jocularly. But she began to believe that he had said something—and probably it was not wholly unlike what the fat boy had so vehemently reported, and in atrocious taste at the best!

And even supposing that it was meant jocularly, was not her little brother right, after all, in resenting a flippant mention of her—a careless "joke" about marrying her!

For he must have said something about marrying; the child couldn't have misunderstood the word itself. Muriel was touched; she had never before thought that Robert cared for her so deeply, nor suspected him of so much chivalry.

"Don't you believe me?" he inquired, piteously.

"Let's go downstairs, dear," she said, in a gentle tone. "You must run and wash your face. We won't say any more about this—not to papa or mamma, or anybody."

As she spoke there was a brightness in her eyes and a compression about her lips. Indignation was beginning to seethe, and before Muriel and Robert had completed their descent of the attic stairway, the resentment against Renfrew Mears felt by the little brother was not comparable to that now rising within the breast of the big sister.

* * * * *

Dinner at the Eliot table that evening was unusually quiet; neither the daughter nor the son spoke, except upon occasion. Robert had a gentle air, however; his manner was deferential beyond all filial necessity; never had he looked so pure; and he was at unusual pains to eat inaudibly.

Muriel's expression, on the contrary, wore no such softness to recommend it; her eyes had the brilliancy of brooding anger, her cheeks the smoldering color that may come from a wrath that awaits its moment.

The moment arrived almost immediately after she left the table. Going out to the veranda alone, she halted abruptly, for there in the late twilight came Renfrew, just entering the gate.

"I thought maybe you wouldn't mind," he said in his apologetic way. "If I promised not to say your eyes are beautiful, could you stand me a little while, Muriel—please?"

As he finished this plaintive inquiry, his foot was on the veranda steps, to ascend; but he became motionless upon her reply, which was of a simplicity all too startlingly eloquent.

"No!"

He looked at her, passed his hand over his suddenly troubled forehead, and after a moment, asked, gravely: "Is something unusual the matter?"

"Yes!" she said, in the same manner in which she had said "No!"

"What is it?"

She came to the top of the steps, standing thus a few feet above him. "Robert told me why he did what he did this afternoon," she said. "I think he was right."

"Right?" the mystified young man echoed vaguely. "I think I've figured out why he did it, myself, though I didn't see it at the time, and if he's told you about it, there's no harm in my explaining. I suppose. He must have thought I was making him go along with me, and when I put my hand on his shoulder, he probably thought I was going to turn him over to you for punishment."

Naturally, she misunderstood. "Oh, you wanted him punished?" she cried.

"No, I didn't," poor Renfrew explained, his mystification naturally not lessened. "But I supposed his father certainly would, if he heard about it."

"Then you supposed a mistake!" she returned, quickly. "My father won't hear about it, if you care to know, but if I were you I'd consider it quite sufficient that I know about it." There was a catch in her voice that stopped her for a moment; then she said: "You asked me if I could 'stand' you for a little while, and I told you 'No.' I mean that for any little while at any time hereafter!"

"Muriel"——

"Good-by"——

"But I don't see," he began. "I don't understand. The whole thing isn't a matter to be so sensitive about."

"'Sensitive!'" she cried. "Good-by!"

"Muriel"——

"Good-by!" she said, fiercely. "I mean it!"

He looked at her, shook his head resignedly, then sighed, said, "All right," and went back across the street.

He did not quite disappear from her sight, however, for a little later, as she sat, still smoldering, in a chair on the veranda, the dusk was not too deep to reveal a pair of white flannel trousers fitfully pacing the lawn under a big walnut tree across the way. "Good-by!" she murmured, angrily. "Good-by, thank heaven!"

As she sat there, thus bitterly inimical, she took note of another figure that hovered in the dusk. This was a much smaller one, nearer her, and deporting itself peculiarly. It was that of a little boy, not so tall as Robert and incomparably slender; and he seemed strangely driven by some uneasiness in the falling night. Evidently the lady on the veranda, partly screened by the railing, was invisible to him, for it was not conceivable that he would do what he did if he knew himself under the eye of a spectator.

When Muriel first observed him he was outside the fence and seemed to be on his hands and knees, peering between the pickets. Then he rose, walked away, came back, and climbed over the fence.

Once in the yard, he approached the house on tiptoe; and then in a sudden causeless alarm he fled over the fence and down the street like a panic-stricken rabbit. Five minutes later he was back again—and once more returned.

This time he hung about in still obvious nervousness, walking up and down, but finally he halted at the gate—not, however, with a mind to open it and come in. Instead, he climbed to the top of one of the gateposts, standing thus pedestaled until Muriel perceived by the stretching of his neck in various directions, that he was trying to gain a better view of the interior of the house.

A faint light reached him here, from the open doors of the broad central hall, and she recognized him as little Laurence Coy, 9 years of age, and at times a follower of Robert's. She spoke to him.

"Laurence!" she called.

At that moment, as it happened, Laurence was standing upon one leg, for he was using the other as an outflung weight to balance him in an effort to see through a window too remote to be practicable for his purpose.

His name, called distinctly from a region he had supposed uninhabited, unnerved him quite. He immediately fell from the gatepost, and came to rest at full length upon the grass, just inside the fence. Muriel reached him before he was able to rise.

"You poor child!" she cried. "Are you hurt, Laurence?"

He moaned faintly, but got to his feet without disclosing any breakage. "No'm," he said, and turned to depart at once. "Well, good night," he said, hurriedly.

"Wait," she said, detaining him. "Were you looking for Robert?"

"No, I'm not," he said. "I wouldn't do it! I mean, no'm, I wasn't looking for Robert the last of anybody. Well, good night." He turned again to go, and again she detained him.

"Wait," she said. "Robert is in the house. Papa and mamma are talking to him now, I think, but"——

"They are?" he said, interrupting her, nervously. "Good night!"

"Wait, Laurence! He's in the library with them, I think, but if you"——

"No'm," he assured her, with increasing emphasis. "I didn't have anything on earth to do with it, and I don't want to see him, and I didn't have anything to do with it, no matter how many times he tells his papa and mamma I did!" Then edging away from her, suspiciously, he added: "That's all I was kind o' hangin' around here for."

"What was?" she asked.

"To see if he did tell his father and mother on me. Did he?"

"Well," she said, being prompted to indirectness by an increasing curiosity, "what if he did, Laurence?"

In the darkness Laurence swallowed nothing so hard that the swallowing could be heard.

"Well, if he did, and they're comin' over to our house to tell my father and mother about it," he said, "I might as well tell 'em first, because I didn't have a thing to do with the whole business, and I was just walkin' along with Robert and Tommy Clune, and they did the whole biznuss before I could say a word to stop 'em, and I didn't even get a single banana or anything. And I can prove it by Mr. Mears, because he saw the whole biznuss and knows all about it."

"About what?"

"About Robert's gettin' arrested," said Laurence, simply. "For stealin', I mean."

* * * * *

Returning for a moment to the criminological congress at Turin, the professor was, of course, either right or wrong about the natural-born criminality of all of us, and only a final item in the case here presented seems further to point toward his correctness. In supposing that his fat friend was already on trial in the library, little Laurence Coy merely anticipated the event. Ten minutes after the conclusion of Laurence's talk with the lady at the gate, he reached his own house and entered it with the serenest confidence; but the trial without jury of his fat friend was now under way.

Robert offered to cross his heart as testimony of his own innocence, reincriminated his rescuer of the afternoon, broke down under questioning, claimed to have been forced into his misdeed by those two experienced 9-year-old scoundrels, Laurence Coy and Tommy Clune, and then (though vainly) retracted his whole confession just outside the door of the starlit garage. No doubt the professor would have nodded, greatly pleased.

But it is a matter of doubt what he would say if someone maintained in his presence the view that the results of crime may be ineffable. More than that, they may be of permanent good and of enduring happiness.

For these were indeed the results of the fat boy's crimes, as Renfrew Mears was able to predict that very evening. At the end of a line of pacing that led him deep into the shadows of his back yard he turned to discover that a graceful lady had crossed the street and was awaiting him under his own walnut tree.

Then he proposed to her for the last time.

"For the last time"—but there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip, and it would be well not to miss the next story of this series, in the Post-Dispatch Magazine next Sunday.

THESE SEEDS GROW, ALTHOUGH THEY MAY BE 500 YEARS OLD.

IN THE laboratory of plant physiology, Johns Hopkins University, a Japanese student of science, Prof. Ichiro Ohga, has caused a number of lotus seeds to grow. Their age may be as great as 500 years.

The seeds were found under layers of peat, some of them 15 feet deep, in the bottom of what once was a pond on the edge of the Gobi Desert in Manchuria. Prof. Ogha's attention was attracted to the seeds by the native children of the place, who dig them out and eat them.

Dr. B. E. Livingston, professor of plant physiology, says a description of the geological formation about the place where the seeds were found indicates there is a possibility of their having been buried 500 years.

Faced Death for 30 Hours, in Submarine

they were lying beneath 40 feet of water. They could not guess whether they would come alive to the surface from such a depth.

They were certain that divers and a crane would come and raise the wreck in the hope that men might be alive in it. But it would take many hours, a day perhaps, or two days. The torpedo room might leak and fill. If it did, they would wait until the last safe moment and then try the torpedo tube. The room seemed stanch and water tight. Would it prove gas tight when the salt water reached the sulphuric acid in the battery room, next to them, and had released the deadly chlorine gas?

They resolved that at the first choking breath of chlorine they would make for the torpedo tube. But they could detect no odor of chlorine, although they guessed the salt water must by now have mingled with the sulphuric acid. They could look into the battery room. The door between had a glass window. By flashing their light into the chamber they could see that it was half full of water. Thus 45 minutes passed.

Then—a blinding flash of eerie blue light, and a frightful crash and boom. The steel vault trembled. The batteries had exploded. Salt water and sulphuric acid had engendered a fearful cloud of chlorine and hydrogen. An electric spark had detonated the hydrogen. The youths flung themselves to the door. The heavy glass pane had not been broken.

Then they saw an uncanny and marvelous spectacle. The gas continued to burn, with a strange, menacing roar and fantastic dartings of blue hydrogen flames. In the battery room, half-filled with water, the water bubbled with great emissions of gas, the gas took fire as it arose, and wild flames leaped and danced over the swirling surface of the water. Surely no stranger sight has ever been seen at the bottom of the sea.

It grew very hot in the torpedo room. The burning hydrogen emitted an intense heat and sulphuric acid mixed with water emits heat. The young men looked at each other, their faces ghastly in the blue light. They might be roasted alive. Again they thought of the torpedo tube. When it grew too hot to be borne any longer, they would shoot themselves out into the water.

The heat abated as the fire burned down until it was no more than a ghostly occasional flicker. Breault and Brown were thirsty now. There was water in a lead-lined tank in the torpedo room, but not water for drinking, and they feared lead poisoning. They had no food. The air was becoming oppressive. They had an oxygen tank with an ample supply, but they knew they must use the gas sparingly. Every discharge would increase the air pressure in the sealed chamber until the pressure would become insupportable.

They reasoned that under these conditions they would be able to hold out for 48 hours. If, at the expiration of that time, the O-5 were not raised to the surface they would chance the torpedo tube. They settled down for a long, long wait. An hour had passed since the craft had sunk. There was a clock in the room. With occasional flashes of the lamp at its face, they watched it.

But as the hours dragged by they found the slow progress of the hands agonizing and unbearable, and they ceased to look at the clock.

Three hours after the sinking, a diver came alongside the boat. They could hear him thumping around. The joyful youths seized hammers and pounded signals to the diver. Taking their posts at opposite ends of the room, so that he might know there were two, they played drumming tunes, dancing rhythms of glee, partly in expression of their feelings and partly to signal that they were in good condition.

Twelve hours after the sinking the first hoist was made. The boat rose. Then the joyous prisoners heard something snap and the O-5 settled on the bottom again. She settled on an even keel now, and the men were more comfortable. Then hour after hour passed in a long, silent, dismal succession.

The waiting men understood that some difficulty had been encountered by the rescuers, night had come upon them and they were compelled to wait until daybreak to continue. By the twentieth hour of their imprisonment Breault and Brown were in torment. The air pressure had become agonizing and their mouths were baked with thirst. The time for daybreak had passed, yet hour after hour of immobility and silence went by.

The prisoners felt that they could not endure their suffering much longer, and wondered whether, after all, they would not have to shoot themselves out of the torpedo tube. Doggedly they determined to adhere to their first plan. When the forty-eighth hour of their ordeal had passed, hosting crane or no hoisting crane, they would propel themselves like torpedoes from the sunken O-5.

During the thirty-first hour a diver was heard alongside again. Chains were attached. And now, after a first small jerk, the O-5 trembled, stirred, was lifted and moved steadily upward. Sunlight, air, the upper world! But the joy of the spirit was tempered with the aches of the flesh. The two rescued men, rejoicing at their narrow escape from death, had to endure the pangs that come to those who pass quickly from pressured air to free air. But that was a small thing, after the ghastly perils they had escaped.

From Imaginary Pole to a Real Penitentiary

were formed. Most of them were fake concerns. Hundreds of them cashed in and went out of business, leaving their victims—the unwary buyers of stock—to do all the worrying.

About three years ago who should heave in sight down there but the renowned Dr. Frederick Albert Cook of unsavory past? The doctor was not wearing roses then, but he wore his accustomed smile of confidence in his own ability to put over any scheme he might invent. He organized the Petroleum Producers' Association, of which he became sole trustee. His game was to "absorb" other oil companies that had cashed in and virtually quit. The P. P. A., as Cook's concern was known for short, absorbed more than 300 of these defunct companies. Letters were sent through the mails notifying all stockholders of the absorption. In order to keep their holdings it was necessary for them to send in more money; and thousands of the poor fish bit for the second time.

"I am off the pole and in the oil," wrote Cook to a friend, when he opened his oil clinic.

The P. P. A. pretended to own a gusher in the Smackover district in Arkansas that was producing 25,000 barrels of oil every day. In the Petrolia district in Texas another gusher of the P. P. A. people was producing 20,000 barrels a day, according to the claim. At the recent trial of Cook and 13 of his confederates, all of whom were convicted along with him, testimony of reliable oil men was to the effect that $7000 worth of oil in one year was the maximum of P. P. A. production, and that the combined production of 25 wells controlled by the Cook folks in the Smackover and the Petrolia districts was only 10 barrels a day.

People believed in Dr. Cook, it appears, despite his past record. One cannot help but wonder why. In Ohio the widow of a Civil War veteran sold the rugs off her floors and invested the proceeds, $70, in the P. P. A. proposition, on the strength of the Cook advertising. She got back in dividends exactly 60 cents. She wrote to Dr. Cook about it, saying she was in mighty hard circumstances. Dr. Cook wrote back, advising the widow to make further investments and comforting her with the thought that "every cloud has a silver lining."

At his trial the doctor affected an air as of innocence that had been imposed upon.

"You are an easy mark," suggested one of his lawyers.

"Indeed I am," admitted Dr. Cook. "I wouldn't even swindle a swindler."

"Talking Lessons" for Chimpanzees

based partly largely upon the principle of reward and punishment. The appeal to the child to learn is the inducement that success will be rewarded and failure punished. I think it probable that other very important incentives, hitherto undeveloped, could be aroused and employed, and I think a hint of the nature of those incentives may be obtained from studying the incentives to learn in the minds of apes.

"The great value of chimpanzees in experimentation lies, aside from their mental similarity to human beings, in the control to which they can be subjected. It is obviously impossible to induce human beings to submit themselves to rigid scientific control for the purpose of pedagogical experiment. Chimpanzees are more like human beings than any other animal, and they have no choice about submitting. Man is unique in the animal kingdom, in that he makes all the other animals do as he wants them to do."

Scrupulous care must be exercised in deducing the motives of animals from their behavior, however. When Dr. Yerkes got his chimpanzees he noticed that "Panzee" became incensed whenever he romped with "Chim." She would slap and bite at Dr. Yerkes until he desisted. At first he interpreted her conduct as arising from fear that her mate was being hurt, and a desire to defend him. Subsequent observation, however, has led to the conclusion that her actions were prompted by jealousy.

"Have apes demonstrated a capacity for reasoning?" Dr. Yerkes was asked.

"They have displayed a certain amount of insight. Several years ago I had considerable success in an experiment with an orang. It worked out a series of difficult problems which I contrived for it, and worked them out in a manner that plainly showed an ability to do something more than profit by experience. I expect similar results from the experiment with 'Chim,' for he is an extraordinarily intelligent ape. Just how extensive this power is we do not know, and I hope the study of these chimpanzees will throw some light on it."

It is very difficult to make a comparison between human and ape mentalities, he continued, and comparisons between mature apes and mature humans are likely to be very misleading, because each has become confirmed in the traditions of its own species, particularly the human.

While a chimpanzee certainly does not possess the ability of a 2-year-old child to express its feelings and wants, it shows a marked superiority in such respects as protecting itself from injury, getting what it wants without assistance and in its judgment of time and distance.

Returning to the major purpose of his experiment, Dr. Yerkes said:

"In our educational systems for children we have stumbled along in the dark, trying to guess our way instead of working the problem out by practical experiments. In this connection the great possibilities from the study of anthropoids have been virtually neglected. Many of the beliefs which underlie the present system could be tested by experiments with apes.

"For example, the theory of the Montessori system, that early training of the senses is essential in child education, could be very effectively tested on apes."

"Chim" and "Panzee" seem quite oblivious of the crucial part which they are playing in this solemn and significant endeavor to solve an important human problem. They romp and play in a manner that is startlingly suggestive of playful children. The writer solemnly engages, however, that if they do succeed in learning to talk they will be interviewed fully on their conclusions from the experiment, providing, of course, that the writer's "conditional reflexes" are adequate to mastery of their language.

New Tricks of "Dealers in Blazes"

all the goods from the Denver failure and some from Blank and Where.

Smith, the latest writer on this subject, declares that arson often figures in fake bankruptcy cases. To cheat his creditors the merchant must get rid of his goods somehow. To hide the goods is the simplest course, but nowadays a thorough search is made. Many crooked merchants consider it far more clever to burn out their nearly empty stores, after secreting the valuable part of the stock. In such a case the creditors seize the insurance money, but what does that matter to the thief? He has the goods. The loss simply shifts from the creditors to the insurance companies.

And there is always the old device of overinsuring. In that case the creditors get what is due them, while the merchant takes the balance, and has also the hidden merchandise. In still other cases, there are no creditors. The dishonest merchant sells goods which he has paid for, then burns out his shell of a store and clamors for his insurance.

But the individual fire setter is not as great a menace as he used to be. The big cases of commercial arson are managed nowadays by organized gangs, or arson rings, as they are called. Such cliques of fire specialists operate in all parts of the country and some gangs, including all the members, have been sent to prison through the work of West and others.

The arson ring consists of the fire insurance agent, the insurance inspector, the crooked merchant, the expert fire setter and the insurance adjuster.

The crooked merchant wants to have a fire—he needs the money. So he goes to the equally crooked agent, who writes him a policy for much more than the value of the stock. An inspector, just as crooked as the other two, goes over the property, closes his eyes to the fraud and approves the risk.

In a little while the professional arsonists appear on the scene, remove as much as they think wise of the stock, saturate the place with inflammable liquids, set a bomb of some sort and burn up the merchant's store. The merchant is always away on a short vacation when such a blaze is produced. He returns at top speed, however, when once his store is gutted, and promptly files his claim with the insurance agent.

Now comes the comedy. The crooked agent, who originally wrote the policies, sends the claim to the company with the recommendation that it be paid, as the loss is complete and the merchant a worthy man. The claim is passed to the adjuster, who makes an examination. His business is to find fraud, if any exists, but in this case he makes it his business to overlook any that he may find. He reports to the company that the fire was bona fide, that the loss is complete and that payment should be made.

The merchant gets his money promptly, and divides with the other members of the ring. Simplicity and precision are the best points about this plan. It is applied to other kinds of insurance, too.

An INNERTUBE RAINCOAT Christmas

NEW IDEA IN RAINCOATS! Genuine Innertube Raincoats Direct from Manufacturer. You save distributor, jobber and merchants' profits because you buy direct from us. This is no mail order proposition but a manufacturer's Christmas offer.

NOTE HOW THIS COAT IS MADE. The cloth is first shower proofed, then rubberized with pure rubber to avoid cracking. On this a silver lining carefully treated to avoid the coat from getting sticky, as inferior coats do. The seams in this coat are first stitched to avoid getting loose, then are cemented by hand to avoid leaking, as no RAINCOAT can be waterproofed where the stitching on the seams goes through the coat, the small needle holes are big enough to let water through from the outside to the inside. This coat is belted all around, convertible collar, the same as on highest grade gabardines. You can't buy this coat anywhere else. Imitations would cost you from $8.00 to $10.00. Manufacturer's price $3.95

A remarkably clear and graphic view of a portion of St. Louis County in the vicinity of the Sunset Hill Country Club as seen from the air. The highway running across the picture is Gravois Road. This view was snapped by a member of the United States Army Air Service.

Charles Gay of Los Angeles makes a specialty of rearing and training lions. He is here shown in a playful wrestling match with one of his forty feline pets. Before this match started he promised not to hurt the lion.

A photograph of photographers photographing the former German Crown Prince and his wife the day after his return from exile in Holland, on the grounds of Frederick William's castle at Oels, in Silesia.

This striking beauty from Athens is a sister of the secretary to the Greek legation at Washington. At her recent debut there she took the capital by storm. Her name—don't say it too fast—is Nina Diamantopoupos.

What she likes most something intimately personal showing your thought of her

WHAT pleases a girl (and what are women but girls grown up?) more than a gift that shows you know her likes and dislikes—chosen because you know it is something of which she is particularly fond?

What is dearer to a woman's heart than a gift intimately personal—to help her become more attractive—lovelier—more beautiful?

Straight from Paris—with all the rarity of atmosphere which is truly Parisian—came these ideas of beautiful gifts for women—creations of that master Frenchman, Monsieur Vivaudou.

Study this page with care. Carefully select your gift. Then go to the nearest department store—or high class drug store and ask, at the toilet goods counter, for the Vivaudou Christmas gifts you wish. All the sales people know these gifts well—and recommend them highly.

A Vivaudou Christmas gift will delight the lady of your heart and is sure to be received with keenest appreciation and gratitude.

For so small an investment, here is real value and certainty of delight and gratification for one you most wish to please.

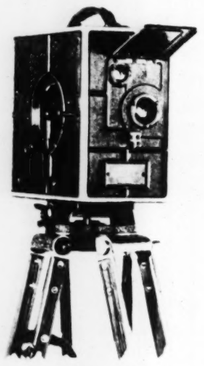
Motion Pictures the Kodak Way

CINE-KODAK, the new Eastman motion picture camera, gives you pictures in motion just as easily as your folding camera now gives you "stills." Its introduction brings cinematography to your home just as, years ago, Kodak brought photography.

Make the pictures with the Ciné-Kodak, project them in your own home with the Kodascope, and stirring moments of your favorite sport, interesting episodes of your trip, story-telling incidents of the household happen all over again.

Until now there have been outstanding obstacles to prevent general enjoyment of personal motion pictures. These handicaps, the Ciné-Kodak has definitely overcome in its major features: ease of operation and economy.



Ciné-Kodak

Takes Motion Pictures

Compact—Measures 8x4⅝x8⅝ inches. Weight 7¼ pounds.
Easy to use—Loads quickly in daylight—Rests firmly on light strong tripod—Trains easily and accurately on subject—Cranks smoothly and steadily—Photographs action continuously for four minutes without reloading.
Reliable—Produces results of the finest quality, with the certainty and ease characteristic of other Kodaks.
Economical—Reduces cost of motion pictures made with cameras using standard width film over 80%.

Ciné-Kodak is as easy to work as the ordinary folding camera and yet it produces motion pictures whose photographic quality is equal to that obtainable with professional equipment.

Due to the smaller picture area, 100 feet of Ciné-Kodak film is equal in time of projection to 250 feet of standard. Because of this and because the negative made in the Ciné-Kodak is reversed and becomes a positive for projection, the operating expense of a Ciné-Kodak is less than 20 per cent of the operating expense of an outfit using standard width film.

The development and reversal are done at the Eastman laboratories and the charge is included in the price of the film. When you have bought your film, your finishing is paid for.

Price of complete outfit—Ciné-Kodak, Kodascope, Screen, etc., $335.

Kodascope

Projects Motion Pictures

Safe—Uses only Safety film—Fulfils every safety requirement.
Easy to use—Attaches to any house circuit not over 125 volts of under 105. Threads simply—Operates quietly by motor—Focuses and frames conveniently—Rewinds quickly by hand.
Reliable—Provides constantly the full enjoyment of motion pictures, through clear, steady projection, free from annoyance or danger.
Economical—At 18 feet, throws brilliant 30x40 inch pictures on the screen, yet requires so little current that cost for electricity is approximately but 5 cents per hour.

1108 OLIVE TAXED AT BIG REDUCTION BY 'ERROR' 2 YEARS

Assessment Figure Is $71,600, but Tax Record Shows Loss on One Bill of Difference Between $1739 and $354.

GRAND JURY WILL INQUIRE INTO CASE

Property Owned by Appolonia Ghio Estate, Leased and Occupied by Goldman Bros., Who Pay Tax

One of the tax assessment reduction cases that will engage the attention of the grand jury, when the Circuit Attorney gets ready to present the facts in the city hall scandal which developed last week, will be that of the cut in the valuation of the property at 1132 Olive street, owned by the Appolonia Ghio estate, leased by the Jerome Building and Realty Co. and occupied by Goldman Bros.

The Assessor's blotter record shows a valuation of $71,600 on this property. The tax book, prepared in the Assessor's office and sent to the Comptroller, and the tax bill, also prepared in the Assessor's office and sent, through the Comptroller's office, to the Collector for collection, shows an assessment valuation of $14,580.

The tax bill, based on this reduced assessment, which amounted to $354.29 in place of the $1739.88 that should have been billed, was paid Oct. 25. The Collector and Comptroller will try, in this case, as in other cases where too small an amount has been paid, to collect the balance for the city.

Discrepancy Appears.

When a check was in progress in the Comptroller's office Wednesday night, comparing the Assessor's blotter book with the tax books and bills sent to the Comptroller, a discrepancy in the case of the Ghio property appeared.

Oscar Sessinghaus, corporation deputy in the Assessor's office, who was watching the checking-up process, said, at that point, that the Ghio case should not be set down with the other cases of deliberate alteration or possible error in copying, which had not been known previously to the Assessor's office. He said the Ghio case was an error, and that the error had come to the attention of the Assessor's office and was about to be corrected.

"A letter has been written to the Comptroller about this case," Sessinghaus said. "If the Comptroller hasn't received the letter already, he ought to get it tomorrow."

Comptroller Nolte and Deputy Comptroller Gunn said, when asked about the matter later, that they had received no letter as to the Ghio property. Sessinghaus, when asked about the matter again today, said that Joseph Weber, a clerk in the office, had called his attention to the error. He and W. F. Eiling, chief Deputy Assessor, asked one of the clerks if he had not prepared a letter for the Comptroller about the matter but the clerk could not remember it.

1922 Assessment Record.

When reference was made to the 1922 assessment records on the same property, it appeared that the tax bill for last year was based on an assessed valuation of $22,680, or $49,000 less than the valuation of $71,680 which was officially made last year, as it was this year.

In 1922, the correct figure, $71,600, appeared only on the original plat in the Assessor's office, and the incorrect figure, $22,680, was on the blotter book, as well as on the tax book sent to the Comptroller. The blotter book, which is open to the public, has not been the investigation thus far made. The 10 alterations and errors discovered in the 1923 records were in the tax books sent to the Assessor, the figures for which are supposed to be taken from the blotter book, and in the tax bills.

Assessor Buder, when asked about the "errors" of this year and last year in the Ghio case, said: "I wish I could find out who did it."

"Looks Queer," Says Merchant.

Gilbert Goldman, a member of the firm of Goldman Bros., lessees of the Ghio property who handles tax matters for the firm, said that the firm would pay the balance due the city whenever a corrected bill was received. Under the terms of the lease, the Goldman firm pays the taxes, the Jerome Building and Realty Co. being the real estate end of the Goldman company. "I pay the bills as they come," Goldman said, "and I don't know anything about the circum-
